LUNAR TAXI — This one-man rocket propulsion device, light enough and small enough to be stored in a space ship, will enable astronauts to make a quick and close examination of the moon's surface. The unit attaches to the astronaut's space suit and permits him to hover, ride, descend, rotate and make a soft landing. The mockup worn here by the mannequin is the result of a study recently completed by the Hamilton Standard Division of United Aircraft Corp., also the prime contractor of the Apollo moon suit and back pack. U.S. Astronauts May Land on Moon 18 Months Ahead of Schedule

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Two astronauts may land on the moon 18 months ahead of schedule.

This announcement was made Friday by Dr. Joseph Shea, who directs the moon program for the Manned Spacecraft Center.

Shea told about 100 delegates to the Texas Air Force Association convention that rockets and men could be ready for a manned moon flight by 1968.

Most other estimates of the moon shot date have been close to the end of the decade, the target set by the late President John F. Kennedy.

By ALVIN B. WEBB JR.

HOUSTON (UPI) — One of America's top space leaders says he is confident the nation will land men on the moon much sooner and a few billion dollars cheaper than most people think.

It should happen, says Dr. Joseph Shea, manager of the federal space agency's Apollo space craft office, by December 31, 1969.

It could happen, he hints, in the week of May 8, 1968.

Joe Shea, a crew - cut 37-year-old space expert who looks young enough to make the flight himself, took his stand Friday in the face of current estimates — some from the space agency hierarchy itself — that the earliest date possible for the first manned lunar landing would fall in late 1969.

"I get paid for being optimistic," Shea admitted to the Texas Air Force Association Convention.

But, he said, the Apollo man-to-the-moon program "right now is reasonably on schedule and reasonably on the budget.

"My judgment is that we have a much better than even chance," of landing the first two astronauts on the lunar surface well ahead of the 1970 deadline set by the late President Kennedy when he made the project a "national goal" three years ago.

He also took issue with some estimates that the project, by the time it is completed, would cost between $25 and $40 billion.

"The cost estimate now," he said, "is under $20 billion." Shea said, "the earliest practical date is 1968, the most probable date is early 1969, but if we run into troubles it could stretch out beyond 1970."

1,000 Extra Cops Patrol Playgrounds in New York

NEW YORK (UPI) — One thousand policemen began a patrol of New York's recreational areas Saturday—a week ahead of schedule — in the city's drive to halt teen-age terror.

Police also began riding the Staten Island ferry on a special around-the-clock weekend security assignment as a result of violence and vandalism that flared on a ferry boat last Saturday.

City officials, meanwhile, studied plans for a summer-time ban on beer-drinking at city beaches.

The police announced Friday that the 1,000 additional policemen and women normally assigned to beaches, parks and other recreational areas during the months of school vacation would be on patrol starting today — a week ahead of schedule. All moves were aimed at preventing outbursts of rowdyism that could turn into violence in the months ahead.

Independent Beats Shoup at State GOP Meet

By GLENN URBAN
Gazette Telegraph

A comely, blue-eyed Colorado Springs woman gave the Goldwater forces their biggest defeat of the day Saturday at the Third Congressional District Convention. She was Mrs. Kenneth (Loraine) Englert, a veteran Republican worker in the county.

The District Convention was held in two sessions at the State Assembly and Convention at the State Fair Grounds in Pueblo.

Mrs. Englert dumped veteran Republican leader Merrill Shoup son of the earlier Republican governor, in a county caucus, then made that victory stand up under an assault from Goldwater forces in the county to go on to take top vote in the district.

Mrs. Englert gathered 310 votes as a delegate from the Third Congressional District to the Republican National Conven-

Two Thirds Delegates Claimed for Goldwater

By GORDON G. GAUSS

PUEBLO (AP) — Goldwater-for-President forces lost only one of 10 candidates they supported Saturday for delegate-at-large places in Colorado's 18-member delegation to the Republican National Convention.

The lone break came when Mrs. Betty Chronic of Boulder, a former state secretary of the party who ran as a moderate, finished in seventh place during voting at the State Republican Convention.

The Goldwater-for-President organization listed Colorado's Gov. John A. Love and Sens. Peter H. Dominick and Gordon Allott on their slate but did not claim promises of support from the three.

All insisted upon running completely uncommitted but there are indications they might vote for the Arizona lawmaker as the party's presidential candidate.

Love told a reporter it was irrelevant whether be promised to support Goldwater or not, adding: "I think the ball game is over."

Dominick commented to a newsman that well over two-thirds of the Colorado delegation

Rep. Chenoweth Nominated For 12th Term

PUEBLO (AP)— Republicans in the 3rd Congressional District nominated Rep. J. Edgar Chenoweth of Trinidad Saturday for his 12th term in the national House of Representatives.

Chenoweth is 66.

Delegates from the district then got into a wrangle over the selection of its two delegates to the national GOP convention, and decided to recess their meeting until Saturday night, after the state convention ends.

U.S. Jet Reported Shot Down by Laos Commies

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unarmed U.S. jet reconniassance plane was shot down by Communist groundfire in central Laos, the government announced.

The American pilot parachuted safely and a search is under way for him.

In reporting this Saturday night, the State Department said the U.S. government now is consulting with the royal Laos government on what steps to take to protect the American picture-taking flights over the Red-conquered plaine des Jarres.

The State Department announced May 21 that unarmed U.S. reconnaissance planes were flying over central Laos at the request of neutralist Premier Souvanna Phouma.

It was explained that the flights were started to give Phouma information on disposition of Communist Pathet Lao forces which drove the neutralist government's troops from the Plaine des Jarres in an outbreak of violence which broke the Geneva agreement neutralizing Laos.

It was subsequently learned that the flights were being made by RF8 Crusaders flying in pairs from the carrier Kitty Hawk in the South China Sea off the Viet Nam coast.

The department said Saturday night the flights will continue.

The department did not disclose the name of the pilot downed by the Red forces nor did it state where the U.S. jet craft flew from.

State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey did not go into detail on the nature of the efforts to find and rescue the pilot.

Rare Typhoid Germ Traced In Aberdeen

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP—A rare type of germ is causing a typhoid epidemic in Aberdeen, Scotland U.S. Public Health Service officials said today.

The germ is so rare that doctors at the Comunicable Disease Center in Atlanta are confident it would be spotted immediately should it turn up in this country.

Health workers at ports of entry and other populated centers throughout the United States have been alerted to watch for "Phange Type 34" typhoid, the strain identified as responsible for the Aberdeen cases.

No cases of Type 34 typhoid have been reported in the United States for 18 months, so any sudden appearance of the germ here would be linked to the Scottish epidemic, doctors said.

Do-It-Yourself Rain Dance Gets Drenched

About 1,000 persons turned out Friday night with noise-makers to coax rain from the skies. A slight drizzle, that didn't dampen their enthusiasm, soon turned into a deluge.

Parched Prosser has had only one inch of rain since the first of the year compared with the normal 3½ inches.

Ike Joins GOP Drive To 'Stop Goldwater'

By WILLIAM THEIS

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower urged Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton Saturday to make himself available for the Republican presidential nomination, a Scranton aide said.

The former President, considered the only man who might be able to generate a last-gap effort to keep the nomination from conservative Sen. Barry Barry Goldwater, was also said to have voiced the hope that the GOP National Convention will "remain open."

Scranton met with Eisenhower at the latter's request Saturday morning at Ike's Gettysburg, Pa., farm. Jack Conmy, Scranton's press secretary told UPI by telephone that Eisenhower urged the governor to "stress the fact that if he believed a majority of the delegates wanted him, he would accept the nomination."

The meeting at Gettysburg came shortly before both Eisenshower and Scranton were due to come here for the national governors conference — and a possible GOP summit meeting on the presidential question.

Both Goldwater and former Vice President Richard M. Nixon accepted invitations Saturday to attend the conference. Some GOP governors, worried

'Bugging' of U.S. Embassies Charged Worst American Security Disaster

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — (Special) — The State Department is keeping from Congress and the public the most shocking part of the discovery of the hidden microphones in the U. S. embassy in Moscow.

On direct orders from Secretary Rusk, the department's security officers have clamped the lid on evidence showing that the Kremlin's deep penetration of our embassy was the worst security disaster suffered by the U. S. since the Korean War.

Their suppressed findings show that all U. S. secret codes and policy papers dealing with U. S.-Soviet relations were compromised during the past 12 years by the Russians' "bugging" of the embassy.

The full impact of this ominous security breech can only be fully comprehended, according to these State Department investigators, if one realizes that every secret decision made by President Kennedy during the 1962 Cuban missile confrontation was known by Premier Khrusachev hours, and at times days, before they were implemented or made public.

"Khrushchev didn't need a 'hot line' during the Cuban missile crisis," one security officer reported after making the investigation. "All his agents had to do was intercept the cables being sent to Ambassador Foy D. Kohler by Secretary Rusk outlining the courses of action planned by the President. Khrushchev had the key to our most sensitive codes, so all he needed was the messages. To confirm his findings, the Soviet leader could listen in on the conversations of U. S. embassy officials as relayed to the Krem-

Bradley Chosen For University Post Nomination

PUEBLO (AP)—Frank Kemp, president of the Great Western Sugar Co., and Paul Bradley, 53-year-old Colorado Springs businessman, were chosen Saturday by Colorado Republicans as their candidates for two unpaid posts as University of Colorado regents.

Kemp, now serving as a regent under appointment from Gov. John A. Love, polled 1,368 votes, Bradley 968 and Murphey 634.

Snowpack Near Normal in Colorado Area

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's remaining snow pack is near normal for this date, the final snow survey report of the season said here.

Fred Mark, state conservationist, said snow fields are gone at low elevations, but snow remains at higher levels.

He said Cameron Pass, headwaters of the Cache la Poudre River, still has 46 inches of snow containing 21.7 inches of water. Wolf Creek Pass at the headwaters of the Rio Grande still has 14.1 inches of water in its snow pack. Berthoud-Summit west of Denver on the South Platte drainage, still has 22 inches of snow on the ground.

Mark said rain, general over most of the state in late May, eased some of the demands for irrigation water and permitted some storage.

Streamflow is still expected to be deficient in the San Juan, Rio Grande and Arkansas drainages.

Tracheotomy Saves Lives, Makes Breathing Easier

(Editor's Note: This is one in a series of articles about your health which will appear regularly in the Gazette Telegraph as a public service feature.)

By THE COLORADO MEDICAL SOCIETY

The formation of a small surgical hole into the windpipe beneath the Adam's apple is an ancient operation which today has become a fairly common life-saving and life-sustaining procedure.

The operation is known as a tracheotomy or tracheostomy. To all general intents and purposes, the two Greek - based terms mean the same thing: making a hole into the trachea (windpipe) from the outside.

Although tracheotomy can be an emergency procedure —utilized when the airway is totally blocked and a person can get no air into his lungs — it is more commonly used today merely to make it easier for a patient to breathe.

The Greeks knew about the operation at least as early as 50 A.D., when it was mentioned in an ancient physician's writings. (He described the value of the operation accurately but was afraid the wound would not heal; today it is known that it heals very well.) In the Second Century, Antillus, the father of arterial surgery, discussed the operation in detail, complete with drawings.

Then, for some unknown reason, the operation was lost for nearly 1,500 years. It was rediscovered in the 1300s by physicians who lamented in their writings the loss of the ancient surgical arts. The present term for the surgery was coined in Germany in 1718, and during the 18th Century the operation was perfected almost to the point used today. For many years, before the development of antitoxin and vaccination, it was commonly used to relieve the throat obstruction often accompanying diphtheria.

Today, it is quite frequently used to aid accident victims, comatose patients, persons with obstructive throat infections, and surgical patients after certain operations on the mouth, throat or chest.

If properly done, a tracheotomy is simple, safe, easily performed and greatly beneficial to the patient in tiding him through a serious threat to his ability to breathe. The small incision heals quickly, requires no stitches to close it and usually leaves a minimal scar which scarcely can be seen.

Surgical skill and anatomical knowledge are basic to the safety of a tracheotomy since two of the major blood vessels of the neck lie at each side of the windpipe, which at this point is about three-quarters of an inch in diameter in adults and only about the size of a lead pencil in infants. The tracheotomy itself is frequently almost bloodless.

Here is what happens:

The surgeon makes a small incision in the skin over the trachea below the Adam's apple, the buldge of tissue which covers the darynx or voicebox. He may cut either across or vertically, about an inch of incision if the cut is vertical and a little longer if the cut is horizontal. There is less likelihood of bleeding with the vertical approach.

The skin is opened, and the surgeon locates the rings of the trachea. (The windpipe is composed of between 16 and 20 cartilaginous rings connected by a membrane.) A small slit now is made between or through two of these rings. Air immediately begins rushing in and out through the opening, often giving the patient immediate and dramatic relief from respiratory distress.

A short metal, plastic or nylon tube (canula) a little larger in diameter than a pencil is inserted into the opening to hold the soft tissues apart.

The upper portions of the person's airway — mouth, nose, upper throat (pharynx) and voicebox — thus are by-passed, permitting a direct route for air into the trachea and down the branching bronchi to the lungs. When the need for this direct route has passed, the canula is simply removed and the incision heals within a week or 10 days without suturing.

Old Doc Experience advises:

1. A tracheotomy is considered whenever there is a total blockage or severe obstruction in the pharynx (throat) or larynx (voicebox).

2. This sort of situation can result from a foreign body or food stuck in the throat, tumor, swelling or spasm of the vocal cords, or, most commonly, from the swelling which accompanies an infection or injury.

3. A tracheotomy also is needed in certain neurological injuries or diseases — usually resulting from head injuries — which leave the victim comatose and unable to cough to clear the normal secretions of the throat. Some nerve damage conditions leave a person unable to swallow properly, and food passes into the windpipe to block it.

4. The procedure also is employed post-operatively after certain operations in the areas of the throat, mouth or chest, as in cancer operations or surgery involving lungs, ribs or heart.

5. A tracheotomy has additional value in aiding patients with infections and obstructions in the lower respiratory tract. Thickened secretions may form in the lower trachea or the bronchial tubes, and the patient may be unable to cough them up. A suction tube can be inserted through the tracheostomy to remove the secretions and relieve the patient.

6. The prime value of tracheotomy is as an aid to breathing. The bypass which is formed short-circuits the resistance of the vocal cords, and it also reduces the amount of dead-space air — extending from the lips and nostrils down to the lower neck — which a person must move in order to get effective oxygen to his lungs. This amounts to about 150 cubic centimeters of air for each indrawn breath, and requires a wasted effort which can be highly important to an unconscious persons, one who is weakened and seriously ill, or a marginal breather.

Commencement speaker was Roderic B. Crane, the Frederick W. Kayser professor of economics and head of the department. He spoke on "The Changing Answers." Crane, who retires Aug. 31, 1964, received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree.

Some 4,236 "career service men" have received degrees from Omaha University since the bootstrap program started in 1952 with four graduates.

Questions and Answers On Alcoholism

Editors Note: As a public service, The Gazette Telegraph will answer questions on alcoholism and problem drinking in our region. Send all inquiries to this newspaper. Answers will be supplied by G. L. McDougall, Director, Alcoholism Information Center, Out West Building, sponsored by the El Paso County Council on Alcoholism Inc.

1. Q. Will the use of alcoholic beverages strengthen or weaken marriage.

A. It is very important for both husband and wife to have understood views on alcohol before marriage. Some marriages have ended in divorce because one member to the contract wanted to serve alcoholic beverages while the other did not. Some women who are opposed to any use of alcohol believe they can "reform" their men after marriage. It is a hope as dubious as it is touching.

2. Q. Will the use of alcohol in the home have any bearing on the home life

A. There are many instances in which the extensive use of alcoholic beverages have destroyed a marriage. Grounds for innumerable cases of legal separation and divorce are "habitual drunkenness," "gross and confirmed habit of intoxication," and similar ones. Associated with these are absenteeism, loss of job, inability to provide food, clothing and other necessities for the family. Alcoholism not only poses severe economic problems for the family, but also renders the husband unfit for performance of many of the essential duties that he assumed on marriage.

3. Q. Is inebriety more common among men or women.

A. There is less inebriety among women than men, however, it must be remembered that there are many "hidden" women alcoholics in the home, that are as yet undiscovered.

4. Q. Is alcoholism more prevalent in city than in rural areas:

A. Cases of alcoholism admitted from urban communities are nearly five times more frequent than those from rural areas.

5. Q. Will a limited use of alcoholic beverages lead to an excessive use of them.

A. The effect of alcohol depends, at all times, upon the concentration of alcohol in the blood. A tolerance for alcohol is not built up and increasing amounts are not necessary in order to produce a certain effect. The repeated use of alcoholic beverages however, tends to become habitual for some persons. There is a very general belief that alcohol is habit forming. This is often taken to mean that if a person drinks a cocktail today, he will want two tomorrow and that this process will continue until his tissues demand alcohol and he becomes a drunkard. Obviously, this sort of thing happens. . .to some persons, but not all. The problem of habit formation should be understood in the light of individual variation. Some persons drink moderately for years without ever feeling a need to increase the amount and with periods of abstinence that in no way causes distress. Others develop an intense desire for alcohol and keep under its influence continually.

6. Q. Why do some become excessive drinkers.

A. In those who become excessive drinkers, it is not increased tolerance that causes the increased consumption, but the continued failure of the individual to change the conditions that underlie excessive indulgence. Of course, not all persons can control or change the conditions that lead to excess. Those persons with mental disease are unable to do so. Others who have severe personality maladjustment turn to alcohol as a means of escape from their continued frustrations.

7. Q. Do all excessive drinkers have a personality problem?

A. It should not be supposed that all excessive drinkers have a personality problem. There are some who drink excessively in a matter of fact way that is customary in their occupation. No inner necessity compels them to seek escape from reality; it is the custom of the group to which they belong, that shapes their behavior. After years of this sort of life, these individuals begin to show chemical and metabalic changes in their tissues. Weakened by gross irregularities in eating, sleeping, exercise and exposure to fatigue. . .all of which characterize the poor hygiene of habitual excessive drinkers. . . they increase their consumption of alcohol as a remedy for a condition that results from alcohol. They are fully habituated to alcohol. Habit has been formed . . .and they must have it satisfied.

8. Q. Does the use of alcoholic beverages pose an economic problem for most people?

A. Alcoholic beverages are expensive luxuries. They are not essential for health and happiness. People would use their funds more sensibly if the money spent for alcohol were expended for food, housing, books, recreation and similar essentials. But there is a great difference between the "ought" and the "is." People spend their money for things that they value. If a man prefers to spend a portion of his income for alcoholic beverages rather than fine clothes, that is a choice he may make. If he is married and has children, he has now primary responsibilities that demand attention before his own needs can be satisfied. It is not his right now to spend his income for either alcoholic beverages or fine clothes, until he has fulfilled his duties to his wife and children.

Sugar Marketings Are Reported Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sugar marketings in this country are down about 17 per cent from last year.

Demand is down because many users have been turning to reserve stocks they accumulated last year when world supplies were tight and prices were advancing.

Red Canadian Flag Not To Be Seen in Quebec

By JERRY SHEEHAN

MONTREAL, Quebec (NEA) —Outside of Quebec the reaction of French-Canadian demand for change is often one of surprise. Yet, among the non-French of Montreal the mood is one of exasperation.

A vice-president of one of Canada's largest banks made no secret of his feelings. Outside the window of his skyscraper office building could be seen blue and white Quebec flags fluttering around the city. The red Canadian flag was nowhere to be seen.

On this day, 75 business firms, including his own, had been ordered by an anonymous note to change their company names to French.

"The French are Latins," said the banker. "And like all Latins they have an inferiority complex. Nobody has let them forget the beating they took by Wolfe in 1759.

"The clergy is partly to blame Even though I am English, I am Catholic. But I can tell you that the clergy for centuries ruled Quebec through fear rather than enlightenment. They convinced the poor Frenchmen that if they left the mother province they would starve. You —just hang around the farm and raise babies.

"Of course, there is a certain prejudice by some English. But there is also a lack of amibition on the part of many French.

"Well, now the French are saying they can't get anywhere in business—and now everybody is killing himself to protect his business image.

"Gad, it nauseates me how everybody's putting on hair skirts. Fifteen years ago this bank tried to get a dozen outstanding French college graduates into our executive training program. We offered them $1,000 more per year than we were paying to anyone else.

"Our two stipulations, however, were that they could not get married for at least three years and that they should serve for a time in a branch somewhere else in Canada or abroad.

"Know how many we got? Exactly three. They didn't want to leave the blooming province."

"One of those original three is still with us, making $22,000 a year.

"Since then, it has been getting easier because the kids can see the successes. These men now go into the universities and tell a prospect—in French:

"Sure, stay in the Province if you want to walk around on snowshoes all your life. But if you're smart you'll get out and do something.' "

Is there any danger of Quebec splitting from Canada?

"The French are just happy to see the English squirm a bit. The bulk of the French don't want anything serious to happen. The solid people will keep it on the rails.

"Anyway, I'm sure that Ottawa wouldn't let them secede if they wanted to. They'd push them back into the Gulf of St. Lawrence and finish the job they started in 1759. And I'm not so sure I wouldn't help them. Anyway, what would the French live on? Try to plant crops out here and you end up scratching rocks. The French would be back trapping fur and eating pemmician.

"And what would the United States do? They'd say, 'Sorry, boys, but we can't afford this soft underbelly 90 miles from Utica, N.Y.'

"Why, if you divided up the wealth around here — 50 per cent to the French and the rest split among the English, Scotch and the Jews—within 10 years we'd steal all their marbles."

Like this English - Canadian banker, many influential French executives have contempt for the idea of secession. But all recognized that it was a movement with appeal for the mass of Quebec French.

"I stopped at a rally of university students the other day," said a French investment executive "Everybody was shouting 'Separatism.'

"I asked one of them what they would do if Quebec were independent. Where would you get your oranges, wheat, gasoline and everything else? The answer was 'Quebec dollars.'

"I told him you need gold.

" 'Oh, I didn't know that,' the student said."

Another French - Canadian, an executive vice president of one of Canada's largest industrial firms, saw a trend toward more autonomy among the provinces—led by Quebec. His one fear is that the government will move to nationalize the co.-merce of the country.

Canada now approaches the 100th anniversary of its federation in 1867. And across the country deepening fractures have appeared between its many language groups, its provinces and its political parties. Unemployment and a grab-bag of economic ills beset the land. The question: can Canadians solve their problems and move into their second century as a nation?

Two Electrocuted In Chasing Rabbit

SNYDER, Colo. (UPI)— Two Mexican nationals were electrocuted Friday when they tried to chase a rabbit out of a pipe.

Authorities said Sergio Padilla, 21, and Ramon Prado, 33, had chased the rabbit into a pipe. When they lifted it to shake the rabbit out, the pipe touched a high voltage power line.

The two men were working in farm fields near Snyder, about 12 miles northeast of Fort Morgan in northeastern Colorado.

SAFETY BOOK

BOSTON (UPI)—With Bible reading outlawed in public schools, the Automobile Legal Association has come up with an idea for filling this void at the start of the school day. The association suggests the reading of passages from a good highway safety book.

"More than 40,500 Americans were killed on our highways during 1962, and young drivers accounted for far more than their share," the association said. "Who is to say that a few minutes a day devoted to solemn meditation by high school students of the concepts of safe driving would not start a lowering trend in such statistics?"

Canon City, Gunnison Firm Purchases Florence Dairy

One of the city's older business establishments, the Morning Star Dairy, has changed hands. It is the first change of ownership in the business in the past 17 years.

Owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Even since April 1, 1947, the dairy has been purchased by The Brothers Distributing Co-owend by Dick and Wayne Ruttum of Canon City and Gunnison.

According to Dick Ruttum, who will be directly in charge of Morning Star Dairy and who resides in Canon City, Brothers Distributing Co. and Monarch Dairy have purchased the business and the property of Mr. and Mrs. Even.

Richard Piercy, who has been a route man for the local dairy for the past 12 years, will remain with the firm.

At a later date, a formal open house will be held by the new owners, who will also continue to buy their raw milk from Dave Miller, local dairy producer, who has been the sole producer for Morning Star.

Ruttum explained that he will remain in charge of the local operations for the next three or four months but indicated that a resident manager will be appointed later this year.

The first dairy to bring Nordica Cottage Cheese to Colorado, Monarch Dairy will continue to feature this line and a complete line of similar dairy products, Ruttum said.

"We have come out with a new Morning Star "All Star" half-gallon carton and will feature other All Star cartons," he said. "A good portion of our business has been in frozen foods for cafes and stores."

It was also noted that Mr. and Mrs. Even will remain at the local dairy for the next 30 days to assist Ruttum in getting the business organized during the change-over period.

Even, who purchased the dairy in 1947 from Joe Zavislan, had been a partner in the Nehi Bottling Co. in Pueblo for 14 years before coming to Florence. Prior to that period he was employed by the CF&I Corp. in Pueblo.

A native of Beulah, Even has been active in the Florence Chamber of Commerce, is a member of the St. Joseph Hospital board, and a former member of the Eagles Lodge and the Lions Club.

He indicated that he and his wife will move to Pueblo later in the summer to make their home.

Ruttum and his two brothers have had considerable experience in the dairy business.

Tal and Wayne Ruttum are both graduates of South Dakota State where they majored in dairy management. Dick is a business administration graduate of Denver university class of 1955.

Tal was the first of the brothers to move to Colorado from their home in Astoria, S. D. He purchased a dairy in Salida in 1947 and now is in charge of the processing end of the business.

Wayne and Dick Ruttum started a subsidary company, the Brothers Distributing Co. in 1957 which is the sales promotion branch of Monarch All Star Dairy. The firm now operates dairies in Gunnison, Salida, Canon City and Florence.

Dick Ruttum and his wife, Jean, are the parents of three children, a son, Dane, 3; and two daughters, Lynne, 2; and Beth, 8 months. He is a member of the Canon City Lions Club and the Toastmaster's Club.

Taking Poison By Accident Kills Hundreds

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Poisonous substances, taken accidentally, kill about 1,800 people a year in the United States, statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company report.

The death rate from accidental poisoning by solids and liquids has increased in recent years from 8.2 per million population in 1958 to 9.9 in 1962.

Very young children are the most vulnerable to such accidental poisoning, the statisticians point out. The death rate from poisonings among males in 1959 - 60 increased from 14.7 per million in infancy to a peak of 57.7 at age 1. The minimum rates were recorded among children of school age.

Half of all the deaths from accidental poisoning are attributed to drugs and medicines, including the barbiturates. Among females, the barbiturates are the leading type, accounting for one fourth of all poisoning fatalities among them. This is twice the proportion among males. The ingestion of wood and denatured alcohol outranks all other types of poisons among men.

Other fairly common causes of accidental poisoning are lead and its compounds, kerosene and other petroleum products, and pesticides containing arsenic or other lethal compounds.

"There is little doubt that the loss of life from accidental poisoning can be reduced appreciably," the statisticians said. "When poisonings do occur, information on the toxic ingredients absorbed and the antidotes for them may be obtained immediately from Poison Control Centers in major cities throughout the country," they concluded.

GOP Names Two To Contest for Aspinall Seat

By GORDON G. GAUSS

PUEBLO (AP) — State Sen. Edwin S. Lamm of Grand Junction and Gordon Weller, uranium executive also from Grand Junction, were designated Friday by Republicans of Colorado's new Fourth Congressional District to contest for their party's congressional nomination.

Lamm, 47-year-old implement dealer, won high designation at the party's assembly and convention. He outpolled Weller 281-129. Eighty-two votes are required for a place on the primary ballot.

Weller carried five of the 32 counties which cast votes.

He said a primary election battle for the nomination was the healthiest thing possible for Republicans in the new district because it would best inform the voters of the record of incumbent Rep. Wayne N. Aspinall, eight-term Democratic congressman who is now chairman of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

Weller, 45, said he made no major effort to get top designation.

Weld County gave him 38 votes to 18 for Weller. Larimer County gave Lamm 43 of its 50 votes and Mesa County—where both candidates reside—gave Lamm 35 and Weller 12.

Morgan County was one of those carried by Weller. He had a 10-9 edge there. He also carried Chaffee, Delta, Lake, Park and Summit counties.

Lamm commented after the victory only that he appreciated the widespread support accorded to him.

The Fourth District was enlarged during the recent special legislative session on reapportionment, raising its population from 195,000 to 405,000. It now includes 35 counties and 65,000 square miles extending from Julesburg in the northeast to the Four Corners in the southwest.

Prof. Jess Gern of Western State College was given an unopposed designation, equivalent to nomination, for the Fourth Congressional District seat on the State Board of Education, an unpaid post. It now is held by Hugh Chastain of Durango, a Democrat who is expected to seek re-election.

The Fourth District Republicans elected two delegates to the GOP national convention, backed by Goldwater-for-president forces. They are Sam Telep of Greeley and Mrs. Marietta Benge of Grand Junction. The two were unopposed. Jackson Clark of Durango, who had indicated he might be a candidate, said he had decided instead to seek one of 10 delegate-at-large posts which will be filled at the Republican state convention and assembly Saturday.

The Fourth District Republicans chose Mrs. Jo Wright of Monte Vista and State Rep. C. P. (Doc) Lamb of Brush as their alternate delegates to the national convention. They won a three-way contest with Victor Hanson of Walden. The vote was Mrs. Wright 330, Lamb 320, Hanson 142.

Miracle Permitted Indiana Graduate To Enter AFA

Some members of the Air Force Academy Class of 1964 remark lightly that it took a miracle to get them through four years of rigorous military and academic training, but one graduate — Frank Wilson, Seymour, Ind. — feels deeply it took a miracle to get him into the Academy.

A top notch swimmer,he decided to spend some of the time in the Y pool. In an off guard moment he dove into the pool, struck the side of his head, and ruptured his eardrum — automatically disqualifying himself from Academy entrance.

An unhappy, heartbroken young man heard the Academy surgeon describe his eardrum as 85 per cent gone with no possibility of healing.

Cadet Wilson had given up a full scholarship at the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute to enter the Academy. Academy Registrar Col. V. J. O'Connor was able to have the scholarship reinstated but it did not dull the youth's desire to attend the Air Force school nor his belief that he would return.

Back home, Cadet Wilson accepted an offer to return to his old job as a life guard at a Binghampton, N. Y. city pool, despite the danger involved in getting water in the open eardrum and exposed inner ear.

On the second day back on the job he rescued a boy in danger of drowning. Cadet Wilson promptly developed a head cold. The dive into the water irritated the scar tissue. The cold congestion forced mucous into the middle ear. When the cold began to thin, the mucous spread and hardened in the exact location of the missing eardrum and in a flat, smooth surface.

The reason for the development is still unknown and almost unbelieveable, but the crust had formed and scartissue formed a new tympanic agency.

As if by a miracle, the tissue continued to expand and soon stretched across the opening.

Given a second chance, he made mighty good use of it!

After an extended vacation, the plucky graduate will fulfill a life-long ambition — he'll report to pilot training.

Ken Burrett To Spin Batons At Rose Festival

Ken Burrett, Colorado Springs' Youth Goodwill Ambassador, representative of the World Twirling Association of Southern Colorado, and double World Champion Boys Baton crown holder, will leave here Wednesday for the Rose Festival in Portland, Ore.

At the festival he will be guest performer. His trip is being sponsored by the Southgate Piano and Organ, Inc.

Mayor Harry Hoth proclaimed Burrett was Colorado Springs Goodwill Ambassador shortly after the Wasson High School senior received his world baton crown.

Jack Donin, chairman of the Rose Festival parade, has reported that arrangements have been made for Burrett to be officially greeted by Portland dignitaries. He is also scheduled to appear on television and will be interviewed by radio and press representatives.

Donin sent the message to Burrett that "We will be most happy to have you here for the celebration of this Rose Festival."

During Burrett's stay in Portland, he will be a guest at the Heathman and Hilton Hotels. He will perform during the festival and the parade at various times for three days and nights. Between performances, he is scheduled to tour the city and the festival as champion twirler and as ambassador for Colorado Springs.

Burrett won the dual titles of strutting and boys solo in Toledo, Ohio, last Aug. 22, and will relinquish them on the same date this year without defending them. He said, when giving his reason for this action, "I attained the highest award possible and now wish to devote my time to teaching and judging while giving performances for service clubs and hospitals."

He added, "I'm through with competition."

Burrett holds over 200 awards in baton twirling competition. He is now being considered for the most photogenic personality for male performers of 1964, among 12 other contestants.

He is scheduled to appear at the Rooftop Days in Estes Park and arrangements are being made for him to appear at the Colorado State Fair, Pueblo.

Bugging of Embassies U.S. Security Disaster

The security investigators found that State Department officials have only themselves to blame for the ease with which the Russians were able to penetrate the embassy.

When the present building was turned over to the U. S. authorities in 1952, the Russians retained about one-third of it for their own use. To make their action even bolder, they moved a tremendous amount of electrical equipment into "their part of the U. S. embassy."

This compromising situation, never revealed to either Congress or the public, was tolerated by such noted ambassadors as Charles E. ("Chip") Bohlen and Llewellyn Thompson until the Russians finally agreed to move out of the building in 1962.

At a cost of $150,000 to American taxpayers, the Russians then rebuilt "their" wing of the embassy building for U. S. authorities, loading it with cameras and secret listening devices, some of which are still within the walls.

Although U. S. security officers already have uncovered 65 hidden microphones, their inspection of the building is still less than 50 per cent complete. They still must take apart the ceilings and floors to make certain the Kremlin isn't still wired to the embassy.

PROTECTING THE IMAGE

The State Department's investigators stress that Secretary Rusk is suppressing their findings to protect the public images of Ambassadors Bohlen, Thompson and Kohler, the top U. S. Soviet experts whose policies have supposedly baffled the Russians the past 12 years.

"It wouldn't look very good in print if the State Department were to admit that the policies of these Soviet experts really never baffled Khrushchev, since he had full information on their recommendations," a security officer pointed out. The recommendations of these ambassadors were recorded by the Russians when they dictated to their secretaries. They were known to Khrushchev before the messages were coded and cabled to Washington."

The department's records show that the Russians let Finland bring in its own material and labor to construct its embassy, but would never grant the U. S. the same concession.

The British and French have direct-line teleprinters in their embassies, but the State Department never has been able to negotiate the same type communication concession for the U. S.

DEEP COVER

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has told Congress that "a highly important part of the Soviet bloc espionage apparatus operating against the U. S. now centers around its growing use of deep-cover espionage agents." In a report to the House Appropriations Committee, Hoover warned: "These individuals are well-trained professionals, usually operate under assumed names and cleverly fabricated documents, and are supplied with the latest scientific equipment. To identify them among the vast population of this country requires extensive investigation." He also pointed out that there are now 744 Soviet bloc officials in the U. S. with 1,099 dependents, some of whom have intelligence assignments . . . The Central Intelligence Agency is now financing the college educations of promising students in return for guarantees that they will join the agency after graduation. For further information, write your congressman or directly to CIA Director John McCone. . . The Kremlin is making a major backstage effort to get the International Petroleum Congress to switch its 1967 meeting from Mexico City to Moscow. As an inducement, Soviet officials are offering cut-rate tours of the Soviet Union, including some of its oil fields, and a promise to have a new 6,000-room hotel ready for the congress. The hotel, to be built in Moscow, will be the world's largest. So far, the oil officials have turned thumbs down on the offer.

Target date for start of the drive to raise funds for construction of the Aerospace Education Center has not been set as yet, nor has the Foundation established any financial goal, Tutt said.

He added that these targets probably will be established later this year when Air Marshall Slemon officially takes over as director of the project.

PEROXIDE AS HEALER

NEW YORK (UPI)—An old-time household first aid for wound infections, hydrogen peroxide, now is being used at a Texas medical center to accelerate healing of stubborn wounds.

The peroxide works when it is pumped through blood vessels in the area of the wound, Baylor University Medical Center physicians reported in "Medical World News," a journal for doctors. The procedure, according to the investigators, sharply increases the amount of oxygen utilized by healing tissue.

Two Thirds Delegates Claimed for Goldwater

is for Goldwater "and it seems likely the whole delegation might be for him."

Goldwater forces supported the winning candidates for six other spots on the delegation, in the First, Second and Fourth Congressional Districts. The Third District got into a hassle over its two delegates and decision was delayed until after the close of the state meeting.

Several of the delegates supported by the Goldwater backers insisted they were uncommitted or only lean toward the Arizonan.

Gov. Love topped the polling for delegates at large with 1,412 votes. He was followed by Senator Dominick with 1,396 and Senator Allott 1,362.

State Chairman Paul Wolf, who is considered leaning toward Goldwater, polled 1,287. Former congressman William S. Hill of Fort Collins, who was not even present at the convention, got 1,219.

Jackson Clark, La Plata County chairman and an avowed Goldwater supporter, received 1,006 votes. Mrs. Chronic was next with 947. She was followed by Edward Nicholson, retired Denver financier, with 909.

Paul Morris of Yuma got 900 and Mrs. Ione McMurtry of Holly received 837.

Missing spots on the convention delegation were the state vice chairman, Mrs. Betty Higby of Colorado Springs, 769; State Rep. William Griffith of Denver, avowed Scranton-for-President leader, 700; John Fleming Kelley, Denver lawyer who ran as a moderate, 514; Mrs. Terry Pasley of Arapahoe County, supported by Goldwater forces, 452; Lawrence Lamb of Pueblo, considered a Goldwater backer but not on the Goldwater slate of candidates, 372 and Candido Vielma, Greeley justice of the peace, 364.

Results of the balloting were not announced until after 6:30 p.m., when the convention had been in session more than eight hours.

During the morning the Republicans gave an unopposed designation to State Sen. Ranger Rogers of Littleton for a 10-year term on the Supreme Court. An unopposed designation is equivalent to nomination.

Named as the party's candidates for two unpaid posts as University of Colorado regents in the November election were Frank Kemp Sr., Denver sugar company official, and Paul Bradley, Colorado Springs businessman and one-time assistant football coach at the university. Dwight Murphey, Denver lawyer, also received votes enough for a place on the ballot but withdrew voluntarily to prevent a primary fight. Kemp polled 1368 votes, Bradley 968 and Murphey 634.

CC Turns Down Student Request For Mixed Visits

cases, the Board of Trustees sees no useful purpose that will be accomplished by embarking on such a course," the trustees said.

The Board, in making its decision, took note of the results at other colleges which have permitted mixed visits in student dormitory sleeping quarters.

"There is ample experience in other colleges against which to weigh the question," the Colorado College trustees said. "In adjudicating the request, the Board through a special committee has examined evidence from a national cross-section of campuses where such dormitory visitations have been permitted.

"The answer is overwhelmingly clear," the trustees said. "At no institution is there any evidence that the program has contributed in any degree to the advancement of the individual student welfare or the fundamental purposes of the college. On the contrary, the experience has been one of upest, a breakdown of student responsibility and, in some cases, tragedy."

In announcing its action, the Board observed that "ferment in a student body is a sign of a vital college campus.

"At Colorado College we have this vitality in good measure, as evidenced by an animated student newspaper, an increasingly active and inquisitive student government, and a deepening concern among our men and women about issues both within and beyond the college borders.

"Occasionally and inevitably a spirited student body will raise questions which challenge fundamental college policy," the trustees said. "The matter of mixed visits in men's dormitory bedrooms, as proposed this spring by the Associated Students, is one of these."

Colorado College never has permitted mixed visits in student dormitory bedrooms, a college spokesman said.

Ike Joins GOP Drive to Stop Goldwater

about tense feeling between party factions in the wake of primary win Tuesday, voiced hope that a summit meeting might resolve some of the bitterness.

Such a peace conference was suggested as the only realistic approach now, on grounds that Goldwater has moved so far ahead in his bid for the nomination that he is unstoppable.

But Saturday's Eisenhower-Scranton meeting indicated the possibility of a stop-Goldwater move is not yet dead.

Goldwater spokesmen here took news of the Ike-Scranton meeting in stride. Gov. Paul Fannin of Arizona told a news conference that the two Pennsylvanians are "very close friends" and it would be natural for them to meet in advance of the governors' conference. He added that Eisenhower had said he would not join a "stop Goldwater" movement and may be expected to remain neutral.

Meanwhile, another 11th hour proScranton movement budded in Washington with announcement by former GOP National Chairman Sen. Hugh Scott and Rep. Robert J. Corbett, R.Pa., of a congressional committee to push Scranton to center stage in the GOP race.

Scott and Corbett, chairman of the Pennsylvania delegation in Congress, said in a statement that "the present situation in the Republican party" jeopardizes the seats of at least 30 Republican members of Congress as well as the election chances of GOP candidates at every level of government."

Williams Powers Reelected GOP Committeeman

was backed strongly by Robert E. Lee, Denver County chairman.

The small county vote put Powers over in the hot contest. He lost Denver 94-260, was beaten in Arapahoe County 34-61, lost Weld County 12-44 and was defeated by El Paso County 47-53.

Powers took Jefferson County 90-36, Pueblo 62-33, Boulder County 49-20 Larimer County 31-19 and Mesa County 39-8.

The fight broke lines established earlier in the contest to Colorado in the Goldwater-for-President camp.

Jackson Clark, La Plata County chairman and an avowed Goldwater supporter, nominated Powers. The county gave Powers all but one of its 19 votes.

Powers, a one-time state senator, got a standing ovation when he spoke to the convention a few minutes after his election. He called for party unity. King also received a big hand when he promised party harmony and said he would support Powers.

Springs Beautiful Award Program Now Open; Sponsored by SPABA

The opening of the second annual "Colorado Springs Beautiful Award" program was announced this week by Sidney T. Guberman, president of the Springs Area Beautiful Association (SPABA).

The association, a non-profit citizens organization, is dedicated to preserving the natural and man-made beauty of the Pikes Peak Region. Last year 22 awards were made from a total of more than 200 nominations.

Again this summer, the competition is open to everyone in the Pikes Peak Region. Awards will be made in each of six categories. Nominations may be submitted by SPABA members or by any citizen. Before and after photographs may be submitted but are not necessary.

A committee of judges including landscape authorities and garden club representatives, will pick the award winners after July 15th, the closing date for nominations. Emphasis will be placed on appropriateness and beauty of landscaping, and to good outdoor housekeeping.

The winners of the 1964 awards will be guests of SPABA at luncheon Saturday Aug. 9, at which time they will be presented with suitable engraved and framed certificates. Photographs of the top entries in the several classifications will be given wide publicity.

Categories in which awards will be made include private homes, churches, neighborhood business, business, industry and institutions.

Entries will be judged on several bases, as follows;

Parking area between sidewalk and curb: observance of city ordinances; trees; suitability of choice and care, well cared for ground cover, preferably grass; skillful handling of special problems.

Neighborhood stores, churches and business buildings — appropriate identification signs; compatibility with neighborhood in appearance; use of trees and attractive ground cover in parking and on property.

Alley improvement and planting: neatness, fencing, etc.

Recognition of pleasing plantings on residential properties which are visible from the street; different sizes of gardens and plantings as well as time of establishment.

Business, industry and institutions: General attractiveness and housekeeping will be stressed. Planting of trees and shrubs in parking will be recognized. Signs, lighting, fountains and other beautification will be considered.

Four of the regions' garden clubs are represented in the Colorado Springs Beautiful award committee for the summer of 1964 according to Mrs. Oren V. Shaw, chairman of the SPABA Neighborhood committee.

Garden Club and SPABA members, to date, who have undertaken active parts in the annual civic beautification program include: Mrs. John Bonforte, Earl Bryson, Mrs. Todd Campbell, Walter Cox, Mrs. Richard Dinsmore, Mrs. John Gallagher, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Lucien Fugere, Mrs. Don Higginbotham, Mr. & Mrs. Eugene Lilly, Col. Robert Y. Mills, Mrs. Helen Rathburn, Mrs. O. Donald Olson, Thomas Richer, Dr. Gordon Riegal, Dr. H.C. Runyon, Mrs. M. F. Schafer, and Mrs. Don Wise.

Independent GOP Delegate Beats Shoup

tion in San Francisco opening July 13.

The other delegate named from the district was Robert Haver of Pueblo, who got 305 votes. A third candidate nominated was Thomas Larkin of Pueblo with 86 votes.

Mrs. Englert vowed she was an independent so far as having any affiliation with a given candidate was concerned. Haver leans toward Goldwater, he said, while he claimed that he is a conservative Republican. Larkin, in his 20s, is an avowed Goldwater fan.

Merrill Shoup last year was offered chairmanship of the Goldwater drive in Colorado and was forced to turn it down, he said, because of his health. Shoup made it known earlier this year he wanted to be a delegate to the national convention. In early conjecturing Shoup was counted as a sure Goldwater supporter.

Mrs. Englert beat Shoup in the county caucus by a narrow vote of 36 votes for herself and 33 for Shoup. With 100 delegates allowed, El Paso County in this cacus vote cast only 69 ballots, leaving 31 votes uncast. Most of the 31 votes might have gone to Shoup had they been there. This was unusual because in every other instance this year, Goldwater people have been able to flood any given meeting with their own supporters.

Mrs. Englert was nominated at the first of the two sessions, but it became apparent that Shoup had been dropped. Goldwater forces became temporarily flustered before putting on a big drive in Pueblo County to nominate Larkin.

Earlier agreement between party officials in the district had included a plan to nominate one person from El Paso County, expected to be Shoup, and one from Pueblo, expected to be Haver. The Pueblo delegation split and nominated both Larkin and Haver. A halt was called to the proceedings and the District Convention was adjourned until the State Convention had been completed.

Later in the afternoon, the El Paso County delegation, under the prodding of Goldwater forces and those committed to Shoup, went back into caucus with the aim of the defeated Goldwater people being to dump Mrs. Englert and nominate Shoup. In this caucus, Shoup had 39 votes and Mrs. Englert 31.

At the district night session the Goldwater forces attempted to have the nominations reopened. This failed. Therefore, Shoup could not be nominated. Mrs. Englert then led in the voting.

U.S. Is Credited With Preventing Cyprus Invasion

By ALEX EFTY

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP)—Relative normalcy returned to Cyprus Saturday and the Greek Cypriot government called off an emergency alert with the ebbing of the latest Turkish invasion scare.

Reports which the United States declined to confirm attributed the avoidance of a military showdown to intervention by President Johnson with Premier Ismet Inonu's government in Ankara.

Rumors that Turkey was massing armed forces for a quick invasion on behalf of the Turkish Cypriot minority led President Makarios' regime to call out nearly 30,000 Greek Cypriot homeguardsmen Friday.

The guardsmen donned uniforms, took up arms and spent the night on watch along the northern coast facing Turkey and on the borderline between the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia.

Nothing happened. The night passed without incident — even without the flurries of jittery shooting that have punctuated similar mobilizations at intervals since Christmas.

A U.N. peace force officer said the elimination of such shooting indicated the attainment of a high degree of discipline.

All the guardsmen were released from duty by noon, leaving only normal pickets to stand watch. Other islanders were already at work as usual.

A Greek Cypriot government source said precautions had to be taken following intelligence reports Turkish Cypriots had planned to launch attacks against Greek positions to coincide with attempts to land troops on the island from the Turkish mainland.

Though some nervousness was noticeable among Greeks, the possibility of help from abroad cheered the Turkish Cypriots, who have long been urging such a move to bolster their plans for partition of the island.

The U.N. Security Council is meeting in New York in mid-June to consider extending the three-month assignment of the U.N. peacekeeping force which went into operation here in March.

Charges Against Sarkisian Are Dismissed

DENVER (UPI)— A Denver importer accused of trading with Red China had charges against him dismissed Friday by U.S. Dist. Judge A. Sherman Christensen of Salt Lake City.

Christensen ruled that H. Medill Sarkisian, indicted in 1963 under the Trading with the Enemy Act, was charged under a statute and an indictment which were so vague that they encroached upon his rights.

Sarkisian was accused of purchasing and importing $21,875 worth of goods from Communist China. Christensen threw out all three counts against the importer.

Hoffa is Quoted Planning to Cut Up Pension Fund

CHICAGO (UPI) — A government witness testified Friday that one of seven persons on trial with Teamster President James R. Hoffa told him they'd be able to "cut up" a million dollar surplus in a pension fund loan between them.

William Sherman, an Atlanta restaurant manager who once managed the Fontainbleau Motor Hotel in New Orleans, owned by Zachary A. Strate Jr., testified that Strate tried to lure him into remaining with the hotel with a cut in a million dollar excess from the Teamsters unio npension fund.

Sherman said Strate told him, "with the $2.3 million I am getting to build (a restaurant on the Fontainebleau grounds) we can build the place for $1.3 and cut up the other million."

Sherman testified his reply was, "I don't care if you cut up a million a day. I want out."

Sherman told a federal court jury he had invested $100,000 in Strate's enterprises, and said Strate finally repaid him $98,000.

Hoffa, Strate and six other defendants are on trial in U.S. District Court on charges of fraudulently obtaining more than $25 million in pension fund loans and siphoning off more than $1.7 million for their own uses.

Hail Storm Damages Farms in Crook Area

CROOK, Colo. (AP) — The worst hail storm in memory of residents ripped through the Crook area Friday, ravaging crops, damaging roofs and plugging U.S. Highway 138 for a while.

Hailstones, mostly the size of peas and small marbles, piled up to eight inches deep on the heavily traveled highway in extreme northeastern Colorado. Snowplows were used to clear the route.

George Waltz, Crook resident for 45 years and operator of a service station for 28 years, said the hailstorm was "the worst I've seen."

He said the storm cut a swath about a mile and a half wide, extending three-quarters of a mile on either side of Crook.

He said more than a half-dozen farms suffered extremely heavy losses with sugar beets, corn and alfalfa crops flattened by the intense 30-minute storm that started shortly after 3 p.m.

Amputee Wins Fight To Be Truck Driver

DENVER (UPI)— An amputee's fight to drive a truck in interstate commerce has finally succeeded after more than seven years of arguing with the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Warren Winn of Aurora, Colo., and other Coloradans were in the forefront of a campaign to have rescinded an order by the ICC which banned amputees from driving trucks interstate. The order was issued seven years ago.

The ICC finally has decided to change its ruling, effective April 1. Winn lost a leg in an accident when he was 6. He has worn an artificial limb since then.

Probationary Driver Licenses For Teens Urged

Probationary driver's licenses for 16 and 17-year-old drivers have been suggested by the Rocky Mountain AAA Club as one method to cope with what is popularly called the "teen-age driving problem."

Clarence Werthan, auto club president, said that, under this proposal, the probationary license would be subject to suspension upon a lesser violation point accumulation than that for the regular driver's license.

"There's nothing new in the theory of probation," Werthan commented. "Neophytes in many areas of endeavor must go through a period of probation before they can get full acceptance." He cited as an example the probationary period for new employees, who, during the first few months on a job, can often be summarily dismissed.

The AAA club official admitted that the probationary license proposal might, in effect, temporarily make a "second class motorist" out of the very youthful drivers. But this disadvantage might be outweighed, he said, by the positive value a probationary period would hopefully have on the new driver.

Under the probationary license plan, said Werthan, the youthful driver who begins to build up a poor driving record would get called in sooner by the motor Vehicle Division and would, consequently, benefit sooner from the resulting hearing. The Division records indicate, he said, that a driver called in for a hearing is less likely to continue getting violation points than is the driver who is not called in until he has amassed the necessary points to get his license suspended.

SANTA BARBARA Calif. (AP)—An athletic burglar who scaled a seven-foot fence and forced his way into a contractor's office building got more time than money for his efforts. Police reported he took only an electric wall clock, leaving other valuable equipment untouched.

REFUGEES FLEE PAKISTAN

He said the exodus still is continuing at the rate of 4,000 persons a day.

Strange Little Organism Is Both Animal, Vegetable

By LYNN POOLE

Players of the game "Animal, Vegetable or Mineral" might be very confused to be told that the object of their guessing is, "Both animal and vegetable."

What is this object? It is a myxomycete, called myxos for short, but more often referred to as slime mold. The musical sounding Greek word myxomycete is derived from myxo, meaning slime, and mycete, meaning fungus or mold. There are at least 400 varieties of slime molds growing in all parts of the world. In fact this is the time of year to find these organisms wherever you live: and you might find it fascinating to collect the animals and watch them grow into magnificently colored plants. Following the life cycle of these amazing objects is an easy job guaranteed to give you great pleasure.

For our purpose let's call them myxos (mek-sos). Myxos start as plant spores which are wind-blown and lodge in moist areas such as the underside of a decayed log, in a rotting tree stump, underneath damp leaves on the ground, or in a compost pile. There the spores crack open anywhere from 20 minutes to 7 days, germinate and produce swarm cells that creep stealthily out into the air. Soon, whiplike hairs start moving around.

At this stage the myxos is an animal; it is protoplasm, one of the most primitive forms of life, without structure or form. Feeling its way along the dark dank environment one swarm cell finds a compatible mate. The two swarm cells sexually reproduce and become one single unit known as a zygote.

Two zygotes feed on bacteria and continue to mate with other zygotes. Finally millions of the animal forms form into a slimy, slithering, crawling, jelly - like mass. This gelatinous mass feeds on decayed materials. The food is eaten, digested and eliminated. Again the slime mold undulates forward in search of more bacterial food.

Now the slime mold is full grown and ready to rest. It crawls into a rotted log, under the bark of a moist tree, or under leaves where it remains in darkness until it is ready to seek light and continue its life cycle. When conditions are exactly right the gelatinous mass creeps out into the air. Upon reaching light and air the myxos grows into a tiny plant; some species growing on little stalks with puff-ball tops can be seen with the naked eyes, others are so small they must be found with the aid of a magnifying glass.

Late May or early June, at the end of the spring rainy season, is the time to look for myxos. Take a magnifying glass and begin the search wherever you find wet logs, piles of leaves or compost piles. Look carefully under one of these moist areas. Search long enough and you probably will find a lacy network of a gray, white or yellow jelly-like mass creeping along the dank area. This is the plasmodium stage of myxos.

Take a piece of the bark or leaves, or whatever the myxos is on. Place it on a wet kitchen tower, or any other moist paper and put it in the bottom a small jar with a lid on it. Punch a few holes in the lid and drop a few grains of oatmeal in for food. Place the jar in a dark corner and in a few days the gelatinous myxos will have grown to cover the bottom, sides and top of the jar.

After watching the jell-like mass grow and move and feed, place the jar in a sunny, warm window. Take out the wet paper and stop feeding it oatmeal. Now — watch it daily. Within a day or a week, depending on the species, little plants will appear. The animal has changed into a vegetable, a plant. Stalks, with little puff balls grow and mature. Again, depending on the species, the color will be bright.

Myxos has completed its life cycle from animal to vegetable. Break one of the fruits between your fingers and it will become a soft powder — the powder is the plant spores which will blow away, lodge in some dank place and start the cycle of myxomycete all over again.

The experience will be one of real adventure for you. Why are scientists interested For many reasons. One is the study of the genetics of the myxos, and many scientists hope that by learning more about the genetics of myxos they can learn about human genetics.

In their laboratories they study the myxos under high powered microscopes to observe the minute details of growth; they take still photographs to capture a split-second in the myxos life-cycle; with motion picture cameras they film every tiny detail of the life-cycle. While the scientists work on myxos in laboratories, you during the next few months can gain tremendous pleasure as animal changes to vegetable.

Hitchcock Reports Room Burglarized

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. A Good Patient Will Cooperate With Physician

There's more to it than just wanting to be well. If you know how to be a good patient, you can receive even better health care, get more for your money, and make your doctor's job easier.

In a new pamphlet on the subject of "How to Be a Good Patient," the American Medical Association urges that it is important to choose a family physician before illness strikes. Meet him personally, have your medical history on file in his office and schedule periodic physical examinations. Then, should illness strike, you'll know where to turn.

There is a real advantage in going to the doctor's office, rather than insisting that he come to your home. Proper examination, to help the doctor arrive at a diagnosis, can be done much better in the office, where everything is at hand to make it thorough.

In phoning the doctor, when a house call is essential, be prepared to tell him briefly all the facts in the case, the symptoms of illness, temperature and other factors. It is impossible for the doctor to carry with him all of the tools of modern medicine, but if he is told what to expect, he can bring along some of the equipment and medicines that might help in your case.

At home or in his office, tell your doctor the whole story. The uncommunicative patient merely makes it more difficult for his doctor to treat him. Have in mind the salient facts about past illnesses, operations, accidents, even when they are years in the past. Have your questions ready, too, and never hesitate to ask the doctor about anything that is puzzling you.

Most patients are embarrassed about discussing the fee when they first go to a doctor. The best thing for both the patient and the physician is to bring up the subject of fees on the first visit. No one should mind a frank discussion of charges.

The patient seeks the doctor's opinion about the state of his health, and he seeks advice on what to do about it. The time and money of both doctor and patient may be wasted if you don't follow the advice. If you decide to stop taking the prescribed pills after a day or two, or if you don't bother to have the prescription filled at all, or if you head for the golf course when the doctor ordered rest, you may be facing even more serious illness later on.

Intelligence Agency Hit in South Korea

SEOUL (UPI) — The executive council of President Park Chung Hee's Democratic Republican party urged the government here to disband South Korea's controversial Central intelligence agency.

Leftist - led students and opposition politicians have assailed the CIA as a military secret police force and a source of corruption.

The agency was founded after the 1961 military revolution by Kim Chong Pil, who resigned as chairman of the Democratic Republican party Friday because of the student riots that forced Park to proclaim martial law here this week.

A party spokesman said the executive council also urged Park to put negotiations for a settlement of differences with Japan on a non - partisan basis. Leftists in both Japan and South Korea bitterly oppose the U.S. - encouraged effort to iron out difference between the two countries.

Blue River Decision Said 'Harmonious'

DENVER (AP) — A Denver Water Board official believes a recent U.S. District Court decision on diversion of water from the Blue River has resulted in harmony between Eastern and Western Slope residents.

Glenn Saunders, Denver Water Board chief attorney, told members of the Denver Mining Club last week.

"There is no reason in the world why we should fight, but there is every reason we should get along."

Saunders noted that before the April 16 federal court decision Western Slope interests had charged for years that Denver officials were "a lot of water thieves."

But the agreement which allowed Denver to divert water from the Blue River from its Dillon Reservoir has resulted in harmonious relations, Saunders said.

Flexibility, Cooperation Emphasized

Flexibility and cooperation within the 5th Infantry Division (Mech) were two important characteristics of Exercise Desert Strike, the biggest maneuver for the Red Devils since the division was organized at Ft. Carson.

This bigness included a battle front that covered an area 100 miles by 50 miles at its peak and an exercise of greater scope and action, day and night than had ever before been encountered by the 5th Division.

The Red Diamond battle line extended 25 to 30 miles into Calonia for the second time during the major exercise.

When hostilities finally ceased the 1st Brigade had made a hasty crossing of Lake Havasu behind Parker Dam and hit the 1st Armored Division from the rear, overrunning many logistical and combat elements including hospitals and Honest John artillery battalions.

Third Brigade in the north was defending Davis Dam, a prime enemy target which the division from Carson captured early in the exercise, and was again pushing into enemy (101st Airborne Division) territory.

Division Artillery, armor and cavalry units were with the brigades. DivArty was planning nuclear attacks throughout and coping with the problems of wide dispersal of its weapons.

The scope of the action was demonstrated by 5th Administrative which had men on the front lines several times. The day before Exercise Desert Strike ended, 150 soldiers from 5th Administrative company fought as infantry-men to hold a central part of the 70-mile front under Lt. Col. Sidney Gritz, adjutant general.

This center fired an estimated 15,000 rounds of blank ammunition across the Colorado River at elements of the 101st. The 5th Administrative men were supported by a company of tanks from the 77th Armor.

Communication over the vast area and constantly shifting front lines doubled the 5th Signal Battalion's requirements and taxed signal ingenuity. Taking communications airborne via fixed wing radio relay was a special assignment for the 5th Aviation Battalion and its ASTA platoon.

Frequently this was the only means of keeping the division in touch because of line-of-sight limitations across the rugged terrain.

Like many other aspects of Exercise Desert Strike, there was more use of this aerial radio relay than in previous exercises.

Support Command activities were widely dispersed from medical to maintenance support under more difficult conditions than ever before in 5th Divisions history.

The division's flexibility under the ROAD concept was proved in the mixture of units which fought together under the two brigades. As Desert Strike ended, the 1st Brigade was directing the 12th Cavalry, 2d Battalion 10th Infantry, 1st Battalion 10th Infantry, and 2d Battalion 11th Infantry.

With the 3d Brigade were the 77th Armor, 1st Battalion 11th Infantry 1st Battalion 61st Infantry, and the composite units from 5th Administrative which fought so bravely to hold a critical river crossing point about midway between the two infantry brigades.

Once again the Red Devils proved that they were equal to any, be it armored or airborne, as their opponents.

The final chapter of Exercise Desert Strike will never be written because the valuable training and experience received during this joint training exercise will never be forgotten by those who participated.

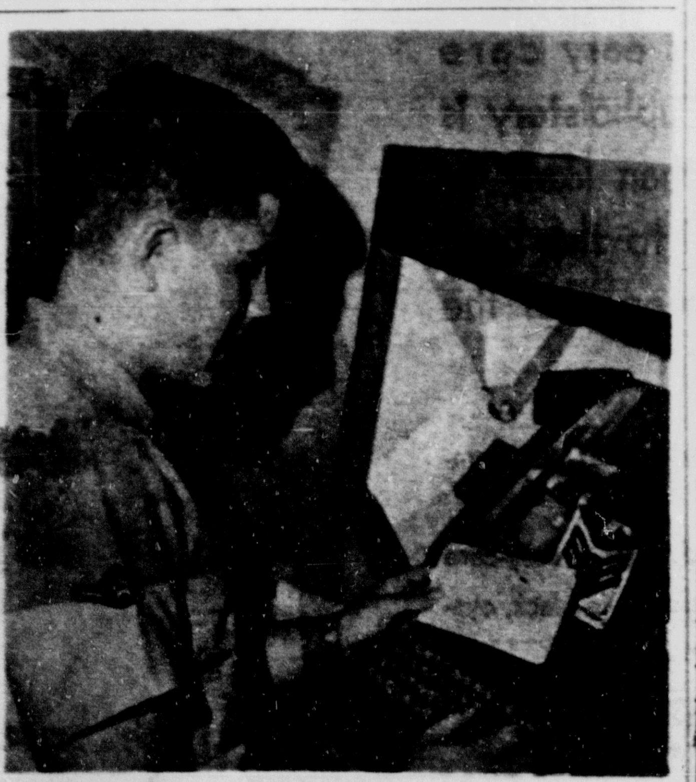
Indictment Against Sarkisian Quashed

DENVER (UPI) — U. S. Dist. Judge A. Sherman Christensen Friday dismissed a 1963 indictment against Denver importer H. Medill Sarkisian under the Trading with the Enemy Act.

Christensen, of Salt Lake City, Utah, ruled that the statute, regulations and the language of the indictment itself were so vague as to encroach upon Sarkisian's rights.

Sarkisian had been accused of purchasing and importing $21,875 worth of goods from Communist China, which is against the law under the act.

There were three counts under the indictment and the judge threw out all three.



TWO FOR ONE — Airman Walter Crawford doesn't mind adding another stripe to his sleeve. Crawford, who is a records specialist in the 9th Aerospace Defense Division's personnel section was recently promoted to the grade of Airman Second Class.

Soot Particles Are Blamed for Cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reduction in the size of soot particles in the atmosphere—due to changes in soft coal use—might partially explain sharp decreases in human stomach cancer and concurrent increases in lung cancer, two researchers theorized Friday.

The Georgetown University Medical School team further speculated that these smaller soot particles tend to concentrate more readily in the lungs than in the stomach—with a resultant greater chance of promoting lung cancer.

Reduced use of soft coal by homes and railroads since the 1930s—and more efficient burning of it in electric power plants—would tend to make the atmosphere's content of soot particles predominantly of the smaller type, they added.

The report, concededly speculative, was made by Dr. Robert J. Coffey, chairman of the school's Department of Surgery, and by Marvin D. Anderson, a fourth year medical student. They made the report in the university's "Medical Bulletin" journal.

DU Graduate Schools Receive Training Grants

The University of Denver Graduate School of Social Work and the Department of Psychology have received grants totalling over $230,000 for various programs for the 1964-65 academic year, Chancellor Chester M. Alter has announced.

The grants were awarded by the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) of the Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Seven DU graduate students in development psychology will receive training grants totalling $45,867. Four doctor of philosophy candidates and three master of arts candidates will receive tuition and stipends under the grant, Dr. Kenneth B. Little, psychology department chairman, said.

In the area of psychiatric social work, $102,975 was awarded for 20 student trainee scholarships. A total of $28,643 was granted for one full time faculty member salary and five student traineeships in the area of corrections.

A grant of $52,696 was given to the graduate school for preparing students for social work in public schools. The money will provide the salary for one half time field work instructor in the Denver Public Schools and for nine student traineeships.

Dr. E. M. Sunley, director of the DU Graduate School of Social Work, explaied that the large NIMH grants will expand the school's facilities and help provide more personnel in these critical areas of the field.

Dr. Little said the psychology grant will help the department improve and enlarge the graduate program.

The two grants are in addition to over $70,000 awarded to the university in other NIMH grants earlier this year.

TURNABOUT

NEW YORK (AP) — The professors at New York University Faculty Club turned the tables on Mrs. Bertha Guenzel, their waitress for more than three decades.

The 63-year-old woman was honored at a "Bertha's Day" luncheon at the club by past and present members of the faculty. Asked to work during the lunch hour on the Washington Square campus one day in 1931, she was urged the next day to stay for dinner also. She stayed—for nearly 34 years.

Swedes Do Not Want Visiting by Nikita

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—A group describing itself as the June Committee has begun a campaign against Soviet Premier Khrushchev's visit later this month.

The committee describes the impending visit as a "violation of Swedish freedom" and says it will send an open letter to Khrushchev asking "what practical purposes he thinks will be achieved with his visit that costs the Swedish people $800,000?"

The committee also says it will hold nationwide protest meetings but plans no violence. Its chairman is Birger Nerman, a prominent Swedish historian.

A similar group five years ago protested a scheduled visit by Khrushchev and the trip was canceled.

Mining Industry Memorial Institute Due for Leadville

A mining industry headquarters program will be launched at Leadville Wednesday when a memorial will be dedicated at one of its best known mines of the Silver Boom Days of the last century. Near the spot will be erected a mining institute.

Harve Presnell, co-star of the Metro-Goldwyn - Maryer musical film "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" that will have its world premiere in Denver Thursday, will place a plaque honoring mining and miners on the Little Jonny (Co.) mine site.

In the picture he portrays James J. Brown who, just 70 years ago, discovered gold in the Little Jonny's silver ore. This enabled the mine to continue operating, saving Leadville's economy, when most other mines closed after the silver panic of 1893.

The mining institute will be called the Minerals Industry Center. Although it will include a national Mining Hall of Fame, it will be a working establishment rather than a museum. There will be educational, promotional and research departments for inter-company work of the industry and for public service.

A financing campaign for $1 million has been started for the construction of the core building of the center complex that ultimately will cost about $5 million. The Cummerford Corp. of Kansas City, Mo., fund-raising consultants, is to conduct the drive.

The center is to be located in a panorama of mining, among the many rich mines on Fryer and Carbonate hills from which came most of the nearly $1 billion in mineral wealth produced in the Lake County mining district.

The most famous shafts are to be identified and marked, and the Little Jonny is the first to get a plaque.

The dedication of the memorial will be on the 80th anniversary of Margaret Tobin's arrival in Leadville in 1884. The daughter of a Hannibal, Mo., laborer, she clerked in a Leadville store where she met Jim Brown and in 1886 they were married, when he was 30 years old and she was 19.

When the Little Jonny produced their fortune she wanted social position and she tried to enter the Denver cicle of Colorado's leading families.

She was snubbed, scorned and ridiculed. Molly Brown went to Europe later, to broaden her scant education, particularly on the cultural side. On her return she settled in Newport, R.I., where she was accepted by Eastern society.

On another European trip in 1913 she booked passage home on the S.S. Titanic, which sank in mid-Atlantic with the loss of 1,500 lives. She emerged from the disaster a heroine and when she quipped to reporters that in the lifeboat she had felt unsinkable, she became from then on "The Unsinkable Molly Brown."

Local Resident To Visit Britain During Summer

Leslie Pearce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Pearce, 505 Penrose Blvd., will visit Great Britain as a participant this summer in the summer program of the Experiment in International Living. She will leave June 26 and return to the U.S. Aug. 17.

The Experiment in International Living is an independent, nonprofit organization in the field of International education which helps to promote international understanding by a person - to - person approach.

Since its founding in 1932 by Donald B. Watt, the experiment has sent more than 15,500 Americans abroad to learn how peoples of other countries think, act, and live. This year, some 2,000 will travel to 35 countries on five continents. Each of these experimenters will live for a month as a member of a foreign family and will spend another month traveling about the country visited.

Experimenters travel in groups of about 10, under the guidance of mature leaders specially selected and trained by the experiment. Before they are admitted to the program, every effort is made to assure that Experimenters are worthy representatives of the United States.

Members receive special instruction on the language, customs, history and culture of the country they will visit. After the homestay, they travel as a group, generally in the company of young members of their host families. Toward the close of the program, experimemters include a visit to a major city and an opportunity (for those who qualify) for a few days of independent travel.

The experiment administers three basic outbound programs (U.S. to other countries): regular groups; the experiment ambassador program (through which communities and colleges raise funds to send select young people abroad as their representatives); and various cooperative overseas programs with academic institutions. During 1964 the experiment program will extend into all the major nations of Western Europe, and to countries in Africa, Asia, Latin America, and the Middle East.

The experiment also administers three incoming programs (other countries to the U.S.): regular groups, ambassadors, and individual homestay placements for students coming here to study. During 1964 some 2,200 experimenters from 75 countries will visit the United States on these programs. In addition to family living and travel, many of the incoming experiment groups will also spend two weeks at a college or camp.

Man Booked for Malicious Mischief

Larry Kopetsky, 19, 56 El Paso Blvd. was booked into County Jail Saturday afternoon for investigation of malicious mischief, the sheriff's department reported.

According to Deputy Sheriffs Vincent Denboske and Larry Holien, a former girl friend of Kopetsky's was driving up the Ute Pass after a dance. She was alone and spotted Kopetsky's car.

He followed her and cut her off, blocking her road. The man then tried to get into the car but the girl kept it locked. Finally he smashed the window and let himself in. The girl said that she was afraid of him but at no time did he threaten or strike her.

Colorful Floats Major Attraction In '64 Pageant Parade of Rockies

The 24th annual rodeo parade, "the Pageant Parade of the Rockies" will be the best yet, and is well on its way to be one of the top summer attractions in the west, Verne Johnson, parade coordinator, said recently.

"Unlike the parades in the past, this year's event, to be held Aug. 6, is being developed into an event that will match the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo in prestige. In fact with new parade rules only selected floats, equestrian units, bands and marching elements will be entered into the parade," said Johnson.

Speaking for the float committee, Johnson reminded prospective float entries that June 15 is the deadline for submitting float sketches to the Chamber of Commerce. "So far, 15 floats have been entered into the parade," said Johnson. They include — Holly Sugar Corp., the Board of Realtors, Flying "W" Ranch, Naval Forces of NORAD, Ft. Carson, Ent Air Force Base, Air Defense Command, Chamber of Commerce, Broadmoor Hotel, Banks of Colorado Springs Clearing House Association, Rotary Clubs of Colorado Springs, Girl Scouts, and the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The Air Force Academy, the American Legion and Coors Beer Distributor are other possible entries, according to Johnson.

"Westward Ho!" is this year's parade theme. All floats must conform to this theme which depicts the development and progress of the West from the 1800s to the present. The Parade's Float Committee offer these suggestions to possible late entries — historical events, pioneers, cowboys and Indians, and scenes showing the natural resources and wonders of the West.

Since the Parade has been elevated in status, float entries must meet certain standards.

"After all if the 'Pageant Parade of the Rockies' is to compare with other top national parades we must set our standards high. In time we hope to have float and marching entries not only from the Pikes Peak region, but from Colorado throughout, and other western states," related Johnson.

A colored sketch of the proposed float must be submitted by June 15 for parade approval. The dimensions of the float shall not exceed 40 feet in length and a width of 20 feet. However the float committee will approve an excess of the length if sponsor can show cause.

The committee stresses that any variation made to the float after parade acceptance must be reapproved.

Not only must the float be decorated in color crepe paper, but must have aprons around the float to hide the wheels. Each float must also have a readable title which should explain the theme.

Towing vehicles, except for an open convertible automobile, should be decorated similarly to the float. This regulation also specifies all float riders including the drivers of towing vehicles must be in costume. All self - powered floats must be equipped with a towing bar or chain.

Adequate vision for the driver of self - powered floats must be provided.

Because of the ever present possibility of fire, a dry carbon chemical or carbon dioxide fire extinguisher must be provided to every driver. For safety reasons, gasoline fill pipes on self-powered floats must have a vented cap — painted red. An exhaust extension shall be placed on these floats to prevent carbon monoxide collection under the platform.

According to Ed Bever, float committee chairman, "These rules have good reasons behind them. The limited dimensions are set as a result of obstacles and turns along the parade route.

As for mechanical conditions, it's going to be a long parade and the heavy floats will be pulled or driven at slow speeds. When hours of labor are devoted to decorating it is most disappointing to have the entry break down while in the line of march.

He was a member of Tejon Lodge No. 104, AF&AM; Colorado Consistory No. 1; Plumbers and Pipefitters Local No. 58, and the El Paso County Pioneers Assn.

Ute Pass Angel of Mercy 'Al' Burns Ill; Needs Help

There used to always be one person to whom people in Teller County could turn to in time of need.

That was Alverta Burns, known throughout the state as the "Shepherd of the Hills." But for the past few months, "Al," as she is more affectionally known, hasn't been available for the frantic calls for help she had grown used to over the years.

"Al" is in a local hospital where she has been a heart patient for the past couple months. On Wednesday, she will undergo open heart surgery in an attempt to prolong, or perhaps even save, her life.

The 50-year old registered nurse became a national figure in the summer of 1956 when an article appeared in the Saturday Evening Post telling of her ministering to the ills of the county's scattered residents.

But it didn't take nation-wide publicity to tell the residents of Teller County about her tireless devotion to her calling: they know by the thousands up around the Ute Pass area, for countless many have felt her merciful hand when a sudden illness struck or a lingering disability sometimes became almost too much to bear.

"Al" was always on the ready when her telephone rang, sounding the alarm that quick medical attention was needed by someone. In the past two decades, there are few people in Teller County who have not been helped in some way by this remarkable woman.

Mrs. Burns and her husband "Bud" are operators of the Triple B guest ranch in Woodland Park. They have three children of their own but have raised as their own several other youngsters who otherwise would not have had particularly good starts in life.

Mrs. Burns was born in Fort Wayne, Ind., and after her school years, part of them spent at the University of Chicago, she took nurse's training at the Chicago Wesley Memorial Hospital. She followed this with post-graduate work at Cook County Hospital, and later specialized in surgery, serving in Chicago hospitals for 16 years.

In the mid-40s, the couple came to Colorado and bought the Triple B. Ranch. Things were lean in those days, but they finally made the ranch pay off as a guest hostel. In the meantime, word spread throught the mountain region that there was a registered nurse whose services were available in time of need.

"Al" asked nothing other than to serve, and serve she did, at all hours of the day and night in deepest snow and brightest sunshine, anyhere, everywhere. She volunteered to serve without pay when the Woodland Park School needed a nurse but lacked funds to pay for such a service. "Al" never asked for montary rewards for her services; she simply went where they were needed.

In the fall of 1955, the "Shepherd of the Hills" was honored at Our Lady of the Woods Church with a testimonial dinner given by the hundreds of devoted people who paid her tribute for her years of unrequited, voluntary service to the sick and needy.

"Al" has proved to countless numbers that she has a big heart. But now something has gone wrong with that vital part of her frail body.

She has spent her life lending a helping hand to others in time of need. And now, "Al" herself needs help. Not only from a monetary standpoint, one of the Burns' "adopted" sons, Rollie Banard, said this past week. Expenses for her long hospital stay have been increasingly high, and their savings have been depleted. Too, hospital insurance policies don't keep paying on forever, Banard pointed out.

Banard said he felt sure that many people would be willing and grateful to contribute to a fund to help the family defray these expenses. Anyone who is, he said, may send their donations to "Bud" at the ranch in Woodland Park.

But mainly, Banard said, what "Al" needs are the prayers of the many who have been helped by the "Shepherd of the Hills" who perhaps don't know that she is desperately ill.

"These will help more than anything," the young man said. For the only compensation "Al" ever wished for she found in Isiah's voice in the wilderness: "His reward is with him and his work before him."

Fear Underlies Smoking Habit, Psychiatrist Says

Persons habituated to cigarette smoking are seeking a "keyed up" state to protect them against the deep fear that they will be destroyed, ruined, or exposed if they let their ego defenses down, Dr. Chessick wrote in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In this sense, he said, tobacco habituation can be understood as an ego operation which constantly, through artificial means, keeps the ego functioning at a high level of alertness. The desperate psychic need and chronic pressure to maintain defensive mechanisms working continuously in high gear is the "essential psychic ingredient for many addictions and habituations," he pointed out.

This hypothesis is consistent with studies indicating that smokers tend to live faster and more intensely and to be more socially outgoing, the "counterphobic" aspects of which are obvious, Dr. Chessick commented.

The theory also is consistent with the fact that the compulsion to smoke in increasing amounts represents an ominous sign, he added.

"The lack of stabilization with a fairly constant amount of given addictive or habituating substance indicates that the function of the addiction or habit is not being fulfilled and sooner or later further steps will have to be taken by the ego to protect against the feared exposure or destruction," he said.

Patients who smoke in increasingly large amounts and are forced to stop are faced with the original threats that they have been trying to defend against, Dr. Chessick continued. Turning to food seems to be one of the characteristic ways of dealing with the unconscious problem, he said, and compulsive overeating becomes a substitute for the smoking habit.

Significant emotional disturbances may occur in persons who are not able to find satisfactory substitutes for smoking, Dr. Chessick warned.

Dr. Chessick is chief of the psychiatry service at Veterans Administration Research Hospital and assistant professor in the department of neurology and psychiatry at Northwestern University Medical School.

Florence Issues Permits Valued At $14,300

City Building Inspector Carl Meyers announced this week that $14,300 in permit valuation was recorded by the city of Florence during the month of May.

Of the total 24 permits issued, nine were for the remodeling of residential structures, while four were for remodeling business buildings.

Meyers noted that the city library roof has been repaired as well as the former Eagles building, recently acquired by the Pioneer Day association for a museum. During the month of May Meyers made a total of 32 inspections and attended a public health meeting in Denver.

Mrs. Kennedy Tells About Assassination

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Warren Commission, continuing its investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, has heard Mrs. Kennedy's account of the events in Dallas last Nov. 22.

The panel made an unannounced visit to the widow's Washington home to hear her story.

A spokesman for the blue-ribbon commission, headed by Chief Justice Earl Warren, issued a one-sentence statement after the visit that "the president's commission took the testimony of Mrs. John F. Kennedy at her home this afternoon."

The spokesman declined to give any further details, refusing to say how many of the commission members heard Mrs. Kennedy or how long the session took.

Pirate Television Station Being Built

ROTTERDAM, the Netherlands (AP)—A pirate television station is being built in the North Sea 5½ miles off the Dutch coast.

The station, outside territorial waters, is believed the first of its kind. Previously, private companies have set up radio stations off the European coast to evade bans against commercial broadcasting.

However, the Dutch government submitted legislation to Parliament last month bringing all artificial installations on the North Sea continental shelf under jurisdiction of the Netherlands.

YOUR DENTAL HEALTH

Teeth Should Be Cleaned By Skilled Dental Hygienist

"Is it necessary to lose a pint of blood," a man recently asked, "every time you have your teeth cleaned?"

I'm quite sure he was being somewhat extravagant in his estimate. It isn't likely that his dental hygienist was trying to kill him; it's more likely that his gums were inflamed and infected; and this could have been because he neglected to have his teeth cleaned for too long a time. Tartar that collects on teeth irritates gums and causes easy bleeding.

Prophylaxis instruments are of a variety to suit every operator, every tooth, and indeed every surface of every tooth. If they are kept sharp and used well, teeth can be relieved of tartar with little bleeding.

Gums are attached to necks of teeth. They are not, however, attached at their very edge but about a millimeter or two below. This unattached or so-called "free margin of the gums" is as deep as it's necessary to go in thoroughly scraping debris from teeth.

Forcing instrument blades beyond this attachment lacerates gums, causes bleeding and possibly infection. If deep scaling or curettage is required, it should be done by the dentist.

Dental hygienists are valuable aides in any dental office. They are well prepared, dedicated and highly competent operators. Their formal education, after graduation from high school, consists of two years of study in an approved school of dental hygiene. Here they are instructed in medico-dental sciences and spend much time in clinical work and on-the-job training.

Hygienists are often the key to a smoothly run dental practice in which patients are recalled periodically for cleaning and examination.

The prophylaxis visit is an important one; it's pleasant and painless. Patients says it's a comforting feeling to run their tongue over newly cleaned, smooth, polished teeth. This is also the best time to examine teeth since all surfaces are free of debris and cavaties are easily seen.

X rays, one on each side of the mouth, should be taken so that areas between teeth and under old fillings are exposed to view. Small cavities so discovered can be filled before they get big enough to cause toothaches or worse.

This is preventive dentistry at its best!

AF Will Drop Pueblo Reserve Unit in Summer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said Friday it will disband 131 reserve units with a total of 8,500 men, organized originally as recovery outfits to help in maintaining military planes in event of attack on the United States.

Units to be discontinued include:

Colorado — 9530th Recovery Squadron, Pueblo.

An announcement said the Air Force has decided that "there is no foreseeable future military need for these units."

The units are located in 40 states. Of the total, 40 are recovery groups and 91 are squadrons.

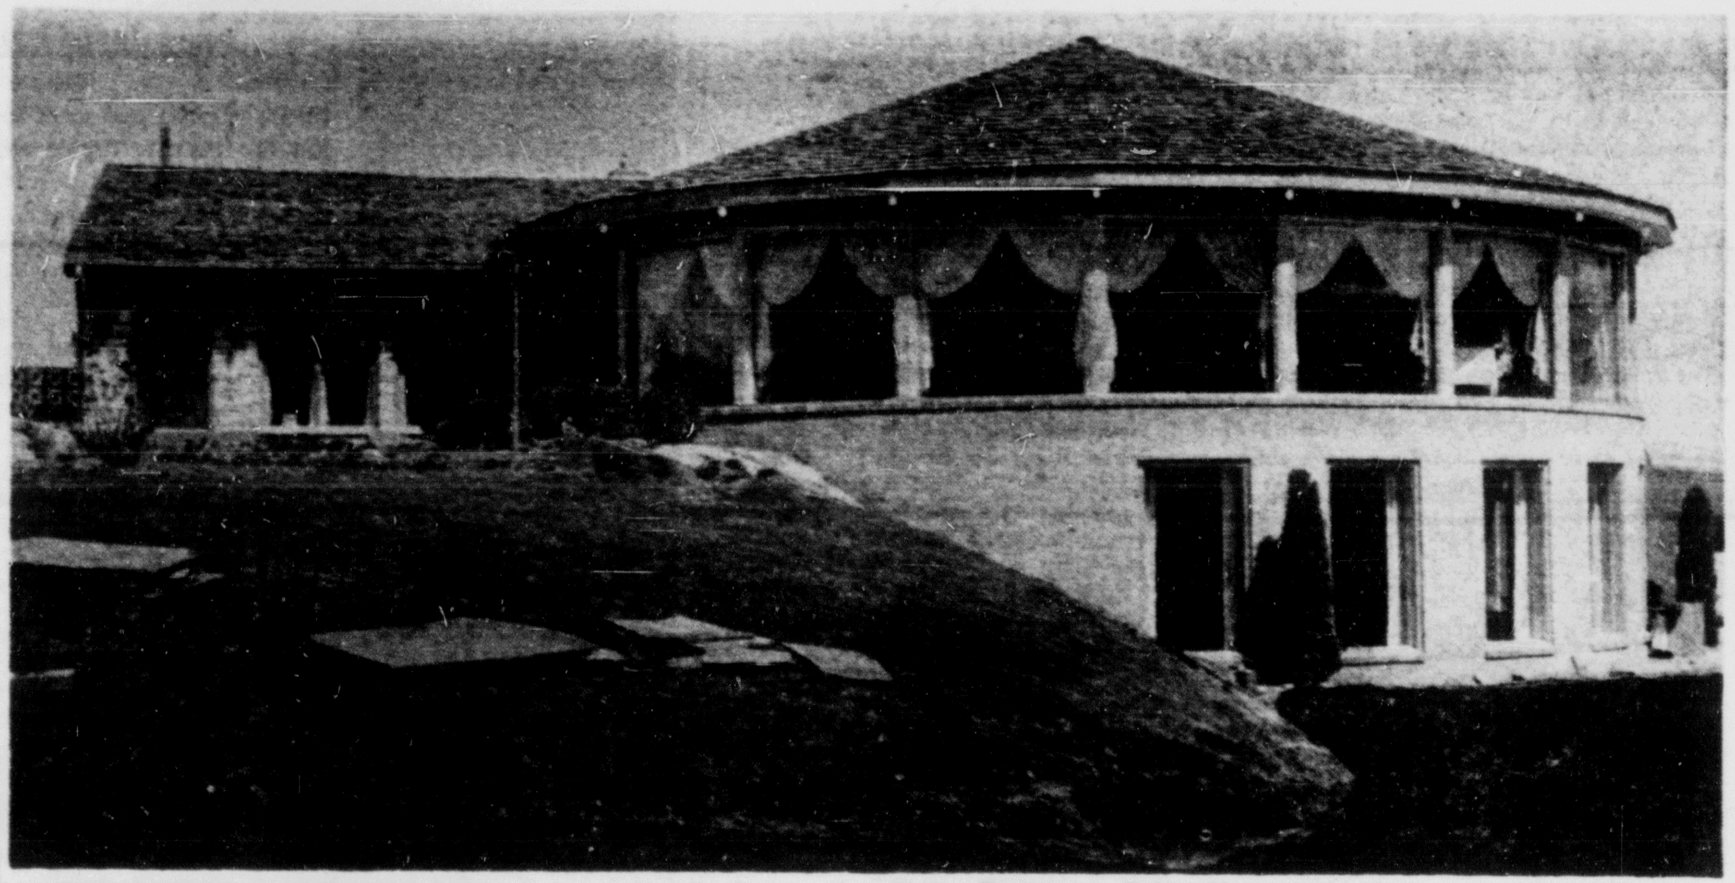
Their mission was to provide refueling service, minor repairs, and other maintenance for military planes used in meeting an air attack on the country when the planes were unable to return to home bases and were compelled to land at civilian airports.

The total authorized field strength of 61,000 under the Air Force reserve program will not be affected by the disbanding of the units, the announcement said.

A spokesman said that some of these in the recovery units would be given assignments in other reserve organizations, or in other units to be formed.

The announcement means a reduction, not an elimination of the recovery program, it was explained. Still remaining in operation will be 42 groups and 109 squadrons.

"It means," a spokesman said, "that we are going from a nationwide network into selection of locations where we have specific, hard requirements."



DUBLIN HOUSE — From the circular lounge, Blarney Room, of Dublin House, new restaurant and supper club on Academy Boulevard north of Colorado Springs, there's a panoramic view of the Rocky Mountains and Colorado Springs. Draperies in the lounge are gold lame, and the carpet is Kelly green with two-foot gold Irish harps. Entrance to Dublin House is the doorway at the left. The slabs of red stone in the foreground will be used in landscaping the terrace. An outside stairway leads from the lower to the upper level of the building. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

THETFORD, England (AP)—John Mayes, an engineer, has resigned from the Thetford Borough Council over the erection of a bronze statue of American revolutionary Thomas Paine who was born here. The figure, a gift of the Thomas Paine Foundation of America, will be dedicated today.

Dublin House, New Club, Restaurant Opens Monday

Dublin House, plush new supper club and restaurant on Academy Boulevard north of Colorado Springs, will open for business at 2 p.m. Monday.

Irish and Roman in motif, Dublin House is owned by Bonnie Fitzpatrick and Collette Divine, who will operate it personally. The building was completed last November, and was designed by Miss Fitzpatrick. Miss Divine did the interior.

One of the features of Dublin House, which will seat 500 in its various dining rooms, is the Blarney Room, a 68-foot-in-diameter lounge, whose circular west side is of glass and faces the mountain range. The lounge has no supporting posts or pillars, all the support being through the walls.

The crystal chandelier in the main dining room was made in Czechoslovakia, and was purchased by the Dublin House owners on a tour of Europe for ideas and furnishings.

Walls of the dining room are done in laminated silk with flocking in a green demask design. The carpet, by a New York artist, is Kelly green with authentically shaped Irish harps in gold two feet high. Chairs and tables have a mahogany finish.

While many of the draperies in Dublin House are green, those in the Blarney Room are gold lame.

The downstairs banquet room, also circular in shape, will seat 250. The stairway between the two floors of the building is a complete spiral staircase with wrought iron balisters and railings, and up the center from the bottom floor is a Roman pillar on which sits a white marble statue, a copy of the Grecian "Crouching Venus."

Five Roman pillars decorated with Roman-type lanterns around each pillar are features of the banquet room. The room has a repose Roman floor with a sunburst pattern.

Dublin House's Heather Room is done in delicate lavenders and heather and is designed for private parties for women, small luncheons and bridge club meetings. It is located on the top floor.

Downstairs is the Keg Room. The furniture is fashioned out of whiskey kegs, as is the bar. It is carpeted and has a floor to ceiling fireplace. It has a rathskeller type decor. During opening week, Ruth Kilborn will be at the piano bar nightly.

The Parliament Room, designed after the Irish Parliament hall, is furnished with hand-carved wooden chairs and a conference table to match in solid oak with an 1870 Florentine flavor. This room is for business men's meetings and is insulated against unnecessary sound.

Dublin house is equipped with a stereo sound system with 40 speakers, each of which can be individually controlled.

The Dublin House building features a light red brick veneer and a hand - hewn shake shingle roof. It was designed for the view from its circular lounge, which gives a panorama extending from the Air Force Academy on the north to southern Colorado. At night, there is a sweeping view of lights from the academy south over Colorado Springs.

Miss Fitzpatrick and Miss Divine made a trip to Ireland, Italy and England last fall planning the building, and when they saw anything in supper clubs they liked they jotted it down. When they saw art works they liked, they brought them back.

One big kitchen serves all of the dining rooms of Dublin House, and presiding over it will be John Cimino, noted for his chateau-briand and flaming dishes. Cimino formerly was chef at the El Paso Club, the Village Inn and the Continental Hotel of Pueblo, and for a time was in Florida. He was chef at the Village Inn for 12 years.

Miss Fitzpatrick formerly owned the Safari, on South 8th Street, which was managed by Miss Divine. Both are graduates of Colorado College, where Miss Fitzpatrick was a pre-med student studying on a scholarship.

Miss Collette studied music at CC and was a voice student earlier at Michigan State University at East Lansing. Later she travelled as a singer with big name bands.

Dublin House will be open from 2 p.m. to 2 a.m. daily, and during opening week Ray Conlin, Irish comedian; the Ray Dido Trio from Miami, Fla., and the Dublin-Aires, one of the top 10 girls' quartets of the country, will entertain at three shows nightly.

There will be dancing, too, in the Blarney Room, which has a circular dance floor.

Dublin House is reached by driving a mile east from Woodmen Valley turnoff of the Monument Valley Freeway and following the Dublin House sign.

There is ample parking space around the supper club and restaurant since it sits on a 40-acre site.

Tito and Nikita Will Meet in Leningrad

MOSCOW (AP) —Soviet Premier Khrushchev will meet President Tito of Yugoslavia in Leningrad next week, Tass said here.

The official Soviet news agency said Khrushchev had invited Tito to come to Leningrad at the end of the Yugoslav leader's current state visit to Finland. The visit ends Monday.

The Tass announcement did not give the day of the meeting. It said Tito would make a "short visit" to the northern Soviet City.

Tito was last in the Soviet Union in 1962.

A major item on the Leningrad agenda was certain to be the Soviet-Chinese power struggle, and the role Tito plays in it.

CED Suggests Ways to Gain Tariff Reduction

Recommendations for policies to be followed by the countries now engaged at Geneva in negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) were made public in Washington Wednesday by the Research and Policy Committee of the Committee for Economic Development (CED).

The principal recommendation of the committee is that "the United States should seek in free world trade negotiations to obtain tariff reductions from its free world trade partners, in return for reciprocal United States reductions, coming as close as possible to cutting free world tariffs by 50 per cent across the board."

Exceptions from this rule," the commitee said, should be "as few and as small as possible." It found little merit in the European Economic Community's insistence on departing from the general 50 per cent rule to deal with disparities in tariff heights.

The committee's recommendations for general and substantial liberalization of trade fall under four main headings: tariff reductions; reduction of other barriers to trade in agricultural goods; abatement of non-tariff protection; and reduction of barriers to the trade of underdeveloped countries. But it regards its recommendations as a package forming "together a single recommendation for the liberalization of trade, across the board."

The statement, "Trade Negotiations for a Better Free World Economy," was released by Theodore O. Yntema, chairman of the CED Research and Policy Committee, and Howard Petersen, chairman of the Subcommittee on Tariff Negotiations under the Trade Expansion Act.

The Committee for Economic Development is a nonprofit and non political group of 200 businessmen and educators which from time to time issues findings and policy recommendations for the "preservation and strengthening of our free society" through "high employment, increasing productivity and living standards, greater economic stability, and greater opportunity for all our people."

Other recommendations of the committee are:

Non-tariff barriers to trade should also "be eliminated, or very greatly reduced, as a necessary part of any agreement upon the general liberalization of trade."

Tariff reduction should be reciprocal among nations. A "reasonable definition of reciprocity" is set forth by the CED committee as being that "all major trading countries should make the same percentage reduction of their average tariffs."

Tariff reduction should be staged over at least five equal annual installments, or longer where more time is needed to avoid undue hardship to an industry.

"The United States, and other exporters of agricultural goods, should use every possible inducement in the trade negotiations to secure competitive accress to the share of the European Economic Community's market for farm goods that they have enjoyed."

The statement renews earlier recommendations by the Research and Policy Committee that the United States should "reduce its support prices on wheat, cotton, rice, feed grains, and related products to world market price levels." This would permit "liberalization of United States quotas on the importation of farm goods."

"Agricultural tariffs, like other tariffs, should be cut 50 per cent, across the board," the statement recommends.

If it should develop that any major free-world trading unit should be "unwilling or unable to undertake trade liberalization that is substantially equal to what is generally desired," the committee urges that other free world nations "should consider how they could nevertheless obtain the benefits of liberalized and expanded trade."

The committee recommends that the United States, the European Economic Community, and other industrial nations extend the tariff reductions they make among themselves to the underdeveloped countries of the free world, on a most favored nations basis. They should do this without requiring full reciprocity at this time. This exception should be regarded as temporary, and should be under continual review in GATT. The underdeveloped countries should also agree to reduce their average tariffs "as soon as their balance of payments position permits."

The committee recommends that the better developed countries should reduce their tariffs on tropical products to zero. It renewed earlier CED recommendations, intended to assist underdeveloped countries, for the gradual elimination of United States quotas on lead, zinc, and petroleum, and the United States tariff on copper.

If these steps are taken, the committee says, "almost all the present main products of the underdeveloped countries would enter the markets of the industralized countries free of tariff and other barriers."

Scranton Man Plans to Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Draft-Scranton National Campaign Committee made clear Friday that its leaders are determined to battle for the Pennsylvania governor "down to the moment of truth" at next month's Republican National Convention.

Washington attorney Richard C. Peet, who heads the draft movement, told a news conference his supporters plan to touch all bases between now and convention time in an effort to give Scranton what he says he wants — "a sincere and honest draft" for the GOP presidential nomination.

Peet said "Bucks for Bill" program is being considered to gain grassroots financial support for the governor because "our effort will cost a great deal of money."

Peet gave no estimates but he indicated the goal would be comparable to what Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., have spent in their campaigns.

Without mentioning names, he said top Republican contributors across the country would be solicited.

Asked how much money was on hand to help Scranton, Peet said "We have enough money to operate till tomorrow morning effectively."

Columbia River Flood Project Pact Approved

OTTAWA (AP)—The Columbia River flood control and power project took a giant step forward Friday as Canada's House of Commons approved the 1961 U.S.-Canadian treaty.

The project, under consideration for 20 years, is expected to get quick approval in the Canadian Senate. It has already been approved by the United States.

The United States is scheduled to make a payment of $274.8 million to British Columbia by Oct. 1 for the downstream power benefits. Another U.S. payment of $69 million will cover three storage and flood-control dams in British Columbia.

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — When this city of 185,000 observes the 75th anniversary this summer of a fire that destroyed its downtown area the program will include a re-enactment of the conflagration.

It will all be done with a model of the city as it was in 1889 when flames raced through the business district July 29-Aug. 1.

WEARS SEAT BELT

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) —J. William Beard, the chairman of the State Industrial Accident Commission, was so busy thinking about his work that he drove out of the state capitol garage through the wrong exit.

The front of his car dropped three feet over the edge of an outside loading platform. But he said "I had my seat belt on."

Danish Teens Just Crazy About Beatles

COPENHAGEN, Denmark (AP) — Danish teen-agers are just like those in Britain and the United States. They go crazy when the Beatles hit town.

The moptop performers from England put on a show in Copenhagen last wek and touched off one of the most hysterical demonstrations ever witnessed in the Danish capital.

Shrieking girls tried to storm the stage as the Beatles went into their act. Ushers had to drag the girls back to their seats.

Police brought dogs to subdue screamers who milled about outside the concert hall.

Youthful enthusiasm was not lessened by the absence of ailing drummer Ringo Starr. Starr, 23, is being treated for tonsilitis and laryngitis. A substitute drummer accompanied the Beatles.

Of the total number of juveniles handled last month, 105 were boys ranging in age from through 17 and 25 were girls, with the age range being from 10 through 17.

McKissick said 62 of the youngsters were referred to the juvenile court and probation office, five were referred to the state juvenile parole officer; 55 were released to their parents and 8 were held for other agencies.

Truman Defends MacArthur Removal

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman today defended his removal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur as Far East commander in 1951—and said he should have taken the action two years sooner.

Truman, writing in the Satureay Evening Post on "My First 80 Years," said that two years before the dismissal, the late general had approved an action of the Japanese Diet which ran contrary to policy laid down in Washington.

Without giving details, Truman said that Secretary of the Army Kenneth Royall countermanded the action and asked whether he had done the right thing.

"I told Royall he had, and if MacArthur didn't obey, I'd bust him to sergeant," Truman wrote.

U. S. Outlines Views On War in Viet Nam

PARIS (AP) — A firm U.S. stand in support of the anti-guerrilla war in Viet Nam has been outlined to President Charles de Gaulle, who thinks neutralization is the solution.

But Ball described the 75-minute meeting Friday as "an interesting and useful discussion."

The undersecretary goes to London Sunday for a Southeast Asia policy discussion with the British.

FRISKY AS IT CAN BE...FINE A BUY AS YOU CAN GET (even finer now!)

Trade 'N' Travel Time is running out at your Chevrolet dealer's. This is about your last chance to get in a whole summerful of fun with a beautiful buy like a Chevelle Malibu wagon.

Allow us to point out some of its less obvious pleasures.

It has curved side windows—not just for looks, but to give you more shoulder room. It has 86 cu. ft. of cargo space, so you can go on vacation with everything but the kitchen sink if you have to.

It has a Magic-Mirror acrylic lacquer finish for protection against the sun, road tar and chipping.

It has those self-cleaning rocker panels beneath the doors that resist rust by flushing themselves free of salt and dirt.

Inside, the upholstery over its wide foam-cushioned seats is soft, durable color-keyed vinyl. All vinyl. The floor carpeting is deep-twist and long-wearing, door to door.

We don't want anything playing havoc with Chevelle's good looks if we can help it.

All in all, there are 11 different Chevelles being offered during Trade 'N' Travel Time. Spacious station wagons, coupes, Super Sports with bucket seats, convertibles, sedans. One's as beautiful a buy as the other. It's up to you. But hurry, whatever you do!

Quebec Leader Insists on 'Liberation'

By JERRY SHEEHAN

MONTREAL, Quebec (NEA)—Beneath a single naked light bulb on the ceiling of his office Marcel Chaput talked about blood in the streets.

Chaput, who refuses to speak English with newsmen, is the acknowledged founder and generalissimo of the modern Quebec "liberation" movement. If this means violence, then violence there will be, said Chaput (pronounced shah-poo).

Chaput was leader of the Quebec Republican party until a recent internal split. His headquarters is a small room of his drab house in a Montreal suburb. In one corner leans the blue and white flag of Quebec province, emblazoned with fleur-de-lis, royal emblem of France, the only color in the cell-like chamber. A copy of the "National Hymn of Quebec" lies on his desk.

"My mission is simply to give the French-Canadians a country," said Chaput, his hands folded across his barrel chest.

"We have been an occupied nation for 200 years. That will all end soon. Since World War II, 50 nations have come into independence. Why not Quebec?"

To gain independence Chaput, 45, has made speeches, run for office, been fired from his federal job (as biochemist) for his views, gone on hunger strikes, written books, pamphlets and uncounted letters.

Although Chaput cannot be linked directly to violence by young terrorists, he makes no secret of his belief that violence may be necessary to "free" Quebec from the Anglo-Saxon grip.

At the news of a planned Canadian visit this year by Queen Elizabeth, Chaput recently declared:

"I am afraid that if the Queen comes to Quebec in October some of my compatriots will let her know—maybe brutally—that she is not welcome here any more."

English-Canadians, who stand at attention to the strains of "God Save the Queen" were properly shocked.

They have been shocked, too, at dynamite bombings and poison pen letters. Recently 75 Quebec business firms received mimeographed notes threatening bombings if they did not change their company names from English to French.

Many firms already practice bilingualism to an almost absurd degree. Thus a sign on the Bank of Nova Scotia in downtown Montreal reads: "La Banque de Nouvelle Ecosse." And many hotels, just to play safe, print the French circumflex mark over the "O."

Bomb damage has been largely confined to the demolition of red sidewalk mailboxes. But Army Sgt. Maj. Walter Leja was maimed while trying to defuse one of the homemade contraptions.

And in downtown Montreal, W. V. O'Neill, a watchman, lifted the cover from a trash can and had his head blown apart by the bomb inside. Banks have been raided for money to finance the "liberation," and government arsenals have been raided for weapons.

The charge is made by most observers—English and French—that the province would face econmic strangulation if she separated from the rest of the nation—assuming that Ottawa would sit by and watch another flag raised over 600,000 square miles of its real estate.

As one English - Canadian businessman put it: "Independent Quebec would become the world's No. 1 candidate for foreign aid. The French would still be walking around on snowshoes if it weren't for the English."

Separatist Chaput, who doesn't deny that he would accept the presidency of a Quebec republic, bristles at such notions.

"Quebec straddles the St. Lawrence Seaway for 1,000 miles; Montreal is one of the world's great ports; we are rich in hydropower and minerals. Quebec is a hundred times more ready for independence than any nation in Africa or Latin America."

Would a Quebec republic soon tire of a go-it-alone policy and make a bid to join the United States (an often - heard opinion)? "Never," said Chaput.

"We don't want to be a minority any longer—under either the English-Canadians or the Americans," he growled, thumping his fist on the table to underline each word.

"Look what happened to Louisiana when the Americans took over. Dieu! Where is the French lanugage there today?"

In Chaput's Quebec, French would be the official language. (Even today, Chaput refuses to address letters in English. Thus, Craig Street West becomes rue Craig ouest.) "Bilingualism," in Chaput's eyes, "is a sin against nature."

By WILLIAM F. WRIGHT

TOKYO (UPI) — With one great burst of characterisic energy, Tokyo is girding for the tourists, arthetes and officials from across the seas who will descend on the city this fall for the Games of the XVIII Olympiad.

To please the visitors and render itself a worthy host for the first Olympics to be held in Asia, the world's largest city is reshaping its very soul. The effort is sending a shudder through the city from its subterranean depths to its smog-enveloped skyline, and through many of its more than 10 million inhabitants.

Some find it unbearable, as did the university student who committed suicide by placing his head in a pile driver because its maddening bang kept him from studying. Others cry out indignantly at the din and the dust. But most just grit their teeth and bear it, knowing that out of it all will emerge a better city to live in.

With the opening day scheduled for Oct. 10, construction on roads, hotels, stadiums, railways and subways is proceeding at a breakneck pace. So far more than 100 persons have died in Olympic construction or related accidents, including an imperial palace chauffeur who was killed when an iron beam from a portion of an Olympicex fell on his car.

So close is the construction deadline and so monumental the task that in many cases the scaffolding will be torn away and the last nail driven just as the first Olympic visitor arrives. What will he find?

He will find the results of what must be ranked as one of the most colossal engineering feats of modern times. But he also will find a city of paradoxes, of gleaming skyscrapers and dirty shacks, handsome highways and rutted roads, modern sports facilities and appaling sanitation, of hurtling subway trains and monumental traffic jams, of a few clearly named boulevards and a maze of anonymous side streets.

An elevated eight - spoked wheel of four - lane Olympic expressways is wrapping itself around the city's center. But only two spokes will be completed in time for the Games. One will connect the Games sites and the other the airport with the city's center. The latter will cut in half the one-hour travel from the airport.

An eight - mile monorail is being built alongside the airport expressway. It will rocket passengers non - stop between downtown Tokyo and the airport in about 13 minutes. Fares will be around $1.75 each way, about half the limousine fare.

Originally, the Japanese were concerned that too many foreign visitors would be coming to the games but now they are worried there won't be enough.

Their original concern was how to provide bed and board for an expected 40,000 people from abroad in a city already bursting with 10 million inhabitants.

But for months the word has been going out that all existing accommodations for Olympic visitors had been reserved. As a result, many people who had hoped to come to Japan for the games have decided not to.

The housing committee of the Tokyo Olympic Organization reports that all space in Tokyo's 25 western-style hotels, the 36 hotels in nearby resort towns and the 24 hotels scheduled to be built before the games has been reserved for the duration of the Olympics. The hotels confirmed this, reporting long waiting lists. But the housing committee estimates that only one-third of this space has been blocked out by travel agencies. This space is being held for visitors who agree to sign up for package tours of Japan, which have nothing to do with the Games. Few have accepted the arrangement.

The transportation ministry has urged the agencies and hotels to discourage the practice, to throw all remaining hotel space open to the general visitor without attaching conditions. But there has been little response.

Most of the hotels refused to disclose how many rooms have been blocked out by travel agents. The manager of the Tokyo Hilton, however, said all his rooms have been reserved to "individuals and we have a name for each room."

To make matters worse, the entire 250 rooms of the old but fashionable Imperial Hotel have been reserved for International officials and their wives.

The Japan Inn Association reports only half of the 3,500 rooms at Tokyo's 24 Japanese-style inns and the 115 inns in nearby resorts have been reserved for the duration of the Games. The association said many of the inns have been renovated to suit western tastes, offering western cuisine, locked doors, beds and even flush toilets.

The housing committee said reservations at western hotels and Japanese inns may be made directly with the hotel agencies in Japan. Payment for rooms during the Olympic Games period is made in advance, 50 per cent when the reservation is confirmed and the balance by July 31, this year. A refund of 75 per cent is made if the reservation is cancelled before May 31, and 50 per cent if cancelled before July 31. No refund is made if the reservation is cancelled after July 31.

Probably one of the best bargains for prospective Olympic visitors is the private Japanese home but relatively few have taken advantage of the opportunity so far. The housing committee said at least 350 "upper middle class" Japanese families have offered to board visitors during the Games. The homes would provide lodging for 925 visitors at low rates.

Because Japanese seldom invite foreigners into their homes, much less put them up for the night, the homes offer Olympic visitors a rare opportunity to sample traditional Japanese living, with a few western conveniences thrown in. All the homes have been approved by the Tokyo metropolitan government and all are less than an hour by train, street car, bus or taxi from the center of the city.

Most of the rooms are Japanese-style with tatami mats on the floor. Some of the rooms have western-style beds. Rooms are partitioned by sliding doors.

Applications for accommodations in private homes should be sent directly to the Tokyo Olympics Housing Office, Tokyo Metropolitan government Marunouchi, Chiyoda-Ku, Tokyo. The housing office selects a suitable home on the basis of information furnished in the application and notification confirming reservations and instructions on payment are sent to the applicant, together with a guide to "life in Japanese homes" which includes a candid description of "certain customs which must invariably be followed in Japanese - style baths."

"It must be remembered, for example, that one does not wash in the bath tub and, secondly, that the hot water is not drained away after each person has finished using the bath," the guide says. "Consequently, since the hot water does not become dirty, the whole family uses the same bath water." The guide adds reassuringly: "Of course, the guest will be given the opportunity to bath first while the water is at its cleanest."

As for the participants in the games, most of the 8,418 athletes and officials from abroad will be staying at the Olympic Village, 200 acres of gently rolling hills and shade trees isolated from noise and traffic, about a 20-minute walk from Meiji Park where most of the major events will be held.

At the Olympic Village, which is twice as large as the Rome Olympic Village, athletes and officials will be pampered as never before in Olympic history. They will be housed in 543 modern housing units and 14 concrete four-story apartments and fed in three modern cafeterias. Separate facilities will be provided for women. An army of 350 cooks has been recruited to provide a variety of international dishes. No alcoholic drinks will be allowed inside the village

A maze of space - age equipment will provide the fastest computing and reporting of the Olympic results in the history of the Games. The nerve center will be two electronic brains which will collect and process data from the games sites, print the results for press release and send them back to each game site, all in a matter of a few seconds.

The first live television transmission from Japan last March showed dramatically that televising the Games to the United States via a space satellite is feasible. But nobody wants to pay for it. The United States estimates it would cost about $3 million to place a satellite which could handle the feat into orbit over the Pacific.

Chess Tourneys Growing Popular In Canon City

Darrell Betts, president of the Canon City High School Chess Club, believes a new sport is infiltrating the schools in Fremont County.

Betts said that five schools in the county have recently participated in a round-robin chess tournament, with Canon City High School and Canon City Junior High tied for first with 14 points, the Abbey third with 11 points, Florence 1, and St. Scholastica Academy 0.

Plans are, Betts said, for each school to have a varsity team made up of five players and a junior varsity team made up of others who are interested.

Betts added that persons instrumental in developing interest in the game were Rosemay Curan of the Academy, Dick Ziegler of Canon City Junior High, and Keith Simons of Canon City High School.

"We were late in getting this tournament started this year," Betts commented, "but this fall we plan on starting a tournament soon after school opens."

DOG TALK

ANGLETON, Tex. (UPI) — One of his dogcatching problems, the poundmaster of this Texas coastal town complained recently, is that in the western part of town where many Latin-Americans live, the dogs don't seem to understand English. Some wag suggested the poundmaster vary his "Here, doggie" occasionally with the Spanish equivalent, "Venga aqui, perrito."

Memory of JFK Continues To Grow Throughout U. S.

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA)—John Fitzgerald Kennedy had a scant three years as president to make his living mark upon the memory of this nation. But in the six months since he died, his imprint seems to have deepened by the day.

You can find it in countless places:

Most of all, on the grassy slope in Arlington Cemetery, where thousands of the saddened, the stunned and the merely curious daily wind past his grave in three long, patient lines under even the warmest sun.

In the impluse that leads harried businessmen to borrow time from a crowded Washington day to hasten by taxi to join that throng at graveside.

In the bumper-to-bumper file of automobiles and the clusters of sidewalk strollers that move slowly past Jacqueline Kennedy's big Georgetown house, hoping for even the briefest glimpse of the late President's wife and his two children, Caroline and John Jr.

In political and other meeting halls where John Kennedy and Sen. Edward (Ted) Kennedy often find themselves swamped with well - wishers clutching at every reminiscent similarity of mannerism.

In the unbroken stream of letters that still pours in upon Mrs. Kennedy and others of the family, voicing sympathy, offering beginners' poetry or a host of memorial ideas or dollars for the unique Kennedy Memorial Library soon to be established in Cambridge beside the Charles River.

In bookstores and record shops, not to mention drug stores, where the printed word and the voice of the late President or the words and sounds of others talking of him, still attract unnumbered Americans.

Says David Powers, his old friend and aide:

"They just can't get enough of him. People who thought they were going to have time to get to know him suddenly lost him. Now they are trying to catch up."

Never in this country's history has there been anything like the unending pilgrimage to John Kennedy's grave, with its mound of evergreen boughs, the eternal flame, and the little white picket fence. Nearly two million persons have walked by since his funeral last Nov. 25.

A New York woman stood in the shade of a tree well above the grave and said: "I could stand here and look for hours and think of all the things he said and did."

Another, as if mindful of his acknowledged political zest, said: "We certainly wish he was living. It doesn't seem like election year without him."

Walking away, a man shook his head and muttered wistfully: "I voted for him . . . it don't seem real."

Many, unworried over history's slower verdict, spoke the words "great man" as they hovered near. For one this came out defiantly: "If he wasn't great, turn around and look. All these people wouldn't spend their money to come here."

One after another came special groups bearing wreaths to lay at the Kennedy grave—36 this day, as many as 45 on some occasions. The First Friday of the Month Club from Bayonne, N.J. . . . Boy Scout Troop 89, Brooklyn . . . members of the Richmond, Va., Community House . . . delegates from a Negro Church of God convention in Baltimore . . . a lone, crippled boy in a wheel chair.

For many people who come to Washington for a "general" visit, the President's resting place and his wife's new home are the supreme magnets. And when the Kennedys move outside Washington, they are the great magnets.

Young Ted Kennedy, barnstorming the country to give a political boost to Senate colleagues up for re - election, draws a crushing attendance wherever he goes. Records have fallen in California, North Dakota, Minnesota, Maine. In Georgia, a land thought to be hostile to "the Kennedys," the young senator heard mostly rousing, friendly sounds from big crowds.

Though he moves about much less, it has been the same for Robert Kennedy, who hears tumultuous welcomes from the groups he speaks to.

Even members of the late President's White House staff appear to have his aura clinging to them. At a spring gathering of some of these men, hundreds of people hung about seeking their autographs.

Pierre Salinger, Kennedy's press secretary, tests the political value of this aura as a candidate for U.S. Senate in California. The June 2 primary decision will tell the full story. But part of it is already plain. A woman watching Salinger at a reception in Stockton said:

"I know he's just another human being standing up there. But it does something to me to realize he was with John Kennedy in all those important times."

How Salinger fares in June may assist President Lyndon B. Johnson in judging what account to give, if any, to the "Kennedy phenomenon" as he chooses a vice presidential candidate this summer.

Whatever its meaning in the political realm in 1964 and beyond, the phenomenon manifests itself remarkably in the constant heavy flow of letters to the Kennedy family from all over the world.

"I wanted to write and tell you that I am very sorry about our President who was your brother being shot. He was a very good man and even everybody liked him . . . please don't look so sad in your pictures, 'cause you always smiled happy before. P.S. My mom is a Girl Scout leader and we all talked about the President and how we could be like he wanted us to be at a meeting."

In a letter to Ted Kennedy, typical of many in its sentiment, a woman writes: "He has certainly enriched our lives."

The letters are replete with suggestions for memorials of all kinds. Says one who helps the Kennedy family sift through this still-tumbling avalanche:

"For a while, we got the impression everyone wanted to name everything after John F. Kennedy."

Already in being is an incredible array of renamed streets, highways, bridges, hospitals, schools, airports, parks, forests, and other things.

From the outset the Kennedys sought to stem the flow, to limit severely the use of the late President's name. It has been a losing battle. Many individuals or groups bent on this course never ask permission but just plunge on. Some who do seek it ignore the family request not to act.

Foreign lands and their citizens have spread "John F. Kennedy" across the face of bills repose in the Massachusetts legislature for the renaming of everything from a foot bridge to the Massachusetts turnpike. Congress holds a similar large batch.

The variety of memorial proposals set forth in letters is tremendous — some dreamily naive, some very well conceived, some wholly unselfish, some painfully self-serving.

The range is from noble notions of peace institutes in Switzerland and grand physical monuments to crassly commercial schemes for exploiting Kennedy's memory. There are even "JFK" memorial bubblegum cards.

Most difficult to cope with are proposals involving worthy causes which nevertheless are aimed at raising money. The Kennedy name is sought for its obvious dollar - pulling magic. In one instance, a hospital quickly raised $250,000 for a new wing after applying that magic. It's earlier drives failed. But the family strongly disapproves such uses.

Warmly touching are the hundreds and hundreds of beginning efforts at poetry, painting, and other creative endeavors inspired by John Kennedy. A family friend cites a curious example:

"From the Near East, a man wrote enclosing a picture of a huge Kennedy portrait he had painted on heavy textile material. The photograph showed it had been stretched across the front of two entire buildings. His problem: how to get it here."

The Kennedy's treat carefully all sincere expressions they receive. Yet the family's overriding interest, in the field of memorials, is in the Kennedy Memorial Library, museum and study center planned to be built soon near Harvard University.

From late May on, a traveling exhibit of John F. Kennedy memorabilia will move through many American cities to assist in raising the last half of the $10 million the memorial requires.

The memorial's most unusual feature: The planned "oral library," tape recordings of many hundreds of persons reciting, from first-hand knowledge, the history of John Kennedy in the White House and on the political trial toward it.

To the surviving Kennedys, this is the way they want most to keep the late President's memory fresh in the minds of his countrymen.

They believe his imprint was of youth upon youth, stirring in the nation its sense of vigor, its wellsprings of hope, making politics seem not merely respectable but an uplifting, commanding force.

Much more than six months must pass before it can be judged whether such a special mark may endure. As they wait and watch, the Kennedys cannot be sure. But the long lines at the grave, the cascade of letters, the friendly crowds, the burgeoning list of memorials—all are making a bigger and bigger niche of some kind for America's remembrance of John F. Kennedy.

GEN. EARLE G. WHEELER

ARADCOM in Missile Vanguard, General States

The Army Air Defense Command has been "in the vanguard" in applying the art and science of missilery, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, the Army's chief of staff, said in a message received by ARADCOM today.

Gen. Wheeler's greetings from the men and women of the Army noted the ARADCOM's observance of the 10th anniversary of Nike missile defenses of American cities. The observance, May 30 - June 14, commemorated the first employment of guided missiles in the air defenses of America, on May 30, 1954, when the Army's first on - site Nike Ajax missile became operational.

In observing that the Army has made "notable progress" in missilery since that time, General Wheeler commended ARADCOM for its success "in applying this progress to the challenges of air defense."

"Your missilemen possess the specialized knowledge and technical skills that only yesterday were the special province of the academic scientist," Gen. Wheeler observed, "and they play a significant role in maintaining the Army's modern posture and in ensuring the defense of our country."

Gen. Wheeler said he is "keenly aware of the demanding requirements for around - the - clock operations of the air defense missile sites and installations and salute ARADCOM personnel for their dedicated service."

ARADCOM's "Decade of Missiles" observance is being held throughout the nation where Army surface - to - air missiles are deployed as part of the North American Air Defense Command's combat - ready forces.

ARADCOM, which phased out the last of the Nike Ajax units of its task organization on May 18 at Norfolk, Va., has reserved the last tactical Ajax missile for its historical value. The Ajax was withdrawn from the Churchland, Va., site, which was manned by Battery B of the 4th Battalion, 111th Artillery, Virginia Army National Guard, at Churchland, Va.

Ajax has been replaced by the second - generation missile in the same family, the nuclear - capable Nike Hercules. ARADCOM also has HAWK surface - to - air missile units in southern Florida.

METRO GIVES THE VIPS RED CARPET TREATMENT

HOLLYWOOD — In the days when the movie business was something more than a factory in search of a foreman, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer rolled out the carpet for all the VIPs that ever landed here. Everybody from Winston Churchill to President Coolidge was wined or dined at the studio and mingled with the stars. M-G-M hasn't lost its touch and proved it the other evening when they threw a dinner for NBC affiliates and the visiting press — 750 of them —on the back lot. There on what looked like the streets of New York, with an orchestra playing, teh bar open, and hot food on the table, visitors got an eyeful of glamor, especially when three beautiful girls, including Chris Noel, sashayed on stage with three peacocks on leash.

Joe Pasternak staged the show; Hugh O'Brian emceed; Harve Presnell and Connie Francis sang their hearts out; and Dr. Kildare got writers cramp signing autographs. Everybody got a thrill when youth and experience — Dick Chamberlain and Ray Massey, Franciscus and Dean Jagger—stood side by side on stage.

I sat beside the Hugh Halff Jrs. and the Rex Preises of San Antonio. Discussing the Metro stars of old, Halff said his sympathy goes out to Judy Garland; "She was worked so hard as a hild, she's completely burned out." We were amused by a young girl who came back three times to get Kildare's autograph. On the last trip she said: "Miss Hooper, you came in with him. Do you suppose I could walk out with him?" . . .

Chamberlain's pal, Chuck Painter, spent his vacation in Europe. He stayed in England with the same family Dick visited at Christmas, and saw more of that tight little isle than I have in all my visits.

Charles Robinson turned down five Dr. Casey TV shows since the Crosby firm has writers doing a series especially for him. Now he goes tito the Jimmy Stewart picture for Director Henry Koster. His father, Charles Sr., has written a play that opens in New York in October, and junior has ordered 50 seats in the fifth row center so he can take his friends to see it. He said his dad has finished another play, but so far no title. . .

Well, after all the goings on and off, it looks as tho Julie Payne will marry Skip Ward. At least he says so.

A couple of years ago Jack Benny christened the Benny school in Waukegan. He's returning for graduation also, but not his own. . .

Jack Palance is trying to find himself a ranch somewhere in California before he starts "The IronCross" in August. He wants a place where he can raise cattle and horses, and aims to make it pay. Jack watched his son play his first little league game last week: "He got a single, a home run, pitched all the way and his team won 9-0.". . .

From Mario Lanza's fan club comes the RCA Victor album "I'll See You in My Dreams," taken from a radio show. It's beautiful. . .

Molly Bee brightens up Meredith Willson's second TV special the end of June with Debbie Reynolds and Phil Harris.

Vivien Leigh had Katie Hepburn and George Cukor hunting a place for her to live, so she'll be well-housed on arrival for "Ship of Fools." Vivien plays another Southern Belle, this time from Virginia. In "Gone" she was a Georgia gal; in "Streetcar" from Louisiana. . .

Johnnie Ray is back in New York after playing the Royal York hotel in Toronto. He's wanted for a tour of Canada; appears at Bucks County Playhouse in "Bus Stop." .. .

Benny Goffstein opens his new 5 million dollar hotel and gambling hall in downtown Las Vegas this October. He'll call it the Four Queens after his daughters.

Buster Keaton and Gloria Swanson will show you how Tony and Cleo would have been played as a silent on TV's Hollywood Palace Saturday. It's the first time they've worked together.

Local Women Commended For Safe Driving

Two local women have won commendations for safe driving and were recommended for the June Highway Safety Award presented by the Denver U.S. National Bank and Denver Post.

Mrs. Joan M. Gappa, 707 Sequoia, was issued a "congratulation" card by State Patrolman John Baker for operating her vehicle in an exceptionally careful, defensive manner.

Mrs. Peggy L. Sensing, 1215 Yosemite Dr., was issued a congratulation card by State Patrolman Kenneth W. Shiflet, for the same reason.

Motorists throughout Colorado will compete for the $100 prize. Selection of the winner will be based on alertness, foresight, driving ability, obedience to traffic regulations and other elements of careful, defensive driving.

"The Highway Safety Award program takes a positive approach to the problem of traffic safety by making examples of careful drivers who prevent countless thousands of accidents each year," said Gilbert R. Carrel, chief of the Colorado State Patrol.

Goodwill Industries Glad When Good Worker Quits

Unlike many employers who are disturbed when a top employe or key man leaves his job to go somewhere else, Goodwill Industries is happy about such a switch.

This is because Goodwill Industries' chief business is to provide handicapped persons, with the skill and talent to get jobs in normal industry and to keep them, according to Kenneth Olson, Goodwill executive director.

Last year, 96 persons made good use of Goodwill facilities at its sheltered workshop, 2307 W. Colorado Ave.

In its effort to convert the handicapped into self-reliant and productive workers, Goodwill transofrms household discards contributed by residents of the Colorado Springs area into useful, saleable merchandise. Goodwill Industries maintains three local sales outlets: 2307 W. Colorado Ave.; 2328 Platte Ave., and 112 E. Cucharras St.

Here are some samples of clothing, for instance, needed by Goodwill in its operations: trousers that might have shrunk as their owners age, shirts that acquired ventilation at the elbows, dresses that lost some of their buttons, coffee pots that have lost their "perk," tickless clocks, irons that may have lost their "steam," chipped dishes — these and countless other household items that might be damaged, outmoded, or outworn. All such articles are renovated and refurbished by the handicapped at Goodwill.

Those who apply to Goodwill for a job have one thing in common. They are unable to earn a living in society because they are handicapped. Following an interview and evaluation, they are placed in jobs deemed suitable for them as openings arise, and are gradually moved up to more complicated work up to more complicated work as they master the simple operations.

Though Goodwill employs 45 persons, there is a waiting list of applicants. To keep employes busy a great deal of cast-off clothing is required. Goodwill workers are on a standard 40-hour work week. The Department of Labor provides a sheltered workshop certificate allowing Goodwill to pay wages commensurate with a person's production.

Not all Goodwill workers have visible handicaps such as a missing leg or arm. Many are afflicted by emotional problems, mental retardation, or by no education. Such people are often more difficult to assist than those with apparent handicaps because employers generally have little or no patience with someone who appears normal but is unable to fill his niche properly.

For this reason, many of the handicapped who come to Goodwill never leave. Unable to overcome their handicaps sufficiently to make a go of it in competitive society, they remain in the sheltered workshop where they eaarn a modest but dignified living. They find encouragement also in the knowledge that they are not alone with their problem.

Residents of Colorado Springs and the surrounding area are invited to visit the local sheltered workshop and to inspect its operations. In this manner they'll be able to see for themselves just how the articles they contribute are processed for sale in Goodwill's three outlets.

$1,600 in Cold Cash Is Taken by Thief

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A Las Vegas housewife told police a thief raided her icebox and got away with $1,600 in cold cash.

Mrs. Stella Horton said Friday a neighbor had suggested putting money in an envelope in her refrigerator.

The theory: It would be safe from fire there and, besides, thieves never look in refrigerators for money.

Pikes Peak Region Yesterdays

By DORA FOSTER

My first remembrance of the South Cheyenne Canon was when a small child, I visited the house known as the Beckwith home, which was located close beside the road near the entrance where now stands a big arch over the road.

The Beckwith house was a small frame one put up to act as an eating place to travelers to the canon. I remember, dimly, also of Mrs. W. B. Jones, whose home is in Ivywild, coming across the creek from her tent where she was camping for a short while. The neighbors said she was getting rest. I remember she was a tall slender lady wearing an almost white dress. Her hair was almost red and she had a few freckles.

Mrs. Beckwith was a small, wiry lady with the most pointed elbows I have ever seen. I remember comparing them with mine and wondering how hers became so sharp. Her sleeves were rolled far above her elbows and she seemed to be always washing dishes. I do not remember Mr. Beckwith, although he was there. They had two children, Tom and Sylvia, both tall slender young people.

Sylvia was an ash-blond with long, beautiful hair wound around her head. She came often to our house to visit and we considered her the sweetheart of Tom Allen who, had a sister Lydia and brothers Charlie and Ben. None of the four were married, but Tom went often to see Sylvia, and I remember seeing them, a graceful couple, dancing together one evening at a party in our dining room. Mother made the remark to somebody that Sylvia "had too much sense to marry Tom Allen." She never did.

Tom worked downtown, either in the Express office or some other office similar to that, and brought up to our house a great roll of blank sheets that had been used in his office. I remember they had blue and red marks on the wrong side of them but the idea in bringing the papers to us was so my sister Helen could sketch pictures of his hounds, of which he had eight or 10 that he ran for exercise each morning before going to the office on the flats now known as Broadmoor.

He wanted to show the pictures that Helen had made of the dogs to his office friends downtown. He rode among the dogs like a real sportsman, dressed in natty clothes, all of which were new to me. I remember one small dog named Fannie, which was considered the best at chasing the rabbits on the flats.

I did not care for Tom's mother since one morning when I had accompanied my oldest sister, Edith, to the Allen house without my mother's knowledge, she said to me "I know what you had for breakfast." I knew, too, since by running my tongue out I could bring in a little egg.

Sister Lydia was very deaf and visited us often, and once, in going up the front steps, had her long shawl torn by our dog Carl, which we later had to have killed. He bit everybody besides the family.

Ben, the youngest Allen, later married Miss Nettie Harding, whose mother kept the boarding house across the creek from the Allen home.

Charlie Allen admired my older sister, Minnie, but my mother frowned on all of his attentions so he flirted with the school teacher, Miss Marian Kendle, who boarded at our house. He was very much of a dandy, with his expensive white collar and broad white cuffs, and he tipped his hat, a stiff derby, to us children as he passed us in our playhouses.

Lom Beckwith married and built two log cabins in the Corth Cheyenne Canon. The lower one, which my sister Helen spoke of as Tom's first cabin, is right across from the rock climbers seats. The second cabin was farther up the canon but I am not sure of its exact location. I asked Helen if they ever served meals from those homes but she said no, that they just lived there. They had one child but I don't remember anything about them.

One spring during a freshet, as my father called it, North Cheyenne Canon Creek almost wrecked the home of a little man, Robert Dixon, and his family, who, to save rent while working at odd jobs for the ranchers, put up a small cabin directly across the creek in the North Canon from where the Mount Cutler Trail begins. During that spring flood, the Dixon family ran out of provisions but being unable to cross the creek, the father, a very small man, was forced to climb the mountain back of him and come down north of the flood to our house. There were three children in the Dixon family but the waters, happily, did not reach the cabin.

This article is a mixture of Allen and Beckwith, but as a child they seem somewhat related to me. We had few neighbors in those early days but all seemed very friendly.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

VARIETIES OF DIZZINESS

True vertigo is a sensation of spinning or turning and usually is traceable to a disturbance in the balancing mechanism of the inner ear. When the eys are closed, the individual feels as though he were floating on air. When they are open, the room moves about while the person remains still.

Meniere's disease is the best known example of true vertigo. The episodes of dizziness last minutes or hours and are associated frequently with ringing in the ears, deafness, and nausea. To the best of our knowledge, the cause is distention of the labyrinth in the ear due to changes in circulation, inflamamation, or toxins.

The attack usually disappears spontaneously but recurrences can be expected months or years later. Treatment is not needed in transient attacks, lasting only a few seconds. But if symptoms persist or return at frequent intervals, a variety of drugs is available for relief.

Nicotinic acid is a favorite remedy for improving the circulation. The motion sickness remedies also are of value. Diamox or other diuretic reduce swelling and so does the elimination of salt from the diet. Sedatives and tranquillizers help quiet the individual and lessen anxiety.

The false type of dizziness is described as lightheadedness, walking on straw, or a sensation of sinking or fainting. As a rule, this condition results from deficient oxygen to the brain. Irregularities of the pulse may play a role, as for example, when the heart slows or stops beating momentarily. The individual becomes dizzy and may faint unless the beat returns to normal. Anemia and small strokes also cause this type of dizziness.

A drop in blood pressure on arising from bed also produces lightheadedness, especially in older persons with poor circulation. The blood vessels have lost their tone and the slight delay in delivering blood to the brain leads to dizziness. The manifestation can be avoided by getting up more leisurely.

Cigaret Cough

W. F. writes: I have developed a cough from smoking cigarets Does this mean I am more susceptible to tuberculosis or cancer than the average person?

Reply

Not necessarily, but cough means bronchitis and brings you a bit closer to cancer and other lung conditions.

Troublesome Vein

Mrs. L. B. writes: Is it a good idea to have a varicose vein operated on after an attack of phlebitis?

Reply

Yes. This can be done after all signs of infection subside and tests of the circulation show the vein is not functioning properly

Amebiasis

B. C. B. writes: Can the body eventually accept amebas if no treatment is given?

Reply

Larger Output

Mrs. L. writes: If a person is losing a lot of water by taking pills, what will drinking a lot of water do?

Reply

Increase the output, provided there is no increase in the salt intake.

Tumor is Noiseless

J. F. writes: Does a stomach tumor make a noise or a rocking movement?

Reply

Not as a rule. A certain amount of gurgling and allied noises is normal.

Science for You

By BOB BROWN

PROBLEM(Sharpen Scissors by "Cutting" a Drinking Glass.

THE SUPERSTITION: An old wives' method for sharpening scissors consists of rubbing them on a glass as if trying to cut it.

HOW TRUE The scissors may be sharpened somewhat if care is taken that the cutting edges rub against the glass in the correct way as shown. If the cutting edges rub the glass incorrectly, the procedure will dull the scissors.

A more reliable way is to place the scissors in a vise and file them as shown in the lower drawing.

Johnson and Truman Joke About Wives

NEW YORK (AP) — Presidential first ladies are no different from other wives in at least one way. Their husbands like to joke about them.

Former President Harry S. Truman, designated by President Johnson to be his representative with Mrs. Johnson at the funeral of King Paul of Greece, later met Johnson at the New York World's Fair.

Truman, writing on "My First 80 Years," in the Saturday Evening Post, said he remarked to Johnson:

"There aren't many men I'd let kiss my wife."

$30 Million Loss Is Claimed by Oil Producers

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Oil producers have lost more than $30 million since the beginning of 1963 through reductions in crude oil prices, and may lose $26 million more by the end of 1964, the Oil and Gas Journal reported Friday.

In a story appearing in its forthcoming issue, the journal said the loss "based on present reductions would reach more than $56 million during the two-year period ending in December."

Price cuts on crude have ranged from five to 18 cents per barrel, the journal said, and are now costing producers more than $118,000 per day and involve 1,850,000 barrels per day out of a total output of about 7,525,000 barrels daily. Crude prices now range from $1.25 to $3.30 per barrel.

The weekly magazine said its estimates were based on average cuts for posted prices.

Hardest hit have been the mid-continent area and the Rocky Mountain region, the journal said.

Estimates of per day lost revenue were placed at $8,200 in Kansas, $9,560 in the Rocky Mountain area, $5,270 in Oklahoma and $8,100 daily in west Texas, where prices were cut this week.

"Crude inventories are exceptionally high, but excess supply is not the only pressure," the magazine said. "Another stems from poor refinery realizations from gasoline and distillates."

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

The Revenue Act of 1964 effected major changes in both tax liabilities and the withholding rate. Therefore it is desirable for wage earners in the middle and upper wage brackets to review their pay - as - you - go status for 1964. Under our pay - as - you - go system the vast majority of taxpayers — typically two out of three — are entitled to refunds at the end of the year because the taxes withheld from their wages and quarterly payments on declarations of estimated tax exceed their liability.

A third of all taxpayers owe additional taxes at the end of the year. Attempting to provide withholding tailor - made to the needs of each individual taxpayer so he would come out "even" at the end of the year would of course be almost impossible and would impose a substantial hardship on both employes and employers.

The withholding rate dropped from 18 per cent to 14 per cent in March under the Revenue Act of 1964. This act provides for a two - step reduction in individual income tax liability rates the first to be effective for the calendar year 1964 the second for calendar year 1965. In the initial version of the bill passed by the House of Representatives there was also a two - step reduction in the withholding rate, the rate to be put into effect as of January 1964 was 15 per cent followed by a 14 per cent rate as of January 1965.

However since the Revenue Act was not adopted until late February 1964 the 13 per cent rate was necessarily continued during this interim. The overwithholding at the beginning of 1964 permitted immediate transition to the 14 per cent rate which was originally prescribed for 1965. This action relieved employers of having to make two successive changes one for the balance of 1964 and the other to take effect in 1965 and also avoided the additional overwithholding that would otherwise have occurred in 1964.

The combination of the 18 per cent withholding rate in effect through March 4, 1964 and the 14 per cent withholding rate in effect after that date (an average rate of 14.7 per cent for the year) will in some cases result in a reduction in withholding in excess of the reduction in total tax liability for 1964. Although most taxpayers will continue to receive refunds some who previously received small refunds will shift to a moderate balance due and others will owe larger balances than before. A similar situation would have occurred had the 15 per cent withholding rate in the House Bill been effective for 1964.

Those who, after reviewing their expected 1964 tax status, face probable balances due have alternative opportunities for adjustment available. Adjustments may be made by amending the quarterly declaration at one of the filing dates and increasing payments or by arranging for additional withholding by employers.

Because of variations in each individual tax situation it is difficult to generalize about the type of taxpayer who may have a significantly larger balance due. However, a rough rule - of - thumb is: A single person using the standard deduction and receiving all wage income who is above $5,000 could have a balance due that he may want to avoid. By the same token married couples using the standard deduction and with more than $10,000 of combined salary could also have balances due they may want to avoid. Generally taxpayers with income above these levels are required to file declarations of estimated tax.

It is emphasized that all taxpayers received a substantial tax cut under the law. Unless adjustments are made however, underwithholding will result in some instances in 1964. It should be noted that in 1965 the tax rate will drop further but the 14 per cent withholding rate will remain the same.

Should you have further questions, they will be answered by a call to our local office at 636-5171.

Sausage Stuffs These Savory Veal Steak Rolls

You've probably served beef rolls made with round steak, but have you tried veal rolls made from veal round?

Sausage is the stuffing for the veal rolls in the recipe. It's seasoned with sage and chopped onion and combined with fine bread crumbs. The veal steaks, cut into individual servings, are rolled around the sausage mixture as a jelly roll.

Meat cookery expert Reba Staggs suggests adding chili sauce to the liquid in which the veal rolls are slowly cooked This gives both the meat and gravy extra flavor elegance.

Sausage-Stuffed Veal Rolls

½ pound fresh (bulk) pork sausage
¼ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
⅛ teaspoon sage
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon water
3 tablespoons lard or drippings
½ cup chili sauce
¼ cup water

Cut steaks into 6 serving pieces. Combine flour, salt, pepper and sage. Dredge steaks in seasoned flour and pound steaks until ¼ inch thick. Brown sausage and onion lightly. Pour off drippings. Combine sausage-onion mixture, bread crumbs and water. Place approximately ¼ cup sausage mixture on each piece of steak. Roll as a jelly roll and fasten with wooden picks. Brown rolls in lard or drippings. Pour off drippings. Combine chili sauce and ¼ cup water and add to veal rolls. Cover tightly and cook slowly 45 minutes or until meat is done. 4 to 6 servings.

Fresh Pineapple Sundaes

1 large ripe pineapple
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Vanilla ice cream

Pare and slice pineapple; dice fine; there should be about 4 cups packed down. Add sugar and allow to stand at room temperature until sugar dissolves. Bring to a boil and let bubble for a few minutes. Cool; stir in vanilla; chill. Makes about 3 cups. Serve over vanilla ice cream.

Why a Rack?

What's the advantage of using a rack in an open roasting pan? It keeps the meat out of the drippings and permits the circulation of the heat under and around the meat.

Meat Leftovers in Salad

As warm weather approaches, food thoughts turn to crisp, cool salads. As a quick trick for making julienne-style meat pieces for salads, cut through several slices of meat at one time.

To remove a grease spot from an oak floor, place blotter over the spot, connect your electric iron and move it back and forth over the stain until the grease is absorbed.

Great Books Group to Read Famous Novel

The Wednesday evening Great Books group will meet from 8 to 10 p.m. in Margaret Reid's office at the public library, to begin its summer fiction reading with the novel, "Madame Bovary," which was written by Gustave Flaubert in 1856. Frances Ahalt and Kay Newton, as co - leaders, will direct the questioning for this discussion of the book which is said to have founded the realistic school in modern French fiction.

Mrs. Ahalt and Mrs. Newton will conduct this summer - fiction session with the same style of discussion as that used for the regular assignments in Great Books. Questions on three levels are designed to bring out (1) exactly what the author says, (2) how his words can be interpreted, and (3) how meanings may be applied in everyday living.

Other assignments in the novel will be decided upon for July and August, after which the group will return to the twice - monthly meetings on the second and fourth Wednesday evenings for its twelfth year of this program in adult education. The meetings will continue under the sponsorship of the public library with a new reading list to begin in September. All those interested in participating for any single session or for the series may call Myrtle Allen, 635-8540, or Margaret Gibson, 633-3397, for further information.

Broadmoor Garden Club Reveals Flower Show Plans

Members of the Broadmoor Garden Club, a small (48 active members) group of busy women who have spent much time and effort on the beautification of Colorado Springs since the club's founding in 1935, are now perfecting plans for their latest civic project, the Colorado Springs Flower and Garden Show to be held June 25 and 26 at the City Auditorium.

The club has grown since its founding which was by a group predominantly from the Broadmoor area. It is now composed of individuals from all over the community, with a membership more than half of whom lives in the city. City projects have always been a favorite with the membership, however, and include many civic plantings such as those at Colorado College, the Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center, center parkings on Cascade Avenue, and others. More than six hundred trees have been planted in parkings throughout the city through the club's annual tree planting program held in conjunction with the American G.I. Forum.

In line with the principles of the Garden Club of America, of which the Broadmoor Garden Club is a member, the club has concerned itself with conservation, anti-litter campaigns, and movements to control excess use of billboards. The Broadmoor Garden Club was host to the annual meeting of the Garden Club of America in Colorado Springs in 1956.

The latest project, the giant Flower and Garden Show, is a community-wide effort which has enlisted the enthusiasm and cooperation of more than a hundred local clubs, organizations and business firms. The show will open at 11 a.m. on June 25 with a brief ceremony, at which time the major awards will be presented. These are the Maria McKean Allen Gold Medal Award for the best garden in the show, a $50 award in memory of Mrs. Ira D. Waterman for the best horticultural exhibit, and the Marie Fox Potter Award for the best flower arrangement.

Hours of the show will be from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. on both days. A chuckwagon staffed by the Jaycee Wives will serve snacks continuously, and there will be indoor and outdoor tables. At 3:00 p.m. on both days there will be a style show of garden fashions.

Picnic Time Boosts Business

CHICAGO (UPI) — Advance reports from suppliers of foods, accessories and equipment indicate that the American public in 1964 will eat an increasing number of meals in parks, forest preserves, along roadsides or in backyards.

The American Bakers Association and the Wheat Flour Institute have collected these figures on what has happened to the picnic business since 1952:

—In 1952, casing makers reported sales of weiners at five billion; in 1963 at 12.5 billion. They expect higher sales in 1964.

—In 1952, sales of outdoor grills and braziers were reported at a few thousand dollars. Beginning in 1954 and continuing each year, sales climbed to above a quarter of a million dollars, and have reached new highs each year.

—Paper plate sales have quadrupled since 1952; charcoal annual sales moved from 50,000 tons to more than 200,000 tons each year. Sporting goods, sportswear and a wide variety of other items all have been influenced by the tendency to spend more time outdoors.

Add a light-hearted note to your vacation house with terry-cloth bath mats printed with such legends as "wet feet," and "be my guest." The mats are machine - washable. (Parisian Prints Inc., 7 West 40th St., New York, N.Y.).

Here's Help For Stitches

JOLIET, Ill. (UPI) — When sewing stretch fabrics, use a steam iron to preshrink them but do not apply pressure, advises Anne Sterling, of the American Institute of Laundering.

In cutting the pattern make sure the stretch goes in the desired direction and use sharp scissors to avoid any pulling, she said. To avoid marring the fabric use chalk for marking and place pins in the same direction as stretch.

Use a small, fine needle for a medium stitch. A small zig-zag stitch gives maximum stretch without breakage. The best type of thread to use is nylon for elasticity and strength. Don't sretch the fabric when stitching, says Mrs. Sterling. Finish seams by pinking and use a dressmaker's or turned - and-stitched hem.

Lt. Philip J. Horton Weds Miss Judith Kay Kinney

Miss Judith Kay Kinney and Lt. Philip Johnson Horton were united in marriage in a double ring military ceremony at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the United States Air Force Academy Chapel. Vows were read by Chaplain Harold D. Shoemaker.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jay Kinney of 3110 49th St., Lubbock, Tex., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Philip Horton, 1248 Diamond Ave., South Bend, Ind.

The bride was escorted to the altar and given in marriage by her father. She wore a formal length gown of Chantilly lace and delustered satin designed and made by the mother of the bride. The lace bodice featured a scalloped sabrina neckline outlined in seed pearls and iridescents. Long sleeves tapered to petal points and buttoned at the wrists. Appliques of Chantilly lace embroidered with seed pearls and iridescents adorned the skirt, which swept into a chapel train. A shoulder length veil of silk illusion fell from a flower of pearl clusters and she carried pink rosebuds and stephanotis.

Miss Janie Kinney, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Other attendants were Miss Jane Horton, South Bend, Ind., sister of the groom; Miss Karma Dobesh, Denver; and Miss Wilda McMenemy, Lubbock. They wore identical dresses of pink Shiffli embroidered batiste featuring jewel necklines, fitted bodices and bell-shaped skirts. Matching circlets secured brief veils. Attendants carried bouquets of daisies.

Serving as best man was Lt. Duane Andrews, Kinsington, Ga. Groomsmen were Lt. Gary Ryser, Concordia, Kan.; Lt. James Ingram, Lafayette, La.; and Cadet Don Hallenbeck, U.S. Air Force Academy.

Flowers in the chapel were altar arrangements of mums, gladioli, and carnations in pastel shades. Emerald palms flanked the altar.

For a honeymoon trip to New Orleans and the Atlantic Coast, Mrs. Horton chose a green linen suit, with matching accessories. Her corsage was a bird of paradise.

Mrs. Horton was graduated from Monterey High School, Lubbock, and Texas Technological College where she was a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, Mortar Board, Phi Kappa Phi, Mu Phi Epsilon, and President's Hostesses. She has been teaching in Colorado Springs.

Lt. Horton was graduated from Central High School, South Bend, and is a June graduate of the United States Air Force Academy.

They will be at home after Aug. 8 at Mesa, Ariz. where Lt. Horton will be stationed at Williams Air Force Base for flight training.

The mother of the bride wore a dress of pink lace with matching accessories. The mother of the groom was dressed in a powder blue batiste dress covered with white lace. Both mothers wore white orchid corsages.

Numbers Game Splits Niagara

The question: is June or September the month when more honeymooners come to Niagara Falls?

Once upon a time, there was no question. But recent figures indicate there's room for some doubt about claiming June as the month.

The local Chamber of Commerce at Niagara Falls, N.Y., still gets a bigger call for honeymoon certificates during June. But last year the Chamber of Commerce at Niagara Falls, Ontario, provided more newlyweds with certificates in September than it did in June.

The certificates are a tradition. Hundreds of thousands have been issued to newlyweds since the program was initiated two generations ago.

Roth-Wittrig Ceremony Held in Mennonite Church

The wedding of Miss Miriam Louise Wittrig and Delbert Dean Roth was held at 7 p.m. Friday, May 22, at Beth - El Mennonite Church.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Paul A. Wittrig, 1405 Prairie Rd. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Hilda Roth, Wellman, Ia.

The Rev. Wittrig escorted his daughter to the altar and performed the double ring ceremony, assisted by the Rev. Darrel Otto.

The center aisle of the church was decorated with white candles and streamers. Baskets of white gladioli and chrysanthemums, palms and candelabra were arranged on the altar.

Delmer Miller, of Denver, sang, "Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Mrs. Charles Spencer, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a waltz length gown of blue chiffon and tulle, with matching headpiece. Her flowers were feathered chrysanthemums.

Ellis Roth, of Des Moines, Ia., was best man. Ushers were Charles Spencer, of Denver, Robert Wittrig, of Whittier, Calif., and Jim Brenneman, of Woodland Park.

For her traveling costume, the bride selected a two piece blue wool suit with white accessories and a gardenia corsage. After a wedding trip to Yellowstone Park and the Grand Tetons, the couple will reside in Denver.

Friends and relatives from Iowa, Nebraska and California attended the wedding.

TO DANCE IN 'RED SHOES' — Mary Jo Costantini and Ken Corwin will have leading roles in "Red Shoes" and "Ruses d'Amour" to be presented by Barbara Smith in her annual dance recital.

Three Ballets to Be Staged In Annual Dance Recital

The varied moods of the ballet will be portrayed on the stage of the Fine Arts Center Theatre on June 12 as the students of Miss Barbara Smith present their annual recital. The younger students will perform the lighthearted La Boutique Fantasque. Ruses d'Amour and The Red Shoes will be done by the older students.

Opening the program will be La Boutique Fantasque, a character ballet with music by Rossini, arranged by Respighi. It is the gay and colorful story of a fantastic toyshop where the dolls come alive after midnight. When two of the dolls are sold, the other dolls thwart the shopkeeper and the customers in their efforts to complete the sale.

The cast leads for La Boutique Fantasque are:

Shopkeeper	Gorgonio Alvarado
Can Can Girl	Ethel May Johnson
Can Can Boy	Terry Robrahn
Melon Hakwer	Helen Louie
Snob	Guillermo Alvarado
Poodles	Kathleen Andrews Nancy Thompson
Thief	Jo Lynn Dawson
Russian Merchant	Patty Etheridge
His Wife	Shelley Singer
American Gentleman	Joy Shelton
His Wife	Kate Bennett
English Ladies	Tam Walsky Randy Nielson

Girl	Barbara Rood
Shoemaker	Mike Kempf
Lover	Ken Corwin Gardner

In a traditional and melodramatic mood is Ruses d'Amour by Glazounov, which was first produced at the Hermitage Theatre in St. Petersburg on Jan. 17, 1900. This delightful story, about love's trickery, is centered around a young duches, engaged at birth to a marquis she has never seen. She conceives a test to see at their first meeting whether she is courted for herself or for her fortune. She changes places with her lady in waiting. After a charming deception, true love triumphs.

Leads for Ruses d'Amour will be:

Isabelle	Mary Jo Costantini
Marinnette	Jill Shelton
The Duchess	Kathy Mattson
The Marquis	Ken Corwin Gardner
Gentleman-in-Waiting	Juan Archuletta

Costume research for "Ruses d'Amour" by Mrs. R. G. Matteson; and resource material for "Sarabande" in "Ruses d'Amour" is by Mrs. Lloyd Shaw.

The older students have developed their own choreography under Miss Smith's direction. All students were selected for their parts by dancing at April tryouts before three judges who made the assignments. The judges were Colin Thorps for musical expression, Ann Hallesy of the Air Force Academy and Helen Stammen for background in ballet technique.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Heloise:

My uncle came up with a really splendid idea. He cut a piece peg board to fit over one side of our double kitchen sink.

I use this board for cutting watermelon, salad greens and various other things. Any surplus water drains through the holes to the sink. Eliminates water on the kitchen sideboard, cutting board, etc. —Mary D.

Wonder if your uncle is looking for any more nieces? —Heloise:

Dear Heloise:

When I sew on fancy trims or rickrack, I put a strip of waxed paper over it. This way I can see where I am sewing and the ends don't turn up under my presser foot.

After you have finished stitching, just pull the waxed paper off. —An Ardent Reader

Before pulling off that waxed paper, try pressing the rickrack with a warm iron first. Every little corner irons perfectly. I always pre-shrink my rickrack before using it. Saves puckers. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

This is my husband's idea so I had better give credit where it is due.

To feed a small baby in your arms can be a problem, but is made simple if you put his nearest arm behind you, and hold his other hand in yours.

You still have one free hand to feed him with —D. Johns

Dear Heloise:

Here's a helpful hint for anyone who has to pack their husband's lunch:

I freeze all fruits in summer in the junior size baby food jars, then when the hot weather comes I pack a jar of it in the center of my husband's lunch box-right from the freezer.

By lunch time the fruit is thawed just right for eating and also his sandwiches, etc., are kept cool and no chance of them spoiling in the hot box. —Mrs. G .Gaddis, Sr.

Dear Heloise:

Every year, after washing my blankets, I add a cup of mothballs to the rinse water.

The mothballs dissolve in the warm water, thus distributing evenly among the blankets. This gives them storage protection. —Amy Vaden

Dear Heloise:

When I am expecting company I make ice cubes in advance and place them in plastic bags. I store these in my freezer so that the bag does not touch any of the steel surfaces. —D. S.

Also, when a neighbor wants to borrow a tray of ice you do not have to worry about getting your good tray back! —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

I solved the problem of grease splatters on my kitchen floor. Here's what I did:

I crocheted an oval rug (not a heavy one, any rag rug would do) about 16" x 21", which is easy to suds out. But after I suds it out, I squeeze undiluted liquid starch through it and smooth it out on the linoleum while it is still sopping wet and let it dry there. (Note: linoleum. NOT asphalt. Heloise)

The starch works two ways . . . it makes the rug easy to wash out AND it pastes the rug to the floor so that it doesn't slip, keeping it from wrinkling up. And OH! the grease splatters it catches. —Penny Robinson

What's New

United Press International

No complaints about who gets the biggest hamburger when a new patty presser is used to shape them. The hand-operated chrome-plated press makes five patties from one pound of meat. (Foodco Appliance Corp., Waterloo, Ind.).

Stop the annoyance of water dribbling up your arm while washing walls or woodwork above your head. Try new household rubber gloves made with deep cuffs designed to catch and hold any excess of suds or rinse water. For further convenience, the palm and finger surfaces have a non-slip tread finish.

Formal lace-like plastic tablecloths have taken on an even grander air with a new type of gold translucent backing film that gleams through the open pattern. This laminated backing protects the table top and provides a smooth surface for after-meal sponging. (Lay-Cee Corp., 432 Park Ave., South, New York 16, N.Y.).

New form-fitting diapers combine comfort, increased absorbency and high-style, the manufacturer reports. The center-third of the pre-folded diaper is woven to react differently to washing than the rest of the diaper. After washing, it pulls itself in, forming the hour-glass shape that fits baby without bulking or bunching. (Chix Baby Products, New York, N.Y.).

Tuberous begonias planted in red clay pots are increasingly popular as bright red indoor decorative touches for shady windows. The plants thrive in shade, and bloom continuously.

Public Invited to View Famous Iris Gardens Today

The townspeople of Colorado Springs will have an opportunity to see first hand two exceptional hybrid iris gardens in the community today. These are the garden of Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Adams at 3927 N. Linden Circle, Cragmor, and the two gardens of Dr. and Mrs. Phillip Loomis at 1414 N. Culebra Ave., and 1330 N. Walnut St. They are the gardens of men who have spent years developing new and exciting varieties of hybrid iris.

Loomis iris have a national reputation. The doctor's "Elmohr" iris, a mulberry red variety of heroic scale was accorded the Dykes medal in 1945 by the American Iris Society. His beautiful all white bloom "Spanish Peaks" has received the society's Award of Merit. A new yellow, "Aspenglow" served as the excuse for bestowing the AIS President's Cup on Dr. Loomis at last year's national AIS convention. Now in his 88th year, Dr. Loomis is still producing new iris seedlings, with this year's crop reaching its peak of bloom this week at the Walnut St. garden.

Dr. Adams, a young man,, is pursuing the same illusive goals with one of the world's oldest flowers. His garden, bared to bright sun and arid conditions on a Cragmor ridge, has at present more than 2000 iris seedling under scrutiny.

A third hybridizer's garden,, that of Dr. J. H. Brown at 1015 N. Bonfoy Ave. was to have been included in the tour. However, Dr. Brown has asked that his garden be withdrawn from the show. Due to a complete transplanting of his garden last fall, this year's crop of blooms is below normal. He reports that there will be more to see in a few weeks as his roses come into bloom.

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI) — The stenographer spread is a statistical fact.

Researchers for the du Pont Co. found it out when they set forth to determine how much give should be built into the numerous stretch fabrics now on or coming to market in the apparel industry.

The amount of stretch given a fabric should be determined by its use, du Pont figured. Ergo, a man's sport coat does not need to stretch as much as a woman's foundation garment.

In measuring the stretch of the skin itself, researchers found that as the body moves, the average lateral or east-west movement is about 15 per cent across the shoulders; 19 per cent around the elbow; 13 per cent around the knee; and 5 per cent or so across the seat when sitting.

Student Starts Global Forum On Shoestring

By IVAN ZVERINA

NEW YORK (UPI) — A Cleveland coed, 18, who always wanted to help international exchange of ideas, has done just that. She has started a magazine that she hopes will become the forum for it.

Barbara Behrendt, freshman at Western Reserve University, Cleveland, says she wanted to "create an international high school and college publication in which young people all over the world would have the opportunity to voice their opinions on matters important to themselves and to other young people."

The magazine was to be her "forum for ideas" and she called it Interscola. The first issue is out — a professional looking 12-page publication containing reprints from school magazines or original contributions from students from a dozen countries.

A few samples:

Shukichi Hasimoto, of Tokyo, writes that politics has no place in international sports. "Right now socialism and capitalism are splitting up the world. But I feel that we must give up politics for sports—especially international sports, such as the Olympic games."

An editorial from the Zuercher Mittelschul-Zeitung of Switzerland appeals to society to hear the juvenile delinquents for they, too, are "part of our society . . . our attention must not be limited to what we can read in the police reports."

Indira Gandhi, daughter of India's Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, in an interview reprinted from a high school newspaper in India, scored what she called the "herd instinct among teen-agers."

"Nobody makes an effort to see whether something is good or bad. They just go along with the group, thus losing much of their individuality." Mrs. Gandhi adds, however, "teenagers shouldn't be told what to do. There is so much to be done. They should look around themselves and see what is to be done and then do it."

". . . we do need more people who are willing to write poetry if they feel like it, play the piano, play chess, listen to classical music, and who are not ashamed of it. We need people who are not afraid of being what they are and who will not be intimidated by laughter."

To Miss Behrendt, editing the magazine comes easier after her training as editor-in-chief of the Vixen, the newspaper of the Fox Lane High School in Bedford, N.Y., which she attended before going to Cleveland. In Bedford, she initiated an international exchange of high school newspapers.

She said fan mail has been enthusiastic on the whole and requests range from addresses of pen pals to photographs and souvenirs of the United States.

But Ricardo Coutinho of Bahia, Brazil, is suspicious.

Opening lead: King of ♡

With my natural inclination towards straightforward bidding methods, it may seem strange that I should provide today a bidding diagram as complex as the one you see before you. The sequence of bids is recorded, let me add, exactly as it took place. It involves a lot of plain and fancy bidding, yet I would not be quick to take issue with it. It must be conceded that North and South had a difficult hand to bid.

Take North's first response for example. What is his best call when partner opens with one spade? A response of two notrump is not acceptable without a heart stopper. The hand is much too good for a single spade raise and not the type for a jump to three spades. The way out of the dilemma was to postpone the decision by making a temporizing bid. Since South must bid again when North names a new suit, he chose to bid two clubs.

South curiously enough chose to resort to exactly the same type of strategy. North's highly acceptable response raised South's blood pressure to slam pitch and he flashed the signal with a jump in a new suit, the accepted method for announcing immediate slam intentions. From then on North showed mere preferences and South contracted for a slam in spades.

The king of hearts was opened and South ruffed the second lead of the suit. He extracted trumps, cashed his high card tricks and announced that he was conceding a diamond trick to the opposition because he found it inedible. North may have been impressed with his partner's bon mot but not with his dummy technique. South complained of North's vigorous tained no ace and no distribution. North properly pointed out that, if his partner had not held the North hand in such contempt, he would have fulfilled the contract, by the simple expedient of converting North into the master hand.

We concur. Twelve tricks were there if South had chosen to look upon his own hand as the dummy. After ruffing the second heart, declarer enters North with a club and ruffs another heart with the king of spades. Dummy is entered again with the jack of spades and the last heart ruffed with the ten of spades. The ace of spades is now cashed and dummy is entered with a diamond and the queen of spades pulls West's last trump, on which South parts with the three of diamonds. Now all of the North-South cards are good.

Household Hints

United Press International

An ironing board cover fits snugly when put on while damp. It stays smooth and clean longer if dipped in a medium solution of starch before being stretched on the board.

Sift powdered sugar quickly and easily by brushing it through the sieve with a long-bristled pastry brush.

Attach a short curtain rod to the back of baby's high chair. Hang bib and damp washcloths on it.

Have a snagged sweater? Run a needle, threaded with a contrasting color, through the snag and knot securely. Then, pull thread and snagged yarn back through to the wrong side. Clip thread. Do not cut yarn.

One cup of vinegar added to one gallon of warm water cleans varnished wood beautifully. The gloss of the varnish is not impaired.

When making drop cookies, butter the bottom of a tumbler, dip it in granulated sugar, then use it to press cookies flat. The tumbler must be dipped into sugar for each cookie, and scraped and rebuttered occasionally.

Broadmoor Nursery School Closes for Summer Season

The Broadmoor Cooperative Nursery School celebrated its first year with a picnic Thursday at the Broadmoor Community Church. Parents of the children, parents of prospective students and friends attended.

The nursery school which offers extensive creative work in art, music, science, and dramatic play will resume again in September at the Broadmoor Community Church. The primary goal of the school is to help the young child of three and four years old to become comfortable in a group situation before entering into a more exacting elementary school program. In order that each child may have the necessary individual attention, the groups are kept small.

The program is under the direction of Mrs. William McPhee, who has for many years worked with pre-school children in Boston, Denver, and Colorado Springs. Assisting Mrs. McPhee next September will be Mrs. J. William McIntosh. The mothers of each of the students are also called upon to help as their time permits.

At the closing picnic celebration it was announced that Mrs. Jules Holmes will be the president of the parents group for the next school year. She will be assisted by Mrs. R. D. VonEngeln, vice - president; Mrs. James F. Ruddell, secretary; and Mrs. Gilbert R. Johns, treasurer.

Officers for the first year have been Mrs. Donald Higginbotham, president; Mrs. Glenn Brooks, vice - president; Mrs. Naomi Arvan, secretary; and Mrs. Gordon Ingraham, treasurer.

Parents interested in obtaining further information concerning the Broadmoor Cooperative Nursery School are urged to call Mrs. McPhee, 632-7997, or the Broadmoor Community Church.

Furry Friend

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Smokey the Bear preaches a compelling short sermon: "Wildfires in the out-of-doors hurt America." His goal is to eliminate them as a threat to America's welfare and economy.

Pearly Rings Seal Romance

NEW YORK (UPI)—A number of contemporary brides-to-be want cultured pearls rather than diamonds in their engagement rings.

This facet of the ring business came to light in a study made for the diamond industry (by N. W. Ayer). Another highlight of the survey: the trend to pearls is being set by young engaged girls, and women betrothed to men who have been married before.

There are some very logical reasons for the trend, reports the Cultured Pearl Association of Japan.

Young girls who get engaged, and more of them do every year, don't deny they'd like to have a big bright diamond on that third finger left hand. But with prices of diamonds up, they know their young men cannot afford an impressive looking real stone.

So they ask for large cultured pearls which make a better showing than a tiny diamond, about the only size many young Romeos can afford.

Quadrangle Wins Belmont

BETWEEN THE LINES

by Loy Holman

Local Sports Review

With the graduation ceremonies of this past week, nostalgia of the bygone weeks and months of school sets in, especially among the seniors, leaving the halls of learning for the last time.

So it is when the end of the school year passes that many look back on what has happened with their various teams representing the most memorable events.

Locally, with students scattered for the summer, the brisk pace of the past nine months quiets to the more liesurely activities under the Colorado sun. But the cycle continues and before we know it it'll be time to bust out the school colors and warm the vocal cords for cheering on your favorites.

Looking back, it was a year of extremes with high and low points in all sports. This, of course, fits the jig-saw that makes interscholastic sports so exciting for participants and spectators, alike.

Football always sets the pace for the whole school year with its excitement of physical contact on the playing field, the color of pom-pom girls and bands on the sidelines and fun of merely joining the crowd in the three-ring circus of a stadium.

With its coast-to-coast schedule against many of the most glamorous teams in the country, the Air Force Academy naturally takes top billing in this region. And the Falcons this year rcording one of their most thrilling seasons in the school's still short history.

At home, there was nothing to compare to the last-minute blitz put on by quarterback Terry Isaacson and his mates as they came from behind in the dying moments of the opening game to upset the University of Washington. Those who were in Falcon Stadium that day can undoubtedly still remember the suspense as Terry and his Pirates completed pass after pass in real pro fashion in a race with the clock bfeore Isaacson himself finally scampered the final yards for the winning touchdown in the 10-7 victory.

There was still a topper for that, however, at least for the lucky ones that were able to make the trek to Lincoln, Neb., a few weeks later. In that one the Falcons were up against even bigger (in poundage and all-round ability) odds with the gigantic Cornhuskers. And again it was Isaacson who provided the top thrill as he winged a 38-yard pass to swift sophomore end Fritz Greenlee for the winner with the last seconds ticking quickly on the scoreboard clock. That 17-13 game was the only one Nebraska, Big Eight and Orange Bowl champ, lost during the season.

Those were the high points But on the other side, at least the boosters in blue had complete frustration when Army pulled the same sort of come-from-behind heroics in the 14-10 loss at Chicago's Soldier Field. And it was ironic that while the Falcons were able to win a couple they weren't supposed to, Southern Methodist and Maryland proved the upset can backfire.

The season had a rather dismal finish after the Cadets had almost revered pre-season predictions by ringing up a 7-3 won-lost record. That came in the fateful Gator Bowl game against North Carolina where a combination of events led to a 35 to zilch beating. The final regular game of the season was delayed by the death of President Kennedy, and this resulted in accomrida and apparent dissension on the team from less-than-opponent's comforts.

Otherwise, Colorado College suffered through another year without the incentive of scholarships for athletes and it was reflected in the Tigers less than skimpy record of 2-7-1. One bright spot was the humerous but effective self-publicised antics of Steve (Sudden Death) Sabol, the Flash of Zot from Possom Trot.

The preps were highlighted by the greased - gear scoring machine from Cheyenne Mountain that ripped through the Pikes Peak League with an average score of nearly 50 points per game and then the first state

Class AA title in the school's history. Wasson and Palmer put on a season-long top show, especially in their annual intracity rivalry, but finished 2-3 in the final league standings.

During the winter months, the show went indoors, but it didn't slow the pace very much.

Frustration hit the Air Academy as the Falcons were unable to win the close ones in basketball and they finished up with an 11-12 season for only the second losing season in Coach Bob Spear's stay at the school. This included losing seven games by the margin of three points or less and three of those were by a single point.

However the Cadets toppled haughty Colorado State U. in a thriller on the Ft.Collins court and salvaged some prestige out of the visit to Jacksonville by taking second in the annual Gator Bowl tournament. The lowest point was the late-season loss at Wyoming which set a new school record for margin of defeat (24 points).

Again feeling the effects of former school president Benezet's "encouragement" of athletics CC didn' need a full hand of fingers to count its victories in basketball. And among the high schools, Cheyenne again captured the cage title in the Pikes Peak League but finished behind Salida in the playoffs. Palmer and Wasson were also-rans in the South Central, and St. Mary's fell from the heights of the Denver Parochial League standings.

Perhaps the top thrills were provided by CC's new coach, Bob Johnson, and his hockey team that battle down to the last game for a spot in the playoffs — despite fewer experienced players than in the last 10 years or so. Johnson brought a "new look" to the Tigers, and to say the least, it was a pleasant surprise to see the results of hard work at fundamentals.

The school was rewarded their first All-American since Bill (Red) Hay who is now with the Chiacgo Black Hawks, as ever-hustling winger Johnny Simus made the mythical squad in addition to the Western League all-stars.

Johnson's efforts toward improving the sports scene at CC carried over into the springtime and the Bengals came up with their first winning season in the memory of even the old timers of the region. They finished second in the Rocky Mountain Conference, but perennial champ Colorado State College was undoubtedly feeling relief by the end of the season that this was CC's final go-round as a member of the RMC.

The best baseball came from the Academy, and here again it was the product of a first-year coach. Connie Sparks worked a minor miracle in using a tiny pitching staff through a regular season 22-3 record with the climax coming in a two - game sweep over CSC for the area crown in the NCAA playoffs.

The top individual will be back again next year as hard-hitting junior third baseman Jim Steed paced a frious AFA team batting average of .340 with team tops in all offensive categories. In fact, only three of the regular starters from this year's squad will also be back again . . .which sort of puts the pressure on Sparks to better his first season's mark.

Prep - wise, Cheyenne was again the best of the PPL and Eldon Helm closed out his coaching career by moving the Indians to the state finals. Wasson and Palmer again had to settle for next-best, but it was a race to the wire after loging a couple of flukish games to SCL titlist Pueblo Centennial.

On the cinders, only one home meet at the Academy spoiled what might have been the Falcons best-ever season. But as it was, they had record snappers in distance runner Jim Murphy, only a soph, and the country's swiftest foursome

Cincinnati Blanks Cards, 3-0

CINCINNATI (AP)—John Tsitouris and Sammy Ellis combined on a five-hitter Saturday night as Cincinnati blanked St. Louis 3-0, two of the runs scoring on Jerry Buchek's error in the first inning.

Tsitouris left the game in the eighth when his arm tightened after rain forced a 22-minute delay. Ellis retired the Cardinals on two hits in the final two innings.

The Reds scored all of their runs in the first off Ray Washburn who pitched a four-hitter. Tommy Harper's single, a hit batsman and Gordy Coleman's double brought in the first run.

After a walk to Frank Robinson loaded the bases, Buchek fumbled John Edwards' two-out grounder, allowing Vada Pinson and Cleman to score.

All of the hits off Tsitouris were singles, two in the fourth and two in the seventh. The Cardinals laaded the bases with one out in the fourth, but Tsitouris, now 2-3, induced Johnny Lewis to force Bill White at the plate and got Buchek on a fly to Pinson.

After the first inning, Washburn gave only singles to Edwards in the fourth and Tsitouris in the fifth. He suffered his third defeat in five decisions.

Ycaza Knew He Won

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Manuel Ycaza, who ruined Northern Dancer's bid for horse racing's Triple Crown by riding Quadrangle to a surprise victory in the Belmont Stakes Saturday, knew he was home with one-quarter of a mile to go.

"This was the most relaxed ride I ever had," said the little Panamanian jockey who picked up more than $11,000 in 2:28 2-5 for his share of the purse. "I never worried for one minute until I saw Northern Dancer coming fast on the outside and running third.

"I was a little bit worried then, so I hit my horse, but not too hard. He doesn't respond to the whip, you see. So I hit him lightly twice and he really let out. Man, did he fly! I knew we were home then.

"I kept calling to him 'Let's get the Belmont, let's get the Belmont.'"

Quadrangle, 3-year-old son of Cohoes, finished two lengths ahead of Roman Brother, with Northern Dancer, 4-5 favorite off his victories in the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, third, four lengths behind.

Bill Hartack, who had ridden the Canadian-bred Northern Dancer in the Derby and Preakness, took the defeat graciously.

"We have no excuses," he said. "He tried hard. He showed he could run a mile and a half, but not fast enough."

Asked if he was disappointed over his failure to sweep the Triple Crown, Hartack said:

"How could it be a disappointment? My horse ran his heart out for me. I'm sorry he didn't win but I'm by no means disappointed. He just wasn't good enough."

Hartack, who has had his tiffs with newspapermen, couldn't resist giving the press a slight dig.

I knew we were in trouble when all the newspapermen picked us," he said with a grin.

Hartack said he knew he was licked "when I couldn't take the lead at the turn for home. I knew then he couldn't do it."

Ycaza, who was 27 in January, was making his fourth ride in the Belmont. Twice he had finished third, with Guadalcanal in 1961 and Crimson Satan in 1962.

The little fellow, touching two carnations he had taken from the horse's victory garland—"one for my wife and one for my son, Manuelito" — never stopped singing the praises of his horse.

Quadrangle Acquainted With Jockeys

NEW YORK (AP)—Quadrangle, surprise winner of Saturday's Belmont Stakes, is well acquainted with jockeys. In a 14-race career he has had six different riders, including Manuel Ycaza, who piloted him to a two length triumph in the Belmont.

He has won for Braulio Baeza and Bill Hartack in addition to Ycaza.

Hartack won the Wood Memorial this year with the Rokeby Stable colt. Quadrangle was fifth in the Derby with Bobby Ussery, fourth in the Preakness with Baeza and second in the Metropolitan Handicap with Hartack before winning the Belmont.

Denies Dancer Triple Crown

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Quadrangle, a strapping bay colt from Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stables, spoiled Northern Dancer's bid for the Triple Crown Saturday when he won the 96th running of the $154,600 Belmont Stakes by two lengths at Aqueduct.

Northern Dancer, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, and the odds-on choice of the record Belmont Stakes crowd of 61,215, had to settle for third place as Roman Brother, the mighty mite from Louis Wolfson's Harbor View Farm came up for second place, four lengths in front of the Canadian-owned Dancer.

Manuel Ycaza sent Quadrangle over the grinding 1½-mile distance in 2:28 2-5 after racing close to the pace from the start. He earned $110,850, boosting his total winnings to $340,499. The Rokeby Stable colt, a son of Cohoes-Tap Day, by Bull Lea, had finished fifth in the Kentucky Derby and fourth in the Preakness before he came back a week ago for a powerful second against older horses in the Metropolitan Mile.

But Saturday was his day as he turned back the bid of Northern Dancer in a great stretch run.

Bill Shoemaker, astride the Hill Rise from George A. Pope Jr.'s El Peco Ranch, lodged a claim of foul against Bill Hartack, up on Northern Dancer. Shoemaker claimed the Dancer came over on his horse rounding the final turn, but the stewards allowed the order of finish to stand. That placed Brave Lad fifth, Orientalist sixth, Determined Man seventh and Shook eighth.

Quadrangle, trained by Elliott Burch, paid $15.10, $6.80 and $2.70. Roman Brother, an 889-pound package of dynamite piloted by Fernando Alvarez, paid $8.10 and $2.90. Northern Dancer, who went off the 4-5 choice, was $2.10 to show.

"He was running easy and could have taken the lead at any time," Ycaza said of his winner. "Orientalist, in front most of the way, was trying to bear out, but I decided not to make the move until I heard Northern Dancer coming on the outside at the three-eighths pole.

"Then I let him go. I hit him a couple of times and he pulled away.

"This horse has all the ability in the world. He can beat any horse in the land."

Orientalist, a 40-1 shot, showed the field through the first mile with a half mile in 49 seconds, the six furlongs in 1:14 4-5 and the mile in 1:39 2-5. But Ycaza had Quadrangle within striking distance from the start and Hartack never was far off the pace with Northern Dancer.

With one-half mile to go, Quadrangle was ready to take the lead from Orientalist with Northern Dancer less than a length back and Roman Brother lapping over him. At that point Hill Rise also was well-placed.

Rounding the final bend with one-quarter of a mile to go, Quadrangle started to open up daylight with Roman Brother second and the Dancer on the move.

For one-sixteenth of a mile it looked as if the Dancer would stage another of his sizzling finishes and give the sport its first Triple Crown winner since Citation in 1948, but Quadrangle was full of run.

His margin with one-eighth of a mile to go was only half a length but he crossed the line running strongly as Roman Brother came up to take second place from the tiring Dancer.

The second-place finish was worth $25,000 to Roman Brother's owner, Taylor won $12,500 for Northern Dancer's third and Hill Rise won $6,250 for fourth.

Tony Lema Leads Thunderbird Golf Tournament Field by Three Strokes

By WILL GRIMSLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — Champagne Tony Lema pulled off another dramatic eagle in the clutch for a two-under-par 70 Saturday and increased his lead to three strokes through the third round of the $100,000 Thunderbird Golf Classic. He had a 54-hole score of 205, 11 under par.

Just when pursuers were breathing hotly down his neck the slender slylist from San Leandro, Calif., rolled in a 20-foot eagle putt on the ninth hole, and the pressure was off.

Defending champion Arnold Palmer, his putter ice cold, dropped from the running with a 74 for 213, eight shots off the pace, but big Jack Nicklaus rallied for a 68 which put him back into the fight at 210.

When Lema knocked in a four-foot putt for a hard-earned par on the final hole, he found himself three shots ahead of former footballer Mike Souchak and Bobby Nichols, tied at 208 going into Sunday's climactic round for the $20,000 first prize.

Nichols, starting off with a 20-foot birdie putt and scrambling most of the way, shot a 70. Souchak, the one-time Duke university end, fired a 71.

Big George Bayer came out of the pack with a streak of four birdies in a row for a strong move at the lead, but he three putted two of the last three holes — the 16th and 18th — for a 68 which put him into a three-way tie at 209.

At the 209 figure also were Ken Venturi, San Francisco's hard-luck guy who, with Souchak, started the way two shots back of Lema, and Bob Duden, the little Portland, Ore., pro who putts croquet-style.

Venturi shot an even par 72, after a front nine 37, and Duden came in with his second straight 70.

Nicklaus, playing better golf each day after an opening round 73, was tied at 210 with U.S. Open champion Julius Boros, Tommy Jacobs — each shooting a 71 — and Phil Rodgers, who had 72.

The third round over the hilly, 6,573-yard Westchester Country Club course started under cloudy skies in winds that whipped up gusts of 20 miles an hour. It was drizzling slightly when Lema came in with the final threesome.

Lema started out conservatively, playing even par golf as if daring his pursuers to catch him.

Bayer, Rodgers and Nichols were making threatening gestures when Lema, after shooting eight consecutive pars, came to the uphill, 480-yard ninth hole, a par five.

The tall Californian split the fairway with a 260 yard dribe and then laced a four-wood to the green 20 feet from the cup.

He rolled in the putt for his eagle while a large part of the record 18,986 gallery was lined along the fairway and hugging the green.

The spectacular shot was reminiscent of the two he made on the finishing holes Friday when he birdied the 17th and eagled the 18th and surged past a tightly packed field into first place.

Lema took three putts on the 11th for his only bogey. But he got the stroke right back on the par five 12th which he birdied with two putts from 12 feet, almost sinking his second eagle.

He parred in the rest of the way, scrambling from the rough on the final hole to salvage his par.

Souchak, who already has won two tournaments this year but failed to qualify for the U.S. Open two weeks hence, played an erratic round. He had consecutive bogeys at the third and fourth, but he rallied with birdies at the fifth, 10th and 12th.

Nichols, wild occasionally off the tee, was all over the premises during his round but three big putts — 20, 14 and 10 feet —helped bring him home two under par.

Palmer, who hopes to add the National Open to his Masters crown later this month, was upset over his play, saying, "Its' a crime to putt as poorly as I did."

He took a fat six on the easy, par five 12th, hitting a bad two-iron and then taking four from the edge. Then he had a double bogey five at the short 16th, where he overclubbed, got behind some trees and then missed a two-foot putt.

Lema acknowledged that he was playing it safe, protecting his lead.

The man who springs for champagne after every tournament victory promised the lip-smacking press:

"I sure hope I'm in here Sunday night. Bring your sleeping bags. We're going to have a ball. It will be a long evening."

Camien, Hays Sets Marks In NAIA Championship

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP)—Tireless John Camien and favored Bob Hayes led an assault on National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics records at the 13th running of its track and field championships here Saturday night.

Camien, running easily, outdistanced the field in the 1,500-meter run to set his second record of the meet. Friday night the Emporia, Kan., State distance ace set a new standard of 4:25.0 in the 5,000-meter run.

Camien's time of 3:48.3 snapped an eight-year record of 3:51.3 set by Billy Tidwell of Emporia in 1956.

Hayes, the Florida A&M flash, got off to a quick jump in the 100-meter run and finished four yards ahead of Ed Roberts, North Carolina College. Hayes clipped a tenth of a second off the 10.3 mark set by Bobby Morrow of Abilene Christian in 1956.

Don Owens, Grambling College, La., who tied the meet 400-meter mark Friday night, set a record with a clocking of 46.6. The previous high was also shared by Bill Miller of Southern U., set in 1960.

For the second straight night running conditions were near perfect with temperatures in the 70s and wind between four and eight miles an hour.

In a triple-jump preliminary, Norman Tate of North Carolina College jumped 51-9 for a new mark. The fine leap, on his third try, was only a quarter of an inch off the American collegiate mark set by Luthern Hayes, University of Southern California, in 1961.

In the shotput, Lee Johnson, University of Redlands, Calif., upset NAIA titlist Dave Price of California Western. Johnson put the shot 58-5 to edge Price by two inches.

In other events, Gary Wilson of Oklahoma Baptist won the 800-meter run, Roger Morgan, Northeast Louisiana State, took the 110-meter high hurdles and Ed Roberts of North Carolina College won the 200-meter dash.

Roger Sayers, Omaha University, defending champion in the 100- and 200-yard events, was not able to run because of a severely pulled leg muscle.

Frank Howard of the Los Angeles Dodgers hit National League home runs in nine parks last season. He failed to get a four bagger in Houston.

Tigers Top Sox; End Losing Streak

CHICAGO (AP) — Dick McAuliffe scored on Ron Hansen's error with two out in the ninth inning Saturday, giving Detroit a 4-3 triumph over the Chicago White Sox that ended the Tigers' losing string at six games.

The defeat dropped the White Sox out of first place in the American League, one percentage point behind Baltimore, which nipped Minnesota 2-1.

George Thomas singled with one out for the Tigers but was forced at second by McAuliffe. Billy Bruton batted for relief pitcher Larry Sherry and popped to short center field. Hansen dropped the ball, allowing McAuliffe to score all the way from first.

The Tigers, down 3-0, tied the game in the fifth inning. Jake Wood singled home two runs with the bases loaded before Norm Cash singled across the tying run.

Pete Ward slammed his sixth home run for Chicago in the second. The White Sox added two runs in the third. Tom McCraw doubled, was sacrificed to third and scored on Ward's infield out. Three walks and Mike Hershberger's infield single scored the other run.

Terry Dillon's Jersey Number Is Retired

MISSOULA, Mont. (UPI)—The football jersey worn for three seasons by Montana State University star Terry Dillon was retired Saturday immediately after memorial services for the athlete.

Dillon drowned May 28 when heavy equipment he was using on a construction project plunged through a bridge underway into the Clark Fork River near Missoula. His body has not been found.

MSU Athletic Director Wally Schwank announced the retiring of number 22 worn by Dillon. It was the first uniform retired in the school's history.

Giants Top Phillies, 4-2 Take National Loop Lead

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tom Haller's two-run homer in the ninth inning carried San Francisco to a 4-2 victory over Philadelphia Saturday that vaulted the Giants past the Phils into first place in the National League.

Haller's blow followed a single by Jesus Alou and came after the Phillies had kayoed Jack Sanford and tied the score at 2-2 with a run in the last of the eighth.

Southpaw Billy O'Dell, who relieved Sanford, earned his first victory of the year, while Ed Roebuck, giving up his first runs of the season in 17 innings, took his first loss.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the second inning when Wes Covington doubled off the right field wall, moved to third on Tony Gonzalez' bloop single, and scored on a sacrifice fly by John Herrnstein.

Orioles Slip Past Minnesota, 2-1

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Steve Barber and Stu Miller combined for a five-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles nipped the Minnesota Twins 2-1 Saturday.

Miller came on in the eighth with one out after Zoilo Versalles singled and Barber gave up his fourth walk to Rich Rollins, then went 3-0 to Tony Oliva. Miller completed the walk to Olive but then Bob Allison hit into an inning-ending double play.

Until the eighth, the only hard blow against Barber was Allison's 12th homer in the fourth inning. Barber evened his record at 2-2 while Dick Stigman dropped his fourth in six decisions.

Dodgers Defeat Mets, 9-2

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy Davis and Frank Howard were benched Saturday and the shake-up paid off for the Los Angeles Dodgers in a 9-2 victory over the New York Mets.

Wally Moon, who played right field in place of Howard, singled home two runs in the Dodgers' three-run third inning. And rookie Wes Parker, who took Davis' place in left field, singled in the fourth and scored on John Roseboro's double. Parker also singled in the sixth, starting another three-run burst that knocked out loser Jack Fisher.

The shake-up by Manager Walt Alston, following Friday night's 8-0 shutout by the Mets, was a drastic one for the World Series champions. Tommy Davis was the National League batting champion the last two years and Howard is the team's leading home run slugger.

Phil Ortega, who survived a bases loaded situation in the second when he struck out Fisher, was knocked out by the Mets in the fifth.

Milwaukee Topples Chicago

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Lee Maye slashed a two-run single with two out in the ninth inning Saturday, boosting Milwaukee to a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The Braves' rally nullified a four-run explosion in the seventh that put the Cubs ahead 5-4.

Chicago reliever Lew Burdette, acquired from St. Louis earlier this week and a former Brave, retired the first two Milwaukee batters in the ninth before Mike de la Hoz singled.

Lindy McDaniel replaced Bur-an infield hit moving Woody Woodward to second. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch before Maye singled.

Chicago routed starter Warren Spahn after he retired the first two batters in the seventh.

It was nip-and-tuck all season between Wasson and Palmer, with the Terrors putting forth their best effort in winning the league track meet. But individually, the Thunderbirds' miler Jeff Berven was the headliner all spring and he just missed getting the state's oldest record n the windup.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A. J. Foyt and the conventional machine he powered to victory in the Indianapolis 500 race Memorial Day head a field of 33 entered in the 100-mile Rex Mays Memorial big car race Sunday at State Fair Park.

Foyt, the defending U.S. Auto Club champion, will face his toughest competition from Rodger Ward, runner-up at Indianapolis, and Don Branson of Champaign, Ill., who will drive rear engine cars owned by Robert C. Wilkie of Milwaukee. Branson was running third in the Memorial Day 500 when forced out by clutch trouble.

Other rear engine cars will be driven by Lloyd Ruby, the third place finisher at Indianapolis; Len Sutton, Bob Veith, Chuck Arnold, Herb Hill and Frank Ballard. Another rear engine car has been entered, but no driver named.

Rookie Chance Paces Indians Over Senators

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rookie Bob Chance belted a homer, double and two-sung single Saturday in backing the Cleveland Indians to a 6-4 victory over the Washington Senators.

Southpaw Jack Kralick won his sixth of seven decisions and ran his scoreless inning string to 16 innings, but failed to finish. He was tagged for Chuck Cottier's homer in the eighth and four straight hits in the ninth before giving way to Don McMahon.

Chance, a 222-pound outfielder, accounted for the first Cleveland run in the second with a single off Bennie Daniels after John Romano doubled and Fred Whitfield sigled.

Jack Harden to Assist Golf Tournaments at Broadmoor

Jack Harden, new resident pro at the Broadmoor, will be assisting head pro Dow Finsterwald and assistant pro Roger Pedigo in the conduct of six upcoming golf tournaments beginning next Sunday with the National Collegiate Athletic Association Golf Tournament and continuing in July with one of the nation's top ranking amateur tournaments, the Men's Trans - Mississippi.

The annual Broadmoor Men's and Women's Invitation Tournaments, an International Challenge Match and the World Senior Golf Tournament are also slated for the Broadmoor in the next three months.

Harden, a Class A member of the PGA, comes to Broadmoor from the Horizon Golf Club in El Paso, Texas, an 18 hole public course which he designed and built and where he served as head pro from the time it opened in September of 1962. Prior to that he had been head pro at the El Paso Country Club for 17 years.

As an amateur, Harden won more than 30 tournaments, including the Southwestern Amateur Championship, was three times El Paso City Champion, and won every invitation tournament in that area. He has twice won the New Mexico Open.

As a pro, he won the Texas PGA title in 1952 and 1954 and was low qualifier for the National Open in 1949 and again in 1951. He traveled the pro circuit from 1939 through 1960 as a consistent money winner. His most recent tournament effort was in the 1963 Phoenix Open. He became eligible for National Senior competition in September and tied for sixth place in this year's tournament at Phoenix.

Harden was elected to the El Paso Athletic Hall of Fame in 1961. The list of golfers he has coached to top form includes Fred Hawkins, a leader on the pro circuit and Jack Rule, one of the big money winners on the current tour.

Another well known student of Harden's is Mrs. Agatha Lee of El Paso, twice Texas Amateur Champion, and Texas Senior Champion for the past three years.

Harden and his wife, Sally, with their two sons, Tom and Jack, Jr., are now making their home in Colorado Springs. As might be expected, both boys are avid golfers. Jack, Jr. has been a star of the Texas Western College golf team for the past two years and plans to turn pro in the near future.

Tom's talents also lean to music and he is an accomplished cellist.

Olympic Trials Set in Oregon

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP) — Some 450 athletes will compete on the Oregon State University campus net weekend in one of the vital preliminaries to selection of this country's Olympic track team.

It is the second annual U.S. Track and Field Federation meet.

For the many collegians entered, the meet will serve as a warmup for the national collegiate championships at nearby Eugene the following weekend. The top six in each event at the Eugene meet will qualify for the Olympic trials.

For others — the freshmen, graduate students, high school hopefuls and independents who qualify through the Amateur Athletic Union — the Corvallis meet will be even more important.

It will give them a measure against top collegians just two weeks before the A.A.U Olympic qualifying trials at Brunswick, N.J.

Sam Bell, the Oregon State track coach who is handling the entries, says there probably will be 350 men and 100 women entered. As a result, there will have to be many qualifying heats. Just how many has not yet been determined.

On Friday there will be finals —and qualifying heats where needed—in the hammer, broad jump, javelin, 400 - meter hurdles, high jump, 220 meters, 800 meters, and steeplechase. The 1,500-meter qualifying also is scheduled. For the women there will be the shot put, 80-meter hurdles and 400-meter run.

On Saturday will come the discus, high jump, pole vault, triple jump, 400 - meter relay, 1,500-meter run, shot put, 400 meters, 110-meter hurdles, 100 meters, 5,000 meters and the 1,600-meter relay. The women will have the 400-meter relay and 100-meter run.

The 1,500-meter race will capture interest. The field so far includes Jim Ryun, the Wichita, Kan., prepper who ran a 4:01.7 recently, Archie San Romani of Oregon, John Camien of Kansas State Teachers, Ben Tucker of San Jose, Norm Hoffman, ex-Oregon Stater, and Ron Van Ruden of Oklahoma State.

16-Year-Old Gal Trackster Sets Record

BALTIMORE (AP) — Debbie Thompson, 16-year-old track star from Frederick, Md., bettered the listed women's world record for the 100-yard dash Saturday, running the distance in 10.2 seconds.

The high school junior was clocked in 10.1, 10.2 and 10.3 by three timers. She finished about nine yards ahead of Tammie Davis, her teammate on the Frederick Track and Field Club.

The listed world record of the distance is 10.3 seconds, set by Marlene Mathews of Australia, in Sydney on March 20, 1958.

There was a negligible wind during the junior Olympic track meet in Clifton Park, but there was immediate doubt as to whether the mark would be accepted as official because no meter was available to clock the wind velocity.

Amateur Athletic Union officials, sponsors of the meet, said they would submit the time anyway in an effort to have it accepted.

Pueblo Oval Opens Wednesday

Twin quin wagering and a newly beautified infield are among innovations that will greet Pueblo Greyhound Park fans as the 16th annual racing season opens Wednesday night.

Racing will continue nightly, except Sundays, through August 19, the 61 - night season including one charity date.

Twin quiniela wagering, often leading to four - figures payoffs, calls for the selection of two consecutive quinielas in predesignated races. In Pueblo, the last two races on each nightly card will be the ones on which Twin Quin wagering will be offered.

The infield has been beautified by covering the entire area with colored stones in a sunburst pattern, with alternate rays of pastel reds, pinks, oranges, yellows, and blues, together with white.

Nineteen kennels, plus local for owners have been booked coming from various Arizona, Florida, Mass. and Colorado tracks, including Cloverleaf. Schooling races, under way since last Wednesday, have revealed that many top - grade dogs are among those assembled.

The kennel owners represented are Paul George, the Sunset Kennel, Joe Mamino, James Black, Melvin C. Hughes, Paul Draper, Carl Pritchard, George S. Murphey, Mrs. P. H. Pursel, Shamrock Kennel, Star Club Kennel, Paul Sutherland, C. W. Wilson, C. C. Wilson, Robert Thorne, Willow Racing Kennels, Dock Shockley, Ralph Endersby and Omer L. Rawlings.

First post time throughout the season will be 8 p.m.

Sunnehann Tourney Results

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP)—Bill Hyndman III of Huntingdon Valley, Pa. grappled with an ice-cold putter and an intermittant rain through 36 holes Saturday and managed to preserve his two-stroke lead in the third Sunnehann amateur golf tournament for champions.

The former Walker-cupper and 1958 champion here shot a brilliant two-under-par 68 in the morning over the wet 6,657-yard Sunnehanna Country Club course. Then he faltered to a 73 in the afternoon to finish the third round with 207. The final 18 will be played Sunday.

Trailing Hyndman was Robert Reilly of Pittsburgh who had back-to-back 68s to go with an opening round 73.

Tabor Sets Slight on Title During Collegiate Tourney

Penn State's 1964 Eastern intercollegiate golf champion, who achieved a goal denied to many other outstanding Lion golfers over the years, now has set his sights on the National Collegiate title tournament starting June 14 at Colorado Springs' Broadmoor Course.

Tournament - conscious Jim Tabor, a 23 - year - old from Camp Hill, is a senior who has played golf since he was 12, often practicing as much as six hours a day, and striving constantly to improve his game. His coach, Joe Boyle credits him with "good irons, an excellent short game, nerves of steel, and the ability to produce under pressure.

"If Tabor survives the opening qualifying rounds of medal play, he'll have a good shot at the title," Boyle says, "because match play is his strong suit."

Penn State Golfer

Boyle's point is well illustrated by Tabor's 30-6 career record in dual - meet match play and by his performance in the Eastern championships at Princeton when he brought Penn State its second individual title (the first was Bill Davidson in 1958) by beating Army's Steve Pembrook, 5 and 4.

Boyle rates Tabor's short game — "from fairway to green" — as his strong suit. "He's terrific around the greens, can hit those short chips with uncanny accuracy," the Lion mentor says, "and just about the time his opponent thinks he has things under control, Jim sticks a pitch next to the pin. And he seldom misses a putt."

Tabor's long game is improving too.

"He still gets in trouble occasionally off the tee," says Boyle, "but he showed great improvement in the Easterns-showed more ability to keep the ball in play."

A case in point was the par-4, 430-yard 18th hole, which is flanked by out-of-bounds on the right and by water and other trouble on the left.

"A year ago, Tabor probably would have tried to knock the ball out of sight from the tee with a wood," says Boyle. "This time he played a 1-iron about 220 yards down the middle and made his approach shots stick on the green. While other players were taking sixes and sevens on the hole, Jim parred it six times and won two matches on it."

Tabor's father, Ed, is the professional at Harrisburg's West Shore Country Club and father and son play together at least once a week in summer months.

While he gives major credit for his basic game to his dad — who coached him to the Harrisburg Junior Amateur title at age 15 — Jim also credits Boyle for helping him sharpen his techniques. And like most young amateurs, he has favorites among the touring professionals. His are Sam Snead, "for his perfect swing," and Arnold Palmer, "how I wish I could putt like he does."

Tabor is majoring in landscape architecture with no plans to turn pro. His association with golf following graduation will be as a course designer and a playing amateur.

In the meantime, however, he's thinking only of the NCAA championships and the opportunity they will afford to test his newly - polished game and prestige.

Ski Patrol, Assn. Convention in Chicago

The combined annual conventions of the United States Ski Association and the National Ski Patrol System get under way this week at the Hotel Knickerbocker in Chicago. Board of Directors meetings of both organizations will be held on Thursday, with opening general sessions on Friday.

The Ski Association opening session will be addressed by Mr. Franklin L. Orth, former Assistant Secretary of War, and now Executive Vice President of the National Rifle Association, Director and Executive Committee member of the United States Olympic Committee, and Chairman of the ad hoc committee supervising the recently authorized Olympic management study.

Following Mr. Orth's address convention delegates will separate into groups for panel and committee discussion of Association problems and programs.

A press Conference will be held at the Hotel Knickerbocker at 4:00 p.m. Friday, to review briefly Olympic skiing accomplishments, and to announce plans for future programs arrived at during Friday's numerous panel sessions.

Guests of both the National Ski Patrol System and the United States Ski Association, during the conventions, will include top representatives of all major organizations involved with skiing, notably Ski Industries America, Professional Ski Instructors of America, National Ski Areas Association, United States Ski Writers Association, the United States Forest Service and the National Park System.

Local Golfer Registers Hole-in-One

Johnson, Lorenzen Head Dixie '400' Race List

By KELSO STURGEON
Associated Press Sports Writer

ATLANTA (AP)—Junior Johnson, who will start in the pole position, and Fred Lorenzen, who has made a habit of winning at Atlanta International Raceway, head a list of 35 drivers who will start Sunday in the Dixie 400—one of the South's biggest stock car races.

Two other drivers given an excellent chance of winning the race are David Pearson, Spartanburg, S.C., who will start on the front row next to Johnson, and Paul Goldsmith, Mexico City, Mex., who will start on the second row next to Lorenzen.

Johnson, Ronda, N.C., won the pole position earlier in the week by piloting his 1964 Ford at an average speed of 145.906 miles per hour for his four-lap qualifying run. Lorenzen, Elmhurst, Ill., qualified at 145.405 in his 1964 Ford.

A controversy over special fire-fighting equipment on some of the cars popped up, but the equipment—a device which engulfs the car and driver in foam in case of fire—passed its tests.

Fire marshal Tom Gossett said the tanks of foam would get hot and explode under just the normal heat of the automobiles, but the takes were sub - jected to heat tests, passed and will be on the cars Sunday.

Yanks Not Favored In British Amateur

GANTON, England (AP)—When the British Amateur Golf Championship opens Monday, about one in six games on the drawsheet at the Ganton Golf Club will be followed by "U.S.A."

That doesn't necessarily mean that Americans have one chance in six of winning the title. Americans usually are favored in the years when their Walker Cup team is in Britain. In the off years, the overseas entry list is likely to be strong in numbers but weak in proven talent. This is an off year.

There is no qualifying for the British Amateur. Any amateur golfer with a recognized handicap of two or under and the entry fee of about $12.50 can file. If more than 256 are entered, the field is reduced by drawing lots. This year there were 219 entries, including 37 Americans.

Of these, only about a half dozen appear likely to do more than win a match or two. Among the others are several U.S. service men stationed in Europe and men whose business brings them to Britain but allows time for some golf. Some may not even show up for their matches.

The 6,823-yard Ganton course isn't as severe a golf test as the famed seaside links where major championships usually are played but it is long and tough for an ordinary golfer. It has been the scene of the 1949 Ryder Cup match, the British Women's Championship and the English Amateur.

Seven Britons and South African Reg Taylor were seeded through the draw. Michael Lunt, the defending champion, and Michael Bonallack, 1961 winner, top the two halves. The others are Ireland's Joe Carr, three-time champion; Alan Thirlwell, Sandy Saddler, Martin Christmas and Ronnie Shade, all British Walker Cup players. The runners-up of the past two years J.K.D. Povall and J. G. Blackwell, weren't seeded.

Best known of the Americans are veterans Robert Sweeny of Palm Beach, Fla., British champion in 1937; Dale Morey of High Point, N.C. and Frank Strafaci of Miami, Fla. Bill Hyndman of Philadelphia, runner-up in 1959, filed his entry but withdrew because of a shoulder injury.

Two all-American matches are listed for Monday's first round.

They send John B. Thornton of Rochester, N. Y., against William B. Hamilton of Anniston, Ala., and Curtis Person Sr. of Memphis, Tenn., against Paul Coste of Jamestown, R.I., who is principal of an American school in France.

Other principal first round pairings include Morey vs. I. Fernyhough, England; La Ponzina vs. J. Glover, England; Strafaci vs. John Boston, Ireland; Bostwick vs. R. Hiley, England; Sweeny vs. M.E. Barker, England; Brady vs. R. T. Robinson, England; Tom Draper, Birmingham, Mich., vs. Donald Marr, England; James Vickers, Wichita, Kan., vs. P.D. Kelley, England, and George C. Blocker Jr., Jal, N .M., vs Alan Slater England.

Sweeny and Brady aren't scheduled to play their firs round matches until Tuesday. scheduled to play their first round byes and also will start Tuesday.

Six Players Dropped At Miami

By BEN FUNK

MIAMI (AP)—Coach Charlie Tate said Saturday the Miami football team has been drastically weakened at its strongest positions by an Honor Council request that six players withdraw from the school.

"We lost four boys we had counted on heavily, including two first-string linemen" Tate said. "We were hit where we thought we were the strongest.

"I would say that our strength has been reduced 20 per cent."

The players were not named, under a policy of the Honor Council not to identify students involved in disciplinary action. Dr. Henry King Stanford, the university president, ordered Tate not to disclose the names.

Eleven students in all were charged before the council with violations of the honor code, apparently for cribbing on final exams. Two were exonerated and the others were asked to leave the school. They would be eligible to apply for readmission next Feb. 1.

"We didn't have much depth," said Tate, a former Georgia Tech assistant hired in December to succeed Andy Gustafson, who became full-time athletic director.

"That's where we got hurt—in depth. We get injuries in key spots where these boys played and we get down to players who are really inferior.

"We had a young squad to start with. There were only five seniors in the top 14. But I was pleased with the enthusiasm the boys showed in spring practice.

Jones Finds PGA is Tough

By JIM BECKER

Associated Press Sports Writer

RYE, N.Y. (AP) — "To tell the truth," said Gordon Jones, "I probably should have quit long time ago.

"But I'm doing what I want to do and if I shoot 85 the next time out, I'll be trying on every shot."

Jones is one of those semi-successful golf pros who make up the pack that pursues Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus down the fairways of life.

He will be 35 in August. He has a pregnant wife and a 3-year-old son, and he has never won a major golf tournament. There are times when he's so short of cash he doesn't know for sure where his next caddy fee is coming from.

There are dozens of fellows like Gordon Jones, following their fortunes on the golf trail week after week.

They walk alike, dress alike, look somewhat alike and even have names that vaguely sound alike.

What keeps them going?

"I would like to be a real good tournament player," Jones said. "Very few golfers can reach the pinnacle. The rest of us can get along, and go on a little streak now and then and win a tournament from time to time. That's the status I want to achieve, and I'll do my best to get there.

"All I want is a chance to play."

Jones got his chance in the rich Thunderbird at the Westchester Country Club this week because he was among the top 50 in the field of last week's tournament at Indianapolis.

"I won a little less than $300," Jones said. "I'm not sure how much it was because I haven't been paid yet. The check will catch up with me here.

"I've won about $3,500 so far this year. Not enough to break even."

Jones was the "dewsweeper" in the Thunderbird—first player off the tee. He played with two other nonname pros before a gallery of one—his wife, Norma.

She came late. "I overslept," she said.

Norma is from Las Cruces, N.M., and she met Jones at North Texas State College, where he came after he wound up a five-year stint as a jet pilot in the Marines. Jones came from Alliance, Ohio, originally and went to Mount Union College in Ohio for two years before he went into the Marines. Then he switched to North Texas.

"I figured I could play golf all year around there," he said.

He and Norma were married eight years ago, Jones hit the golf trail two years later.

"He's doing what he wants to do," Norma explained, "and I feel that it's up to me to make myself a part of it. It's sort of like living on a merry-go-round. Or maybe it's a ferris wheel. You're up, and then you're way down."

Did Jones ever feel that life might have been better on a 9-to-5 trick someplace?

"I have no regrets," he said. "None at all. Sometimes it's a little tough. But I know I'm happier doing this. I go from day to day, and I give it the best I have."

Former Notre Dame Star Dies at 46

CHICAGO (AP)—Steve Juzwik, 46, former star halfback at Notre Dame, died Friday night in Alexian Brothers Hospital, apparently of a heart attack.

Two of his most outstanding performances came in Notre Dame's 1941 undefeated season against Northwestern and against Navy.

Against Northwestern, Juzwik booted the extra point which earned the Irish a [illegible] victory. Against Navy he spearheaded an offense which produced a 20-13 victory. During the same season he had big games against both Army and Illinois.

Griffith To Defend Title

By BOB MYERS

Associated Press Sports Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — World Welterweight champion Emile Griffith and ex-titleholder Luis Rodriguez meet for the fourth time Friday night, and if the pattern continues, controversy will be the keynote of anything that transpires.

The 15-round title match at the Las Vegas Convention Center will be televised nationally by ABC.

Griffith, the 25-year-old New Yorker from the Virgin Islands, and Rodriguez, 26, a Cuban expatriate from Miami, Fla., have waged 40 rounds of warfare.

Virtually every round was hard fought and close, and a howl of dissension has echoed after each of the matches—one 10-rounder in 1960 when they were contenders for the title and two 15-rounders when one or the other was the ruler of the 147-pound division.

Griffith, and many ringside observers, were stunned by the decision although it was unanimous.

The new champion and the then-challenger met again in New York's Madison Square Garden June 8, 1963. This time Griffith regained the title.

The decision was split, and so was the reaction of the onlookers. The consensus seemed to think Luis had won.

The 1960 battle is still hotly argued by both camps. Griffith won that one, by a split decision.

At the moment, Rodriguez is a slight betting choice about 8-5 — to recover the championship.

Since then Griffith has fought three times. He knocked out Ralph Dupas in three and aged Stan Harrington in four, and emerged unscathed from a no-decision affair in Rome with Juan Duran.

College World Series Opens Monday in Omaha

OMAHA (AP) — The college baseball world Series opens in Omaha Monday with Mississippi, Minnesota, Missouri and Arizona State generally considered as the first division of the field of eight.

The other clubs are Seton Hall, Maine, Texas A&M and Southern California.

Missouri brings the most glamorous record—22 straight victories—into the tourney and because of this string the Tigers could find the law of averages as dangerous a foe as the other clubs.

In a double elimination series such as the college series, pitching is always ranked high and in this regard Minnesota may be the best off. The Gophers have a staff that limited competition in the tough Big Ten to an average of two runs in 14 games.

The starters — Joe Pollack, Frank Brosseau and Dick Mielke — needed relief help only three times, and on one occasion it was Brosseau who was summoned.

From the standpoint of individuals, Southern Cal and Missouri may have the top pitchers. USC has Walt Peterson, a coaches' All-America choice last year, and Missouri has Keith Weber, who has caught the eye of several major league scouts.

A test of whether Mississippi or Southern California should rate among the top four will come Monday night when Ole Miss tangles with the Californians, who won last year's championship and would be a strong favorite this year except that the NCAA sidelined two trojan regulars recently.

Lost to USC were Bud Holloway, a fine catcher, and third baseman Larry Sandel. The NCAA brass ruled the two had used up their eligibility before the championship playoffs began.

Mississippi, which hasn't made it to the college series since 1956, has three right-handers who compiled an earned run average of .67 in the sweep of the District 3 playoffs. They are Larry Higginbotham, Richie Prine and Russ Johnson.

Seton Hall has nominated senior right-hander Larry Falcon for the series opener against Maine. Falcon has a career earned run average of 0.99. Maine's top pitcher is sophomore Joe Ferris, who won all seven of his starts this season.

Seton Hall and Maine open the series at noon EST Monday. Texas A&M and Minnesota meet at 3 p.m., Southern California and Mississippi at 7 p.m., and Missouri and Arizona State at 9:30 p.m.

Minnesota Returns In Election Year

OMAHA (AP)—Minnesota, a team to which the college baseball World Series has meant nothing but success, is back again — unexpected though it may have been to Coach Dick Siebert.

The Gophers were in the series at Omaha in 1956 and in 1960 and both times they won the championship. And if the Gophers are hunch players they've got something going for them. For 1956 and 1960 were presidential election years, and so is 1964.

Minnesota started its season with a southern road trip and when the Gophers got home, Siebert said he would be willing to settle for a first division spot in the Big Ten Conference.

"But our improvement since then has been amazing," he commented after his club won the conference title and the District 4 playoff.

Siebert is exceptionally proud of his pitching. Joe Pollack and Frank Brosseau lead a staff that gave up only 28 runs in 14 games in the tough Big Ten.

His sparkplug is second baseman Duane Markus, of whom Siebert says, "Without him, I doubt if we would have finished in the first division."

The top Gopher hitter is first baseman Bill Davis at .350, with six home runs and 21 runs batted across in conference play.

The Gophers begin their series here Monday against Texas A. & M. and need no spurring from Siebert to be at a peak. The Aggies trimmed Minnesota twice on that southern trip.

The first game in the double-elimination tournament pairs Seton Hall and Maine. Following the Minnesota-Texas A & M game, Southern California plays Mississippi and Missouri meets Arizona State in a night double-header.

The tournament runs through June 12.

Kierbow Wins NAIA Title

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Don Kierbow of Corpus Christi, Tex. University won a national collegiate singles tennis championship and shared in the doubles title Saturday on his second shot at the crown.

Kierbow beat teammate Gabino Palafox 6-3, 6-2 in the singles finals of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics tournament.

Then Kierbow and Palafox swept to the doubles championship with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over Tom Muench and Larry Riggs of Pan American College, Edinburg, Tex.

Pan American, however, took home its fourth consecutive team championship with 29 points, topping Corpus Christi which had 26.

The finals had been rescheduled for Sunday because of Thursday's rain, but several matches were defaulted in Saturday's rounds after Jim Saucedo of Pan American dropped out with an injured ankle. Tourney officials then decided to go ahead and finish the tournament. Palafox had five matches Saturday and Kierbow four.

Kierbow, seeded No. 1, didn't lose a set in the tournament. Last year he was upset in the finals.

In the quarter-finals, Kierbow defeated Ned Saxman, Tennessee Wesleyan, 6-0, 6-1; Wortelboer defeated Morman Chambers, Appalachian State, N.C., 6-1, 6-4; Palafox defeated Lornie Kuhle, Pan American, 6-2, 6-2; and Saucedo defeated Muench 7-5, 4-6, 8-7, default.

Colts Sign Tackle Ken Sugarman

BALTIMORE (AP) — Tackle Ken Sugarman of Whitworth, Wash., College has been signed by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League, the club announced Saturday. Sugarman was the Colts' No. 7 pick in last winter's player draft.

Redskins Sign CSU Players

FORT COLLINS (AP) — Two Colorado State University players, fullback Ken Hines from Pueblo and tackle Bob Hinton from Denver, have signed contracts with the Washington Redskins of the National Football League.

They will report to the Redskins' training camp at Carlisle, Pa., July 13.

Hines, who weighs 210, gained 531 yards and scored four touchdowns last fall, the first CSU back since 1958 to gain at least 500 yards a season.

Cubans in Exile Form New Group To Fight Castro

By MATTHEW T. KENNY

MIAMI (UPI) — A new Cuban exile "war board," now mapping plans for another military campaign against the Castro regime, won the backing Friday of the Cuban Revolutionary Council in whose name the 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion was launched.

In announcing support of the board, the three-year old council — once the most powerful force in exile politics—decreed its own dissolution. But it indicated the various groups which it comprises will now identify themselves with the two-week old board.

The council, headed by former Premier Manuel A. De Varona since its rupture with Washington 14 months ago over a "do-nothing" Cuba policy, is the first exile political organization to back the five-man board.

Projected military operations of the new group are in the hands of Eneido Oliva, deputy commander of the 1961 invasion, who has just resigned his commission as a U.S. Army captain to devote full time to the board.

What role, if any, De Varona may play in future activities of the board was not announced.

However, it was learned that the council's decision stemmed from secret talks by De Varona in Washington with Oliva and another key member of the board, former Havana labor lawyer Ernesto Freyre.

The board came into being last May 22 after winning overwhelming endorsement of Cuban exiles around the world in a unique, month-long referendum by mail.

Cuban exiles dubbed the five exile leaders approved in the referendum a "war board" although no formal name has yet been adopted by the group.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

He's Proved His Love!

DEAR ABBY: There is this real good-looking guy I'll call "J". I have seen him around for about a year, but I never thought I had a chance with him. Well, all of a sudden "J" called me up and asked me for a date. He is 21 and I am 18, but I'm very mature for my age. On our first date we got along swell. "J" is the kind of guy you can get acquainted with real fast. He told me he loved me, and said that maybe he would ask me to go steady, but first I had to "prove my love" (if you know what I mean). How can I hold him without proving my love? I would give my right arm to get this guy. —FALLING IN LOVE

DEAR FALLING:: Lose him. He's not worth your right arm. What he needs is a right hook!

DEAR ABBY: What do you think of a husband who goes fishing every Mother's Day and leaves his wife alone with the children? This has been going on for as long as I can remember. I finally got fed up this year and asked him what was the big idea leaving me every Mother's Day, and he said, "I just can't face this town on Mother's Day because my mother is dead and I have to do something to give me a lift."

I guess it never occurred to him that I am also a mother, and maybe I could use a lift. —NOT LIFTED IN ROANOKE

DEAR NOT: If you wait for the obvious to occur to some men, you will wait a long time. It's high time it occurred to YOU to tell your sentimental sweetheart that someone besides himself could use a lift.

DEAR ABBY: I asked my girl what she wanted for her birthday and she said, "Give me a big colored picture of yourself in a real nice frame." Like a dope I had some pictures taken which cost me 22 bucks. Then I got a frame which set me back another 12 bucks. We broke up last week and this girl sent my picture back, but she kept the frame. I think she should have given me the whole works. What do you think? SEYMOUR

DEAR SEYMOUR: You got the "works" all right. But you did GIVE her the picture and the frame as a gift, so it all belongs to her. (Maybe she's framing somebody else now.)

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter signed "TWENTY-TWO AND MISERABLE." She was the young bride whose husband informed her shortly after their marriage that he had spent $500 on an investigation of her past, and he took great pleasure in throwing up to her a "mistake" she had made.

Tell her to ask her husband what a $500 investigation of HIS past would have turned up. It's strange how, when a girl makes a mistake, it's a crime, but when a man makes the same mistake 30 or 40 times, it's just an incident. When I became engaged, my husband asked me if I was "pure." I told him I was just as "pure" as he was, and he married me anyway. —TWENTY-FOUR AND EQUAL

Red Ball Motor Freight Inc. has been notified that the Interstate Commerce Commission, by decision and order served June 1, has approved the merger of Red Ball Motor Freight (Southeast), Inc. into Red Ball Motor Freight, Inc., the parent company, Henry E. English, chairman of the board and president of the company, has announced.

The merger results in one of the largest motor carriers operating in the Southwest and Southeast. Home offices are located in Dallas Tex., with freight services extending from Denver on the north and west to Houston, Tex., New Orleans, La. Mobile, Ala., Jackson, Miss., and Memphis, Tenn., on the south and east. Eighty-three terminals in the system serve more than 1,300 communities in the nine-state area of Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma, New Mexico, and Colorado.

Red Ball contracted to purchase Couch Motor Lines in February, 1960. At that time Red Ball served principally points in Texas, Arkansas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma, and Louisiana. Acquisition of the new carrier was effected in June of 1962 and since that time this line has operated as a separate corporation known as Red Ball Motor Freight (Southeast), Inc.

The newly merged and combined operations results in a single-line freight service from Colorado to Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana.

Red Ball was founded in 1928 when Henry E. English began hauling freight between Lufkin and Houston, Tex., a distance of approximately 120 miles. The company, today, operates over more than 10,000 miles of certified routes serving principle communities in nine states. It has more than 1,800 employees and 1,500 pieces of equipment.

Philco Dealers Win Fair Trip

Al Massaro, owner of TV Specialists, and Milton M. Slosky American Budget Furniture, were among appliance dealers from Colorado who were recent guests of Philco Corp., a subsidiary of Ford Motor Co., on an all-expense paid trip to the New York World's Fair as winners in a national sales promotion program.

They earned the trip to New York as a result of their sales performance. The winners joined other Philco dealers, members of their families and distributor personnel in a meeting of more than 5,000 persons attending a preview showing of Philco's 1965 television, radio, phonograph and other consumer product lines.

Starting with a special tour of the Ford Wonder Rotunda, the group visited the fair, traveling in a fleet of 50 busses which made round trips between the fair grounds and the three Manhattan hotels in which dealers were quartered. A highlight of the trip was Broadway's biggest theater party, with dealers being presented ochestra seat tickets to the top theatrical attractions of the season.

By SAM CAMPBELL

This trait sticks out like an apprentice carpenter's thumb in an address made this past week to the Commonwealth Club of California.

The speaker was Daniel Peterkin Jr., president of Morton Salt Co., Chicago. His subject was: "Can a Company Afford to Fight an Antitrust Suit?"

His answer to that question was a blunt "no." He then explained the enormous time and energy required to fight an antitrust suit. And he then added that a company also cannot afford NOT to fight an antitrust suit.

He illustrated his point by telling the experience of his own company which successfully fought off a criminal accusation brought by the government under the antitrust laws and which now faces a civil suit brought by the government on the very same evidence.

Mr. Peterkin's diagnosis of the problem was clear and forthright. Equally lucid was his description of what the antitrust laws are, "a body of doctrine containing so much conflict, contradiction and confusion that it is virtually impossible for a businessman to conduct his business without violating one or more statutes every doy."

To drive home his point, he quoted Benjamin Fairless, former president of U. S. Steel, to the effect that "we have on our federal statute books a complete hodge-podge of so-called 'antitrust' laws which have been allowed to grow for 60 years and which cannot be reconciled with each other."

Well, what is the answer to such a mess? To repeal the hodge-podge, to chop down the legal briars that entangle the plow of progress?

Horrors, no! "Most thoughtful businessmen would regard this as a long stap backward into a primitive economy that no longer exists. Such a proposal is thoroughly impractical; moreover it is undesirable. These laws were passed for the protection of the people, and the people includes us. The government's role is to make sure the laws protect all the people from economic harm." So stated the president of Morton Salt.

Then what does he propose? You'd never guess.

He proposes a seminar in which representatives of federal trade commission, congressmen, justice department attorneys and "anyone else in Washington would take part."

The purpose of the seminar would be to "dissipate the miasma of misunderstanding" which suround the conflict, contradiction and confusion that comprise the anti-trust laws.

Really, doesn't Mr. Peterkin know — after all he's been through — that the function of the regulatory agencies is to cause problems, not solve them?

Doesn't he understand that the total motivation in a government commission is to complicate, not simplify?

What would the people in bureaus do for a living if they worked themselves out of jobs?

Self preservation is the first law of nature. Just as Mr. Peterkin wishes to keep Morton Salt functioning because it benefits him, just as the NAACP resists settlement of racial problems, so the bureaucrats fight to keep their operation going because that is the source of their benefits.

Of course, there is a vast difference between a company that thrives on producing salt and a bureau that thrives on producing trouble, but the survival motivation is identical.

No, a seminar will not solve the antitrust hodge-podge. Mr. Peterkin was closer to the answer when he mentioned repeal. Sure, maybe the intent of the original lawmakers was noble, but things just didn't work out good.

To hope for any mutual understanding on the antitrust laws is as futile as waiting for cats to demonstrate against milk.

Green Mountain Falls Women Lease Hotel

Two Green Mountain Falls women have leased the Terrace Hotel, Green Mountain Falls, owned by Joe Cook of Lakewood, and are now open for the summer season.

The two are Mrs. Lorraine Matin and Mrs. Maxine Haynes, who plan to operate the year-around following an extensive remodeling program in Septemper. Cook plans to remodel the lodge and annex into a Swiss-type building, and the hotel will be known as the Terrace Chalet following the remodeling.

Following the remodeling, the chalet will cater to business and professional women who are employed in Colorado Springs and to retired and professional women.

Now open to the public is the dining room, with Mrs. Haynes in charge. The dining room formerly was open only to guests at the hotel. It features family style dinners but also offers a la carte service, including steak and trout. The dining room is open from 7:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving three meals a day.

The Terrace Hotel was built in 1888 and is the only hotel remaining in Green Mountain Falls. It is located on a mountainside above the town lake. The main lodge has 12 rooms and the annex seven, and the property also includes a cottage.

Cook brought the property from Bernie Haines of Glenwood Springs, who owned it five years. Haines purchased it from Mr. and Mrs. Deats Headlee of Fort Worth, Tex.

Mrs. Martin is vice president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Colorado Springs, is president of the Mothers Club of Brockhurst Boys Ranch, Green Mountain Falls; and is a member of the Jane Jefferson Club of Colorado Springs and the Woodland Park Lioness Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin have lived in Green Mountain Falls since 1960. They formerly lived in Richmond, Mo.

Her husband is traffic officer in Green Mountain Falls.

Mrs. Haynes also is a member of the Church of the Wildwood board and is active in many church affairs, including the annual bazaar. She is in charge of the bazaar dinners.

Mrs. Haynes also is a member of the Woodland Park Lioness Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Haynes moved to Green Mountain Falls from Kansas City, Mo., in 1956. He is a radio and television man in Green Mountain Falls and formerly was mayor of the town.

City of Florence Seeking Three Toothy Helpers

City Manager Frank Carochi has employed another helper at the city's watershed south of Florence. However, he's looking for three more employes.

A word of caution to the unemployed looking for work — if you don't have mighty strong teeth and care little for a cash salary don't apply.

Fact is, Carochi has had two families working on the Newlin creek watershed for the city of Florence at no pay for the past four years. The latest member of the labor force seemed completely happy to go to work for a mere splinter wage, and chances are good that fellow workmen will also be hired or the basis of good water, sunshine, a host of willow trees and aspen bark for compensation.

Thanks to the game warden, Preston Steele, Frank picked up two families of beaver four years ago and now has some diversion dams under construction two miles above the Newlin creek intake. The latest dam builder had been recruited to work the Adobe creek district, but he needs help.

City Manager Carochi is most anxious to get his beaver buddy a playmate, in fact, a playmate plus a couple. If you're going to build dams, you need four for bridge — bridge work, that is.

With a little assist from the game warden, Florence should have some inexpensive dam work completed by fall. You might even call it a cheap form of state aid.

Chrysler Getting British Interests

By United Press International

Chrysler Corp. is buying a substantial interest in Rootes Motors Ltd., a British auto maker. Chrysler said it will purchase 30 per cent of the voting shares and 50 per cent of the class A non-voting shares for a total of $34.5 million. This marks Chrysler's first entry into the British auto production field. Ford and General Motors already have British subsidiaries.

Consumers raised their installment debt by $412 million in April — the smallest increase since last November, the Federal Reserve reported. Consumers boosted their credit buying by $524 million in March. Non-installment debt, however, rose $161 million after seasonal adjustment rebounding from a $70 million drop in the prior month.

Auto production is scheduled for an increase this week following May's record sales pace. This week's mark is 175,135 cars, an increase of 9 per cent from last week. General Motors has slated a 13 per cent increase and Ford 4 per cent, but Chrysler's output will drop because its Detroit plant is closed for improvements.

Camping Center Opened at 2615 W. Colorado Ave.

A specialty store dealing only in camping equipment has been opened at 2615 W. Colorado Ave. by C. O. Bergan, who operates a similar business in Denver.

The trailers are made by the Vesely Manufacturing Co. of La Peirre, Mich., world's largest manufacturer of aluminum camp trailers. The Apache has two full-size double beds, and comes in four different models and prices. When closed for traveling, the trailer is 5½ by 6½ feet in size; when set up, it's 7 by 14 feet in size, with a tent over the trailer.

With each Apache trailer goes a Rand-McNally camp ground guide which lists camping areas throughout the United States. The U.S. has 650 Apache trailer centers, and dealers have established a camping ground at the New York World's Fair for use by campers.

IT FIGURES FIGURES

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Even girl-watching is automated these days. Pat Ramer, 22-year-old switchboard operator and receptionist, was chosen by an IBM computer as the 1964 Miss Little Rock Business Queen.

The selection was based on the contestants educational background, business experince and organization membership. The information was compiled and programmed into the machine, which made its selection on a point system.

There's no doubt, though, that the computer is well up on figures. Its choice is a tall (5 feet, 8 inches in heels) and shapely (35-24-36) beauty.

PLANTS OF GOOD AND ILL RENOWN

There was at one time in the middle of Java a tree that dripped and breathed poison destroying animals and vegetable life for miles around. Even birds fell dead when flying near. It stood alone in a valley which was filled with vapor and all about the earth was covered with skeletons of people and animals which had strayed into the valley. This tree was called "upan" and in Maylay means poison.

This was the only tree of its kind in existence. In Mexico, we find the rattlesnake bush, with its venemous thorns. There was the tree of serpents that wound their limbs about men or animals and stranged them to death. The walnut tree is thought to kill vegetation and a special enemy of the oak. This may all be false but we do know that trees have peculiarities that are injurious to other trees and plant life.

While the powers of good control various plants, we know others are poisonous. Belladonna is used for medical purposes but would be deadly if eaten. The puffball in its white state is ripe for the table but might be poisonous in the dark state. Some mushrooms that grow wild are edible and some are poisonous. Be sure you know your mushrooms. Why are toadstools so named? Surely no one every saw a toad seated on a stool. It was thought they once sheltered the elves and if kicked over by a person, that one was sure to come down with a fever. The growth of the fungus is outward, not inward, the circles widen.

Poison ivy will cause a bad rash, if we get mixed with it. In the Greek story, earth made the thistle in a moment of grief that she might express her love for Daphnis, shepherd and musician, poet and hunter but it was associated with Thor, the thunderer who protected it and called it a lightening plant. The vegetable world has changed little in 3,000 years and the marks and color's that explain some beliefs are still impressed on the leaves and petals.

The legends and fables pertaining to plants and trees after all has a degree of truth attached to them and is an aid in their study. Flowers were as naturally associated with fairies as sunshine, moonbeans and all bright and beautiful things. The little people hid in flowers, made their cloaks of petals, their crown of stemens, their cradles of lilies, their seats of fungi. The mottlings of the cowslip and fixglove are like the spots of butterfly wings. As the burly gods of the Norsemen and majestic dieties of Greece repregentler attributes. The anenone is a fairy shelter, curling up at night or as a storm approaches. We speak of the rose of beauty, palms of victory, the lily of purity, the oak of strength, corn of abundance, and olive branch of peace. Willows are graceful. Most plants are good and few are bad.

Former Resident Will Graduate From West Point

Cadet Stephen E. Draper, son of Maj. Gen. (USA, Ret.) and Mrs. Philip H. Draper Jr., Columbus, Ga., graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y.

Draper was active in the French language club and ski club and was a member of the debate council and forum. He was also a member of the staff of Howitzer, the academy's yearbook.

STEPHEN E. DRAPER

The 22-year-old cadet was graduated from Fountain Valley High School, Colorado Springs, in 1960. His father, a 1929 graduate of West Point, was the former deputy commanding general and chief of staff of the Army Air Defense Command at Ent Air Force Base.

Cabin Cruiser Hits Two Trucks on Street

LOVELAND, Colo. (UPI)—A 22-foot cabin cruiser collided with a car and two trucks in downtown Loveland Friday.

After the trailer stopped, the boat skidded off and into the middle of the street where it finally came to rest.

Tin Can Island Bombed for Flue

All 300 residents are down with the flu. The South Pacific Commission asked the New Zealand air force to help.

Later, via Tonga, came a radio message to the air force: "Congratulations, landed on doormat of house of island chief."

Mamie Doud Eisenhower Hospital Toured by 2,000

An estimated 2,000 persons inspected the Mamie Doud Eisenhower Osteopathic Hospital, 33 Barnes Ave., during an open house Saturday afternoon and evening. Members of the Ladies Guild conducted visitors on tours of the building, constructed as the result of eight years of work by a small group of local osteopathic physicians aided by friends and patients.

"This, the first osteopathic hospital in the history of the Pikes Peak Region, is a great asset to this community," George A. Vradenburg, president of the board of directors, said. "I and my fellow board members are indeed proud to know that we have been able to accomplish this very difficult job without the use of any government funds. We are very grateful for the tremendous response of the citizens of this community who have given so unselfishly of their time, their efforts and their financial resources. They have proven that a worthwhile project can be completed with the proper incentive and the creation of sufficient interest."

The building is a modern one-story stone and brick structure, and had as its nucleus a structure errected in 1958 by a Denver corporation for use as a nursing home. Valley Hi Nursing Home was the first such institution of this kind in the region to be built according to hospital specifications.

Valley Hi Nursing Home was purchased in 1959 by the Osteopathic Hospital Assn., formed as a non-profit corporation in 1956, after a successful fund raising campaign. The association has been operating Valley Hi since its purchase while planning for expansion to a general hospital.

The original building is now part of Mamie Doud Osteopathic Hospital.

The decision to add to the south end of the existing building enough space to house surgical and obstetrical facilities was made by the association under the guidance of Architect Gordon Sweet of Colorado Springs. The new area contains the most modern of operating and delivery rooms, X-ray, a central supply, electrically controlled sterilizing equipment, nurses station, work rooms, doctors and nurses lounges, dressing rooms and other auxiliary facilities.

The hospital wing contains 25 medical and surgical beds, including six beds for obstetrical cases and a nursery with six bassinets. It is completely air conditioned, and the heat is furnished by an entirely new boiler plant constructed especially for this wing.

A new administrative office was added to the front center of the original building, but the 38 nursing home beds will remain and the guests who have resided there will not be disturbed. They will continue to be cared for by their own physicians.

Opening of the hospital is another indication of the growth in population of the area, and adds to the list of almost 500 osteopathic hospitals throughout the country.

Dr. O. D. Fry, chief of staff of Eisenhower Hospital, said "it should be understood that an osteopathic hospital is no different from other general hospitals except in the respect that it is staffed by DO (doctors of osteopathy) and that there are within the osteopathic profession all the various specialties necessary for care of the sick and wounded in all respects. It is only because there has never been such an institution in this region that the general public does not recognize that D.O.s are governed by the same rigid educational standards, must endure a minimum of seven years of academic training, then serve at least one year internship and finally pass the examinations given by the Colorado State Board of Medical Examiners before being granted a license to practice medicine in Colorado."

The new Eisenhower Hospital, complete in detail from a structural standpoint, has a full complement of nurses and administrative personnel to conduct efficiently the routine operation of the hospital and nursing home plants.

Although the ceremonies Saturday were a dedication of the "opening" of the hospital, it is planned by the board of directors of the hospital association to hold a formal dedication of the building at a later date.

An invitation will be extended by the board to Mrs. Eisenhower, from whom the hospital is named, and former President Eisenhower to attend the formal dedication.

(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

NURSERY — Six clear plastic bassinettes were waiting Saturday for arrivals in Mamie Doud Eisenhower Osteopathic Hospital. Beneath each bassinette in the nursery is a cabinet to hold ointments, powders, diapers and other needs of each baby. At the right is a measuring-weighing machine and in the background an incubator. The nursery's equipment also includes a rocking chair.
(Gazette Telegraph Photo)

EMERGENCY ROOM — Light yellow walls are accented by aqua blue in the emergency room of Mamie Doud Eisenhower Osteopathic Hospital. The ceiling is white. The emergency room, which has the latest equipment, is located on the east side of the hospital near the ambulance entrance.

More Chinese Are Leaving Mongolia

TOKYO (AP)—Red China reported here that another group of Chinese technicians have left Mongolia for home, bringing the total departures to 3,500. At one time about 12,000 were in Mongolia.

The report by the New China News Agency gave no indication the departure was the result of a worsening of Chinese-Mongolian relations.

Long Hair Fashion Seen for U. S. Girls

WASHINGTON (AP) — Because White House females set fashion trends, it's safe to predict that many young American girls will go "long hair" before long.

President Johnson's daughters, Lynda Bird and Luci Baines, will have been responsible. They showed up Friday at the inaugural meeting of "Young Citizens for Johnson" wearing upswept hairdos.

Their coiffeur, Jean Louis of Washington, described the styles as "in the romantic line" with a chignon on top. He didn't need a hair piece to do it, either.

NATO Planning Group To Be More Open

PARIS (AP)—The planning staff of the Standing Group of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is to be opened to all members on a rotating basis.

The expansion was recommended by NATO's retiring secretary-general, Dirk U. Stikker of the Netherlands, to broaden the structure of the alliance. The Standing Group, which sits in Washington, is limited to the United States, Britain and France. It is the executive wing of NATO's military committee.

Bequest for Dog Goes To Humane Society

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky State Humane Federation is $20,000 richer because a dog named Boy perished in a fire.

The dog's master, the late attorney Edwin P. Mengel, left $20,000 of his estate in a trust fund for Boy's benefit.

However, Boy perished a year ago.

The executor of the $215,000 estate said Friday that the $20,000 would go to the humane society.

Emerson to Play Santana in Finals

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Roy Emerson of Australia and Manuel Santana of Spain will play Sunday for the men's singles title in the Count of Godoy trophy tennis tournament.

Emerson defeated Juan Manuel Couder of Spain 1-6, 6-3, 6-1, 6-2 in one of Saturday's semifinals and Santana downed Ken Fletcher of Australia 6-1, 6-1, 6-0 in the other.

Fatal Heart Attack Rates Low in Italian Community

CHICAGO — In the Italian community of Roseto, Pa., the rate of fatal heart attack is "strikingly low" compared with four surrounding towns, a medical research team reported today.

The reason for the Rosetans good fortune "is not clear at the present moment," Drs. Clarke Stout, Jerry Morrow, Edward N. Brandt Jr. and Stewart Wolf, Oklahoma City, wrote in the current Journal of the American Medical Association.

"The most striking feature of Roseto was the way in which the people seemed to enjoy life," the authors said in describing the 1,630 residents.

Ninety-five per cent of the population are first, second or third generation Italians. They are "gay, boisterous, and unpretentious." The community essentially is a one-class, peasant-type society made up of simple, warm and very hospitable people. There is poverty, but no real want.

Suprisingly, in view of the low fatal heart attack rate, the researchers observed that the Rosetans eat a great deal and drink considerable alcohol, mainly wine. The impression also was gained that they consume substantially more calories and substantially more fat than the average American. Both men and women over age 21 were found to be overweight.

Whether the Rosetans' way of life contributes to their health is still to be determined, the researchers said. Genetic and ethnic factors may be important, they added, although deaths from heart attacks at relatively young ages have been documented among men born in Roseto but who lived most of their lives elsewhere in neighboring Pennsylvania, New York, or New Jersey.

The adults of Roseto have been interviewed, examined and tested in an effort to determine whether low death rate from heart attacks was matched by a low incidence of the disease and by relative longevity among the men. The results of these studies will be reported later, the researchers said.

The other communities surveyed along with Roseto during a seven-year period from 1955 through 1961 were Nazareth, Pa., population 6,209, predominantly German; Bangor, Pa., population 5,766, a mixture of several ethnic types including many Germans and Italians; Stroudsburg, Pa., population 6,070, and East Stroudsburg, Pa., population 7,674, both composed of mixed ethnic groups.

When the number of deaths from heart attacks were compared by town for the seven-year period, the only meaningful difference was between Roseto and the other four communities. The rate for Roseto was less than one-half that of Bangor, only one mile away.

The lower death rate in Roseto was particularly marked among men. Population figures revealed that of the five towns only in Roseto were there more men than women alive over the age of 55.

There were no deaths due to heart attacks of either sex under age 47 recorded during the seven-year period in Roseto.

The death rate per 100,000 per year from heart attacks in Roseto was 91 for men and 66 for women compared with 406 for men and 197 for women in Nazareth; 369 for men and 244 for women in Bangor; 439 for men and 132 for women in Stroudsburg, and 311 for men and 94 for women in East Stroudsburg.

Roseto was settled in 1882 by immigrants from Roseto, Valfortore, in the province of Foggia, Italy, according to the Journal report. Originally, most of the Rosetan men worked in the neighboring slate quarries. Today, most of the women and some of the men either own or work in small factories that manufacture shirts and blouses. Other men work in nearby steel mills and electrical industries, while only a few still work in the quarries.

Whatever the relevant factors, they said, it is evident that differences in the incidence of coronary heart disease do exist among different ethnic groups as well as among ethnically similar groups in different localities.

The authors are affiliated with the University of Oklahoma Medical Center and the Oklahoma Medical Research Foundation. Drs. Stout, Morrow and Wolf are in the neurocardiology research program of the department of medicine. Dr. Brandt is with the biostatistical unit and medical research computer center of the department of preventive medicine and public health.

Meantime, Moe Rollert, right, superintendent of recreation for the City Parks and Recreation Department, presents a ribbon to Wade Exum, who was second in the broad jump and fourth on the relay team. Health Benefit Payments in '62 $8.8 Billion

Over $8.8 billion in health benefits were paid to Americans in 1962, the Health Insurance Institute said today. Health insurance accounted for some $7.1 billion in benefits, and the remainder was paid through other insurance mechanisms.

These benefit dollars, the Institute said, went toward helping people defray the medical costs of illness or injury, and also to replace income lost during periods of disability.

Sources for the health benefits include voluntary health insurance issued by insurance companies. Blue Cross, Blue Shield, and other programs; liability insurance, workmen's compensation, and life insurance, the Insitute declared.

— Insurance companies, Blue Cross-Blue Shield, and other health plans: benefits totaled $7.1 billion. (Note: The 1963 benefit totals for private health insurance recently released showed an estimated $7.8 billion in benefits with insurance companies paying out $4.2 billion of that total.)

—Medical benefits under liability insurance; an estimated $150 million. These benefits went toward payment of hospital and medical bills under medical terms of automobile insurance covering passenger vehicles.

— Workmen's compensation: benefits of $495 million helped pay medical bills resulting from on the job or job-connected injuries or illnesses, and $970 million went to disabled workers to help replace income lost. Over 44 million workers were covered by these programs in 1962.

— Disability provisions under life insurancs policies provided health benefits in 1962 of $142 million. Eighty per cent of this total went for disability payments and the remainder represents company waiver of premium during periods of disability as provided under many life policies.

Palmer Senior Awarded Phillips U. Scholarship

Wilson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wilson, 715 N. Institute.

According to an announcement from Mrs. Gerard Taylor, director of admissions at Phillips, the scholarship was awarded to Wilson because of his character, academic standing and school activities. He is a senior at Palmer High School.

Runge Receives Trophy Award From School

First Lt. Larry J. Runge of the 9th Directorate of Security and Law Enforcement was the recent recipient of the Commandants Trophy from the Squadron Officers' School at Maxwell AFB, Alabama. Lt. Runge was singled out as the most outstanding of 37 distinguished graduates in a class of 800.

The Commandant's Trophy was first presented in 1958 and has been awarded to the top student of each Squadron Officers' School class. In picking the one distinguished graduate to receive this award, the school looks for the individual who, in the collecitve judgment of the staff of the school, best combines all of the professional officers qualities in a manner that gives him the necessary edge, however slight, to stand out from all his contemporaries.

Distinguished graduates are selected not only on their academic performance and their ability to communicate ideas, but they are judged on their qualities of officership as well: their integrity, attitude, sincerity, enthusiasm, initiative, judgment, and ability to influence others. They are selected by members of the entire Squadron Officers School staff.

Lt. Runge is a native of Belle, Mo., and a graduate of the University of Missouri. He's married to the former June Ardin of Cook, Minn. The couple reside in Colorado Springs.

Growth of Schools Expected in State

DENVER (AP) — Statistics were issued by the Legislative Committee on Education Beyond the High School today to show the expected growth in state-supported colleges and universities.

Projections by the committee showed that Colorado ten years from now will have almost twice as many high school graduates as it had last year. The number entering college for the first time ten years from now is expected to double the current freshman crop.

The committee report said that 5,946 students entered one of Colorado's eight public senior colleges as a freshman last year. The number in 1973 is expected to be 12,737, a gain of 114.2 per cent.

The report also showed that this year 72.5 per cent of all college-bound students are attending state-supported senior colleges, but this is expected to reach 79.6 per cent by 1973.

The committee found that 9.9, or 42.5 per cent of the 18,297 high school graduates in Colorado last year went on to college. In the next ten years the total is expected to reach 47 per cent.

Tobacco Research Grants Awarded To 10 Scientists

CHICAGO — Ten grants for tobacco research — including a project seeking chemical persuaders capable of inducing the body to manufacture cancer-fighting weapons — were announced today by the American Medical Association Education Education and Research Foundation.

Raymond M. McKeown, MD, Foundation president, announced the grants through the AMA Chicago headquarters from his home in Coos Bay, Oregon.

The projects for which grants were approved were the first awarded under the long-range research program on tobacco and health authorized by the AMA House of Delegates last December.

They were selected by the five-member committee of scientists appointed to direct the program for the Foundation. Maurice Seevers, MD, committee chairman, said 27 applications for grants have been received and about 25 more are in preparation.

Those approved include projects to study the action of nicotine on cells, to produce synthetic radioactive nicotine for research, to find more facts on the relationship between cigaret smoking and cardio-pulmonary disease, to study the effects of nicotine on the human heart, to determine how cigaret smoke affects the ability of the lungs to clear foreign particles, to measure the addictive qualities of nicotine, to study the effects of nicotine on heart muscle cells, and to study nicotine as a stimulatant or a tranquilizer.

Dr. McKeown said that "the scope and variety of the applications for research grants indicate how much there is to learn about the effect of tobacco smoke on the cells and tissues and organs of the body and how it affects bodily functions."

"No one can predict the ultimate results of this research," Dr. McKeown said, "but we are hopeful that the hazards of smoking can be substantially minimized for the protection of the 72,000,000 people in this country who smoke cigarets. It is also possible that there may be some by-products of immense value resulting from tobacco research."

First-year grants for the 10 approved projects totaled approximately $340,000. It was emphasized that grant amounts are subject to final review before agreements are drawn up. Dureation of the projects will range from two years to five.

Dr. Seevers said the committee agreed that approval of a project indicated a moral commitment to support the project for the full period for which it was approved, subject to annual evaluation of progress. If all 10 projects are carried through for their designated duration, the total financial outlay will approximate $800,000.

The AMA Foundation's tobacco and health research program is financed primarily from a $10,000,000, five-year unrestricted grant from the six major tobacco companies.

The power of advertising cannot be measured by energy and material expended to produce it.

A mere two hundred and twenty-five horsepower sends ten tons of newsprint roaring through this massive press — the press itself weighs three hundred tons and in a single day consumes over three hundred pounds of ink — Six thousand pounds of lead go into the press plates alone and long before newsprint meets inked press plate countless man hours and tremendous amounts of material have been consumed.

Impressive as is the amount of material and energy expended to produce the Gazette Telegraph it is small compared to the power generated by the finished product — in short the PULLING POWER of Gazette Telegraph advertising.

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces, can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government. Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is self-control, no more, no less. It must be consistent with the truths expressed in such great moral guides as the Golden Rule and the Declaration of Independence.

'We Owe It to Ourselves'

We had thought that this old chestnut had been properly broken open and buried.

But we found it repeated again the other day. Someone of our acquaintance came up with this: "The size of the government debt doesn't really matter because we only owe the money to ourselves."

To illustrate this phenomenon, the speaker transferred a few folded bills from one pocket to another. "You see," he said, "it's just like shifting money from one pocket to another."

The tenacity of ignorance should be no surprise to any of us, but we confess to being surprised that anyone still believed this sort of thing. A brief examination of the government debt reveals an altogether different sort of picture.

When the government does not take in, through taxes, excises, imposts and other avenues, sufficient cash to pay its bills, it has recourse to borrowing the money. In this respect and up to this point, the government acts exactly as any person or any firm would act. If the income falls below the expenses, then an effort would probably be made to get hold of enough cash to tide one over the rough spot.

But government doesn't borrow money from "us." At least, not at this juncture. It borrows money from specific parties who purchase government bonds. A bond is nothing but a fancy looking certificate which gives testimony to the fact that a debt exists. A bond is a beautifully engraved I.O.U. That is all it is.

So when the government "sells" a bond to anyone, it is only borrowing the money. But it sells these bonds (borrows) to specific persons and institutions, not to all of "us" generally.

Having obtained the cash, the government then proceeds to spend it in whatever manner its operations seem to dictate. So, in the end, the bond borrowings are gone, too.

Now, time passes. And presently, the party who bought the bond (loaned the money) wants his money back. This isn't all of us, it is merely those persons who hold the bonds.

Where will the government go to get the money to pay back its borrowings? It only has two places to go. It can get it from taxes (from all of us) or it can borrow again, if it can find someone else who will buy bonds. If it borrows, it will have to repay that money, too. And so on. The borrowing by government is an endless process, especially when repayments are made from new borrowings.

And, in the end, the government will have to come to the taxpayers anyway and get the money. So, what happens is that the government borrows money from A, B and C, and then it turns around and soaks all the rest of us so that we are forced to pay back its borrowings.

This is not a process wherein money is transferred from one of our pockets to another of our pockets. This is a process whereby our money is transferred out of our pockets into the pockets of those who advanced the government money in the first place. We, the taxpayers, have nothing to show for this transfer, except a flattened purse or billfold.

Now, the foregoing would occur if the government were to begin to live within its budget and would operate by retiring its debt and by not borrowing any more.

But that is not what it really does. What it does is to continue borrowing. The interest the government now pays annually on the existing debt is larger than the sum it once took to pay for all the costs of government.

But there is another device that government uses whenever it needs the money. If it can't pay off a debt by increasing taxes, and if it can't obtain more money through borrowing, then the government "monetizes the debt." This is the slickest trick of all.

Let us say that the government has borrowed $1 billion. Actually, as we know, the government has borrowed more than $300 billion and as yet doesn't know how to pay this off. But it keeps "servicing" the debt by paying interest and re-borrowing.

But to monetize the debt, the government simply prints a batch of money, in this case $1 billion, and it pays off the bond holders with the new money it has printed.

In other words, the existence of a debt the government can not seem to manage, is used as an excuse to print up more money, and the new money which has no backing of any kind and is really a kind of legal counterfeit, is used to replace the debt.

Sought After

If you are lonely, the fault is your own. The cure is to be self-administered, not by intruding upon others, but by developing yourself to the place where you are always sought after by others.

It's a Small Thing, but . . .

Recently, a mother with an 11-year-old daughter in one of our local schools telephoned in some distress. Her daughter, it turned out, was in some difficulty in the local government institution of learning.

What had happened, of course, was basically a little thing. Yet it pointed to something far larger and more important and the mother was keen enough to recognize the implications.

This is not surprising. The mother has benefitted from having a fine education in private schools. A graduate of William and Mary College and a teacher in her own right, as well as being an artist, the mother had a sensitivity to and an awareness of what her daughter confronted.

First, the girl is doing well in school and struggling to maintain an A or B average. But an English assignment was given in which the student was required to prepare a thesis on some subject. The specifications were that the paper used must be a particular kind of lined paper of a precise size. Margins were to be exactly two inches. No sheet was to be used on both sides. All work was to be done in ink. If an error was made in the transcription, the entire page must be discarded and the work done over.

The subject (either assigned or selected by the student) had to do with cartoons in various publications which featured children and their problems. To illustrate the story, the young girl would be permitted to trace over the cartoons which had appeared elsewhere. Pasting in the cartoon would not be permitted. Neither would a free-hand drawing, regardless of the skill or talent of the student.

It seems the young lady went to work to prepare her thesis and had the misfortune of running out of paper (after fourteen pages) when it was impossible to obtain additional supplies of the prescribed stock. But the mother, sensitive to her daughter's problems, had some paper that was a quarter of an inch different in size from the "official" paper. This she offered to her daughter.

But the daughter, striving to conform fully to the wishes of the teacher who had made the assignment, was certain that the substitute wouldn't do. She was helpless to finish the assignment within the prescribed time on the prescribed paper in the prescribed manner.

And the mother, after telephoning the teacher and discussing the subject, became greatly upset. "Why," she inquired of us on the telephone, "is such emphasis placed on full conformity? Why can't the child make free-hand drawings?"

As an artist, she knew that free-hand drawing was far more desirable as a means of disclosing talent. Further, it is a much more effective way of expression by means of which individuality can be developed than simply tracing over the work done by another.

And suddenly the mother saw the whole thing. The purpose of the lesson and all the tight rules governing it, was not to enlighten the girl but to turn her into a parrot in which everything she did could not possibly be too competitive with others of her class. She must show no originality nor any variation in the presentation. In fact, she was told by the teacher that "free-hand drawing is going out of style."

The mother wanted to know why other paper couldn't be used or why the reverse side of a few pages couldn't be used. "We do things in a much better way now," she was informed. "Our standards are much higher."

But are they? And what of the waste of time and the waste of paper? What of the extravagance that the student learns through such insistence on the trivia and such avoidance of the real meat of learning?

What of the people who have difficulty as it is in paying for all the frills and extras demanded by the government schools? Is the kind of paper more important to the educational process than the content of the thought that is employed?

It's a small thing. But the mother put it into context. "This is socialism," she observed. "It is the downgrading of the individual and individuality in an effort to make all these children look and act the same way."

Precisely the case. And we were overjoyed that at least one mother saw the implications of this kind of government-dominated instruction. Not only did she see it, but she had the courage to telephone to express her dissatisfaction so that others, too, could learn that this trend toward conformity was not passing unnoticed in the pressure and bustle of modern times.

These Days

Violence in the Tolerance Capital

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Ever since I can remember, New York City has been the tolerance capital of America.

Go back a long ways to the pre-World War I era. In those days you couldn't be a radical with impunity in Slippery Rock or Peoria. But a Max Eastman could found a magazine called The Masses below Fourteenth Street in Manhattan, and a coterie could gather around him with nobody to say them nay. An I.W.W. leader like one-eyed Big Bill Haywood could not hope for middle-class entertainment in Boise, but he was welcome at Mabel Dodge's salon on lower Fifth Avenue. Poets like Edna Millay might feel out of place in Maine, but not in Greenwich Village.

Or take a later period, the nineteen twenties. If a youngster just out of college chose to stay at home in the place of his birth, he was expected to become a businessman, join the country club, and never miss a meeting of Rotary. But in New York he could follow H. L. Mencken and bait the booboisie, or write poetry without punctuation or capitals and still be regarded as a genius if it sounded good.

New York, of course, was a multiracial community. There could be cracks about the Jews, the Italians and the Irish, but it was hard to keep a good man down no matter what his race. A Bernard Baruch, in New York, could become a millionaire; a Jimmy Walker could become mayor; an Al Smith could be nominated for President.

SUPPORT

The Negro got the benefit of New York's particular brand of tolerance when he began moving north. He couldn't necessarily find a good place to live, but a Claude McKay could write a book like "Home to Harlem" and get it published and favorably reviewed, a Charles Gilpin could get a star part in an O'Neill play, a Walter White could organize for the betterment of his race and find plenty of local support for his efforts. Branch Rickey couldn't have put Jackie Robinson on first base when he was still the general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, but he did do just that when he switched to become the boss of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

I am not so stupid as to imagine that life is easy for a lot of people in New York. But as long as the city remains the tolerance capital of America, things can improve there. And what New York accepts is generally exported elsewhere. For better or worse, New York is the style capital and the communications capital of the nation.

Well, what about the things that seem to be menacing the tolerance capital today. I am sure that the recent spate of Negro violence on late subway trains has no connection with a plot of any kind. But stall-ins and other demonstrations of the sort, not criminal in themselves, rip the fabric of mutual forebearance. In this murky atmosphere hoodlumism is encouraged. And what becomes then of the tolerant city?

TWO CITIES

At this point we might go to the eastern shore of Maryland for a lesson. The two Maryland eastern shore towns of Salisbury and Cambridge have similar population mixes and similar traditions. In Salisbury, in the spring of 1961, a group of Negroes appealed to the white ministers of the town for help with problems of discrimination. The ministers went to the restaurant owners — and within a year they had managed to get the restaurants desegregated.

In Cambridge, just thirty miles from Salisbury, Negroes, following a far more intransigent leadership, gave the restaurant owners one week in which to stand and deliver. The result could have been predicted. Restaurant owners got their backs up, and there is still not much progress toward desegregation in Cambridge. Meanwhile there has been plenty of violence.

True enough, violence won for Lenin in Russia. But where has it ever won in a nation that is eighty per cent contented? The way to win in America is to exploit what tolerance you have. This has been done over and over again in New York, and it will be a shame if the old insight that brought the Jews out of the East Side ghetto and the Irish to city hall is lost.

"We Got Set Up Just in Time! Here Comes the Work Traffic!"

The Local Scene

Love of Mankind

By RUFUS L. PORTER

The three words above form Webster's definition of philanthropy. In other words, a philanthropist is one who loves his fellow men. James Henry Leigh Hunt's "Abou Ben Adhem" was one of those. "And, lo! Ben Adhem's name led all the rest" in Hunt's list of those whom God had blessed.

The late Wharton Allen, El Paso County cattleman, was another whose name should be near the top of the list in the good Lord's day-book. According to news reports, he left a million to be equally divided amongst four local charitable and social institutions. Besides this he left sizable donations to other organizations and institutions in other places, including colleges.

There are many who believe he should never had been allowed to accumulate so much in the first place, "with so many hungry people in the country" (or in the world), whichever point of view they choose to subscribe to.

But if it weren't for the few rich people we would all be poor, indeed, as poor as the poorest — all, that is, but our overseers, the politicians, rulers, leaders, commissars — whatever name they go by. And they could, by no stretch of the imagination, be called philanthropists, although they pose as such by spending other people's money to "make war on poverty."

If men are basically evil, how come there are philanthropists in our world?

It happens that I worked for Wharton Allen, once upon a time. And instead of earning my envy because he was so rich and I was so poor, he earned my admiration and respect, which I continued to feel for him until his death — and beyond, even though I hadn't seen him for years.

It was in the spring of 1922. I had just lost my shirt in "The Poor Man's Gold Mine" (for me it proved to be just that) on Magnolia Hill in Boulder County. We, my wife, baby daughter and myself, had returned to Colorado Springs and were thinking of Cripple Creek as our next stop, which it was, after a delightful pastoral interlude.

"Dad" Newcombe, a family friend, who was foreman for Allen on his Black Forest ranch, had gotten pretty well smashed up in a runaway accident. "Dad" asked me to come out and take over for him while he recuperated. Since I was highly recommended by a man he trusted, Allen took me on, and we moved into a brand new house on the ranch and I took over the duties of foreman — a working foreman, that is. I was at that time no stranger to ranch work, having punched cows several times in several states.

My work must have been satisfactory for I hadn't been there three weeks before Wharton told me he liked my work and wanted me to stay on steady, not as foreman after Dad recovered, but as a hand, but at the same foreman's wages.

I loved every acre of that ranch, it was a beauty in every manner of speaking. And I loved every part of the work—but I had gold fever, so I said I'd think about staying, which I did until my two months were up. I have often thought I might have been much better off if I had stayed on the ranch. We drove out there years later and it was as beautiful as ever. But I seem to recall that Allen had sold it. I'm not too sure about this.

Wharton Allen was a member of a wealthy Philadelphia family. His father had another ranch somewhere in El Paso County. Allen was ranching on the "home place" in Black Forest. He was a fair and a just man. There couldn't have been more than a year or two's difference in our ages, one way or the other.

I remember a cousin of Wharton's, fresh out of college, named Warren —I can't remember if this was his first or his last name — who was also from a well-to-do family. Warren took to the West like a duck takes to water, and he loved ranch life. He must have, he was killed a few years later in a haying accident in Wyoming.

Warren's greatest ambition was to be recognized as a "westerner" and he aped everything I did and said. He came out one morning and said, "Well, I think I can qualify as a westerner now, I can blow my nose on the ground the same as you do."

Another thing that may have put me in good with Allen was "the incident of the horse barn." He had just finished a new barn for his excellent horses and his prize-winning bulls. The barn had cost him thousands of dollars and was built from a plan he had found in a ranch magazine. But in two weeks after he moved his stock into the new building his horses walked around like an old man crippled up with arthritis and he was wondering out loud what was ailing them.

Now, I don't remember where I picked up the knowledge, perhaps in high school agronomy class, perhaps in my ramblings, but I knew that you can't stall your horses on concrete floors without crippling them. I told Allen that I knew the cure for his nags. At first neither he nor the foreman believed that I knew what I was talking about.

"But," said Allen, "the plans called for cement floors and I studied animal husbandry and I never heard that cement was bad for horses."

I argued my point so earnestly that in the end he gave in and allowed me to put a double plank floor in the horse stalls, and in a week his horses were as frisky as colts. Horses lock their joints and sleep standing up and the combination of steel shoes and smooth, hard concrete will cripple them beyond recovery in a short time. Next to plank floors, in a barn dirt is best.

So much for the ranch, which we left when the two months were up. As for Wharton Allen, he needs no defense from the likes of me. Read the papers and draw your own conclusions; you can't possibly, or fairly, conclude that he wasn't a good man.

The American Way

We Do Not Live in Freedom

By HARRY BROWNE

We do not live in a free country.

Despite the platitudes uttered in high school civics classes — despite the political double-talk — despite the attempts many people are making to "preserve" freedom — despite all of these things, we do not live in a free country.

On May 25, 1964, the Supreme Court of the United States decreed that Prince Edward County, Virginia, must open a "public school" system. The judges in Washington determined that the people of Prince Edward County must be forced to pay taxes for the type of school system the judges happen to favor.

If this is freedom, then please define the word for me.

NO CHOICE

What kind of freedom is it when people of a community are forced by a far-off tribunal in Washington to run their lives in ways not in accordance with their own wishes?

This is not the first such example of the slavery that exists in America today. If you devote your life to producing a product or service that will help people, you are immediately told by the bureaucratic army under what circumstances you may exchange the fruits of your labor for someone else's product. You are told what price you may charge, what wages you can pay, who you can hire, who you can sell to, who you can't sell to, and who you can't hire. And if you survive this totalitarian strait-jacket, and somehow manage to have anything left to show for your labor, then the government forcibly takes away a good percentage of what's left.

Is this freedom?

Is it freedom when no citizen can own gold? When no company can have the incentive to rise above a politically-established limit? When over 30 per cent of all that we produce is confiscated by government — to be spent on projects that were usually rejected by the people in the free market?

What is freedom? It is the right of every individual to control his own property, his own labor, and his own mind —without infringing upon the same freedom of others.

No, we are a far cry from freedom in America. And it is about time we recognized that fact. We are no longer engaged in a battle to "preserve" freedom; instead we are now fighting to obtain it.

The first step is to get the Liberty Amendment approved. That will return to the taxpayers half of the money now spent in Washington. This will get us started on the road to freedom.

Freedom is not "utopian." It is practical, moral and economically sound. It is the only workable method of organizing any human society.

It is about time that we get to work and bring it about in America.

To The Point

Are Citizens Sheep?

By RUSSELL KIRK

The anonymity of the great modern city withers the sense of personal responsibility. As many editorial writers have pointed out, recently — in both New York and Chicago — crowds of passive citizens have witnessed murder, rape, and attacks on policemen without bothering to intervene. We seem, indeed, to have become a nation of sheep, but the Lord is not our shepherd.

Anyone who wanders much about our cities will observe case upon case of this public cowardice. In Manhattan, some months ago, this columnist was passing through the subway labyrinth at Times Square. I had trouble reaching the stairs, for a crowd of perhaps two hundred people blocked the way. They were silently observing a struggle, on the brink of the subway tracks, between a big old man who had seized a young man — a stalwart-looking fellow, about twenty-five — by the wrists. The old man was muttering, "I'm going to put you under the train — under the train." He seemed to mean it.

But the bewildered young man was not defending himself. Captive, he called to the mob of mildly interested spectators, "Say, somebody call a cop! Won't somebody call a cop?" No one stirred: apparently it was too much fun waiting to see if the victim would be thrust under the train.

Though I could not force my way through the dispassionate crowd of neutralists, I ran up the stairs and found a white policeman, who in turn instructed a colored rookie policeman named Joe to look into the affair. I hope —though I'm not sure — that Joe arrived in the nick of time.

To my mind, the most significant aspect of this fracas was the passivity of the victim himself. Though apparently physically capable of at least kicking his assailant in the shins, he was so unaccustomed to the notion of self-defense that he lingered like a lamb for the slaughter. The mystical religious injunction, "Resist not evil," scarcely was intended to deliver the world into the hands of the criminal and the mad, while their victims hope that a policeman may stroll along.

The biggest and most efficient police-force cannot possibly protect spineless folk who will not defend themselves or their neighbors. Once upon a time, city populations managed with no regular police force at all. Until, in the fourth decade of the nineteenth century, Sir Robert Peel established the London "Bobbies," the inhabitants of that great metropolis did most of their own thief-catching and thug-repelling. Some would have preferred to keep matters that way: for as a member of Parliament said in protest against Peel's proposed constabulary, he thought it better to have a dozen throats slit annually in Whitechapel than to infringe, potentially, upon Englishmen's liberties.

Since then we have come a long way. Despite all modern devices to aid the police, the public's timidity and the sentimental treatment of criminals have combined to make our city streets — even by daylight, sometimes — a kind of happy hunting ground for the violent. And there will be no reform until people cooperate in facing down the lawbreaker.

In one Brooklyn neighborhood, Crown Heights, some 65,000 Hasidic Jews have been terrorized in recent weeks by colored gangs. Tiring of nonresistance, this Jewish community has formed a force of 100 strong young men, called the Maccabees of the Community, who patrol the area and are ready to fight in defense of their people. And as the New York police authorities comment, there is nothing illegal about organizing for self-defense.

Do only close knit religious communities like the Hasidic Jews have intelligence and sense of common cause sufficient to resist the violent, instead of screaming for a distant policeman? The American citizen has not only the right to strike a blow for his own survival, but the urgent duty of assisting his fellows — at whatever risk to his hide.

In the Name of 'the People'

By GEORGE BOARDMAN

No matter how ridiculous or oppressive or indecent, laws enacted by politicians and directives contrived by their cohorts may be said to have been promulgated in the name of the people, in the public interest and indirectly by the people themselves through their duly elected and appointed representatives.

Your sanction of mob rule by your participation in an election provides the authority required for the care and feeding of majority bossism, whether your side or your candidates win or lose.

Once these simple facts are recognized, there is no longer any logical reason for confusion in your mind. You either sanction the system of rulership by majority rule or you believe human beings possess the unalienable right to stand on their own two feet in freedom.

Unfortunately, a good many people who think they believe in their right to be free human beings, try to tie up the freedom philosophy with the rulership of the mob. "Let's get together and exhibit the strength of our power by proving that the majority of people want to be free so that we may force all to abide by the philosophy of freedom."

I'm sure I'd remember if any week went by during which no one asked how we could all get together to force others to be free. I can't count the number of times I've heard this statement, "Well, I agree with you and if the majority of the people want their freedom, I'll certainly go along with the idea." Obviously, the person who makes such a statement has made up his or her mind to live under mob rule, regardless of the will of the mob.

And this reminds me of the legislation backed by those two great freedom-loving senators from Arizona, jointly, to steal some 1.1 billion tax dollars for government-owned and controlled power and water and the fact that in joining in this totally socialistic project, on the record, these two politicians specifically back my contentions.

Yes, in the name of the enslaved people, the word freedom is taking quite a beating and you'll notice repeated reference to the word as various aspirants to varying degrees of rulership ask you to listen to what they have to say about issues which will affect your freedom. Since your freedom is long gone, except intellectually, it would be more logical if the politicians warned you about issues which will have a bearing upon the weight of your slavery.

But, there are others kicking freedom around, too, for instance, there is the freedom network which will present a freedom spectacular "for the benefit of the NAACP." I didn't write that idiotic statement, I only copied it, and anybody who believes that freedom may be allocated for the benefit of any group at the expense of even one other person is not quite bright.

This is a good time to reaffirm what I have stated before; that the so-called civil rights bill is misnamed and that the right of association may not be dissipated, except by power hungry politicians, and that the right of association will continue to exist regardless of what those same power hungry politicians do or may not do. You may do as you please about it but no bureaucrat will ever force me to employ an auburn haired, brown eyed, female person who professes an addiction to the socialist-communist-fascist cause or a cute red headed, green eyed lovely because experience has taught me that a red headed, green eyed lovely would be routed out of my office by my wonderful wife.

As far as I am concerned, those same power hungry politicians I mentioned before can pass any kind of legislation their power hungry hearts and minds desire and I will continue to associate with these human beings I find to be most compatible and I will continue to refuse to associate with politicians, their cohorts and others whose company, ideas and ideals I find to be incompatible — whether such legislation is passed in the name of the people, the public interest or what ever and you can depend upon that.

Good luck and good health to you, in Freedom.

The Government IS In Business

By PAUL L. POIROT

IF YOU, as a property owner, have occasion to negotiate with an electric company concerning a right-of-way across your lands for its transmission lines, you may want to take some lessons in bargaining from the nation's largest landlord, the federal government.

For many years, the government has exercised considerable control over the activities and operations of the privately-owned electric companies. And out of its interest in flood control, conservation, national defense, and miscellaneous matters, it has developed an enormous power - generating and distribution network in various parts, if not quite all, of the United States. Obviously, any proposed extension of lines or services by any privately-owned electric company might turn out to be "in conflict with the power marketing program of the United States." So, that is one of the dangers guarded against in new regulations issued March 23, 1963, by the Departments of Interior and Agriculture relative to rights-of - way for power transmission lines across federally - owned lands: No right - of - way is to be granted for electric facilities which the Secretaries of Interior and Agriculture may deem to be in conflict with the power marketing program of the United States.

Furthermore, applicants for rights - of - way for electric lines across public lands must agree to allow the federal government to use any of what the government decides may be "excess" capacity of the line. And the government would have the right, at its expense, to increase the line's capacity and to use such increase for its own purposes, thus jeopardizing any reserve for future expansion that the line's owner might have intended.

Naturally, the privately - owned electric companies are perturbed about the stringency of these new regulations. Even the most casual witness of the extension of the "TVA Yardstick" since the first inch was granted in 1933 must realize by now that the "power marketing program of the United States" has no natural limits, that it is designed to encompass every square foot and every citizen of the country, and that those in charge must deem to be in conflict with their program any and every privately - owned electric generating and distributing facility in the land. The federal government already has pulled tight the noose of its monopoly over the electric power industry in the TVA territory. When and where its next foreclosure will come is debatable, but the definite trend of the times and mood of the electorate is in that direction. The timing is strictly a matter of political expediency.

REA in Practice

Slightly more than a quarter of a century ago, when the Rural Electrification Administration was under debate in Congress, Representative Sam Rayburn of Texas sought to reassure the nations' private electric power industry: "May I say to the gentlemen that we are not in this Bill intending to compete with anybody. By this Bill we hope to bring electricity to the people who do not now have it. This Bill was not written on the theory that we were going to punish somebody or parallel their line or enter into competition with them."

Contrary to Mr. Rayburn's solemn and sincere assurances of 1936, the growing REA giant is reaching out to serve not only rural customers but industrial and suburban markets as well. Five out of six new REA co-op customers, in fact, are now commercial, industrial, or nonfarm consumers. And tax funds are being loaned through REA at less than cost to finance lumber plants, housing projects, and, in one case, snow-machines for a ski resort.

The recent regulations governing rights-of-way across federal lands mark perhaps the most extreme, abusive, and arrogant grab for power yet attempted in a major movement toward socialization of the electric power industry of the United States. This latest step cannot be described as a new break in the principles of private ownership, voluntary exchange, or limited government — those principles were long since fractured and abandoned in this particular struggle; what we witness now is more like a final lunge or death blow to competitive private enterprise.

How Limit Government When Principles Are Abandoned?

One of the proper functions of a government of limited powers is to protect the rights of citizens to life and property—as long as each lives and uses his property peacefully and without injury to others — and to constrain those who might attempt such injury. But when the government itself acquires the ownership of land or any other property, who then is to constrain the government in its injurious use of such property? The principle of limited government is thus abandoned whenever the government claims title to land. It is abandoned whenever the government takes the first step toward building a hydroelectric dam or power-generating plant or transmission line. Indeed, it is abandoned whenever the government undertakes to set the rates and otherwise regulate the operations of privately-owned electric companies. So, there are no fundamental libertarian principles left upon which one can then make a firm stand when the federal power agency takes its next logical step — such as posing impossible conditions for right - of - way across federal lands. Why should anyone be particularly concerned at that late stage?

This is no gross exaggeration or wild prediction of something that might possibly happen in the United States many years hence. The monopolization of the electric power industry under government ownership and control already has happened, in our time, before our very eyes, just as it has happened before in other lines of business activity, and as it will continue to happen if citizens of the United States are willing to abandon the basic principles of private ownership and control of property, voluntary exchange, personal responsibility, and limited government.

Nor is "the power marketing program of the United States" by any means limited to an interest in the production and transmission of electrical energy. Federal and state taxation, regulation, and control of the production, importation, pricing, transmission, and marketing of oil and gas is a burdensome fact familiar to all. And few persons have even bothered to doubt the propriety of what amounts to a government monopoly of the budding business in atomic energy. There are indeed many facets to " the power marketing program of the United States"; and there are numerous examples in other fields to show the nature of the trend.

Communications and Transport

Everyone knows that it is now illegal to undertake any operation in conflict with "the communications program of the United States." The government monopoly of the postal service is complete. Government control of the airwaves is absolute; there is no opportunity for a strictly private and independent system of radio or television communication. The so - called private telephone companies are franchised, regulated, and controlled. Most magazines could be put out of business tomorrow at the whim of the Postmaster General. And even the newspapers can be shut down whenever the government chooses to look the other way as union leaders flaunt the special privileges inherent in labor legislation.

A similar pattern toward government monopoly is emerging in "the transportation program of the United States." It has been a long series of steps from the first post roads as provided in the Constitution to the expanding, federally subsidized and controlled system of interstate highways. And federal interest in mass urban transportation is the latest major development. Meanwhile, we have a heavily subsidized merchant marine for overseas transportation, as well as a government program for rivers and harbors and canals and other inland water transport. The railroads have paid dearly and still pay for those early land grants along their rights-of-way through the underdeveloped government lands of a struggling young nation. Passenger and freight rates are strictly regulated; proposed mergers or abandonment of lines carefully scrutinized and often forbidden; railroad properties and services mercilessly taxed by every unit of government from the federal on down to the level of the local school district wages and hours and working rules featherbedded under a blanket of governmental sanction —all of which comes very close to the same thing as absolute ownership and control by government. As for air transport, the only part of the business not directly operated or heavily subsidized by government is strictly regulated as to routes, rates, records, reports, romance, and routine. Little wonder that Americans find it so difficult to imagine a transportation service to the moon unless the government provides it!

Another clear example of government monopoly is in "the monetary and credit program of the United States." The Constitutional authorization "to coin money" and "regulate the value thereof" has been twisted through central banking, fractional reserves, and deficit financing into an engine of inflation that persistently grinds away the value of private savings, builds minor cyclical business fluctuations into major disastrous depressions, and threatens to destroy the credit of the United States among the nations of the world. Money and credit, instead of serving as a lubricant to facilitate trade, have been monopolized by the government into a combination brake-accelerator that regulates and controls and frustrates the will of consumers and the activities of businessmen who would try to serve them.

Agriculture and Labor

Less clear, perhaps, in its monopoly characteristics but at an advanced stage, nonetheless, is "the agricultural production and marketing program of the United States." Individuals are no longer free to produce and sell such crops as tobacco, cotton, peanuts, or wheat in competition with the government program. Many wheat growers are to be commended for their courageous stand in the recent wheat referendum. But there is no way to reconcile the principles of freedom with a political process whereby the past producers of a given commodity, and no others among the taxpayers of a nation, are privileged to vote whether to accept heavier subsidies and more stringent control or smaller subsidies and less control. Freedom in agriculture means no subsidy and no government control of agricultural production and marketing, no matter how many persons vote otherwise.

"The labor marketing program of the United States" is not yet a tight monopoly; some persons are still free to work for anyone offering a job opportunity at a wage rate mutually acceptable. But in this area, too, the trend is unmistakable. Under government legislated and sanctioned compulsory unionism, one job classification after another is withdrawn from the free market, held for union members only, withheld from other individuals qualified to perform the work satisfactorily. And more and more of the types of employment still open to nonunion workers are being covered by minimum wage laws which block out those least productive workers incapable of earning the legal minimum wage. Government unemployment compensation and social security programs and tax policies make idleness more attractive, often more remunerative, than creative effort. And all of these government subsidized and enforced fringe benefit items cut from the wage, leaving less and less of the total open to free bargaining between employer and employee.

Freedom in Jeopardy

While the foregoing examples by no means exhausted the list of goods and services that have been brought partially or wholly under government monopoly in the United States, they should suffice to illustrate to anyone concerned that economic freedom is seriously threatened; that one advance toward the welfare state leads inexorably to the next step; that the proponents of government regulation and control of creative activities are in deadly earnest; and that once allowed in principle, there is no logical stopping of compulsory intervention until the government owns and controls not only all the property in a given industry but also all the people dependent on that industry as investors, employees, and consumers.

Go Back to Basic Principles

Let us return now to the immediate problem of the private electric companies concerning rights-of-way across government-owned lands. The companies may contend, of course, that the government ought to be a kind and benevolent landlord, willing to grant rights-of-way with no strings or conditions attached.

But suppose an electric company were seeking a right-of-way for a power line across the lands of one of its competitors in the electric business—as the builders of coal pipelines are now seeking rights - of - way across properties owned by the railroads, which also want to transport coal. Under such conditions, is the property owner expected to grant right-of-way to a competitor strictly on the latter's own terms? This, of course, is not a reasonable expectation.

As electric power companies well know, property owners along a proposed right - of - way can be most demanding in their terms and conditions. And occasionally, such opposition may be confronted with government power of eminent domain to force acceptance of "fair and reasonable" terms. However, the government's power of eminent domain is of no avail when that self-same government is the demanding owner of the property at issue. So it is that the electric companies, licensed, chartered, regulated, and controlled by the government, are strictly at the mercy of the government when seeking right-of-way across government - owned land.

To argue their case logically before the court of public opinion the electric companies and other businessmen similiarly threatened by governmental encroachment will be obliged to hark back to the fundamentals and basic principles of personal freedom of choice and full responsibility for the consequences; private ownership and control of property; voluntary exchange of all goods and services in open competition; and government limited in scope and power to the defense and protection of the life and property of every citizen equally against unprovoked acts of violence, fraud, predation, with a system of courts to decide matters in dispute and armed forces powerful enough to enforce all such decisions and to collect taxes sufficient to maintain the government in its proper functions.

By these basic principles, it is possible to explain logically why neither power companies nor any other creative activities should be chartered or licensed by the government in the first place, but left instead to competitive private enterprise; why the government has no business whatever in the generation or transmission of electricity or as producer or provider of any other goods or services that have a market price, leaving all this to competitive private enterprise; why the government should neither own nor control any parcel of land or any other scarce goods and resources beyond the necessary tools and instruments of war, leaving such ownership instead to the highest bidder and thus to the most capable management that can be found by the true and tested methods of open competition; why the government should grant neither favor nor exemption to any individual group. Then and only then can life and property be reasonably secure in the possession of those who have earned and paid for their rights-of-way.

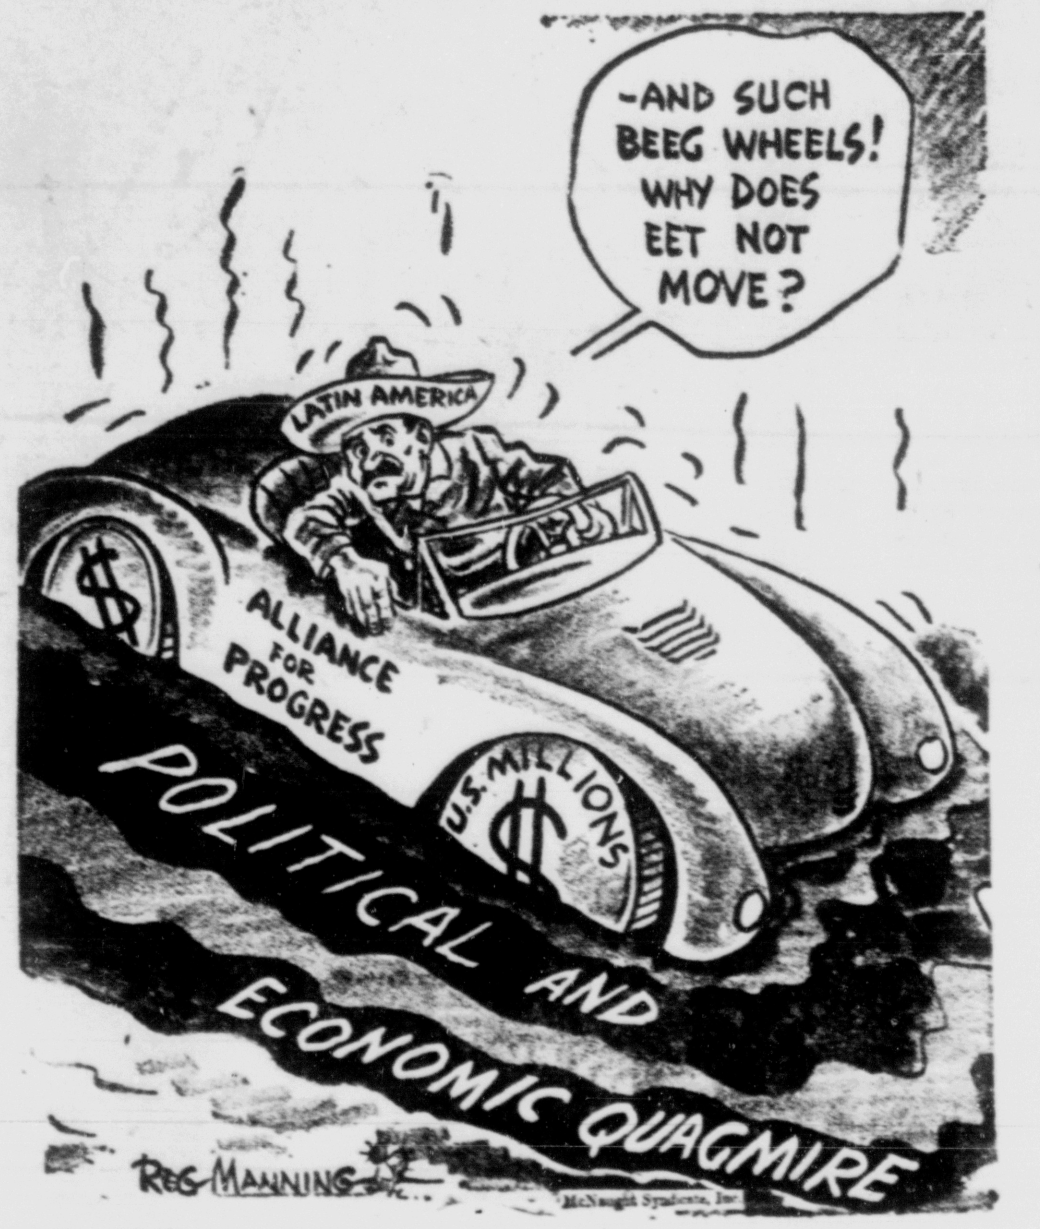
Such A Modern Car—



It's Up To You

By HOWARD E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.

The 87th Congress raised the pay of federal employes after the administration promised to reduce the number of Federal workers so that the total cost would not be greater than it had been. The promise proved false.

Congressman Earl Wilson of Indiana is Chairman of the subcommittee to which the departments and bureaus appeal for additional funds. He has testified that after the pay raise "every department was back asking for more money to take care of raises for old employes as well as salaries for new employes."

The number of employes was not reduced and in fact, was sharply increased. Within a year after the pay rise the number of employes in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration rose 39.7 per cent. In the Agriculture Department the increase was 10 per cent; in Health, Education, and Welfare 15.5 per cent; in Interior 16.6 per cent; in Labor 21.9 per cent; Treasury 10.4 per cent; General Services Administration 19.2 per cent; Housing and Home Finance Agency 11.6 per cent; and in United States Information Administration 12.5 per cent.

In less than a year after Secretary Luther Hodges of the Department of Commerce said he could get along with 10 per cent fewer employes, the number of workers in his department was up 15.5 per cent. Over-all, according to Congressman Wilson, the number of federal employes has increased about 50,000 during the past year, and the Administration is planning to add another 36,500 in the near future.

Maybe the only way to control the budget would be to tie the pay of congressmen and senators to it. Let their pay rise in surplus years and decline in deficit years.

A recent poll indicates strong grassroots opposition to some of Washington's policies:

1. Should government spending be cut to compensate for any tax reduction? Yes, 93.3 per cent, no, 6.7 per cent.

2. Do you favor stronger action, such as an effective blockade, to counter the threat of communist subversion and military build up in Cuba? Yes, 94.8 per cent; no, 5.2 per cent.

3. Do you believe the foreign aid program should be drastically reduced? Yes, 88.5 per cent; no, 11.5 per cent.

4. Do you believe the time has come to reduce the national debt? If so, should it be done by (a) increasing taxes? Yes, 9.7 per cent, no, 90.3 per cent. Or (b) by reducing non - defense spending? Yes, 96.3 per cent; no, 3.7 per cent.

Who Can We Trust?

(California Feature Service)

Probably the most important reason why many Americans welcomed the signing of the nuclear test ban treaty was because of the fear of fallout. Ever since Hiroshima we have been conditioned to horrendous promises of monstrous mutations to come and widespread ill effects now, even from the debris of peacetime atmospheric test explosions. Although some noted physicists dissented, the doomsayers have spoken the more persuasively.

Comes now Dr. Crawford Sams, research physician at the University of California's Institute of Engineering, to assure us that there has been a great deal of exaggeration about such dangers. Doctor Sams was one of the experts sent to Hiroshima following the A - bombing of that city in World War II. What he has to say of his mission is even more disturbing than what we've been told about the threat of fallout.

Dr. Sams reported at a meeting of the American Society for Industrial Security the other day that he and other experts on that Japanese research trip had been instructed to exaggerate the devastation of the first A - bomb in order to build up a psychological deterrent to war.

He said the story was circulated that the city was destroyed and that more than 100,000 had been killed. Actually, he admitted, only about 47,000 had died even six months after the explosion, and only about 18 per cent of those from the effects of radiation. He estimated that 80 per cent of the Hiroshima victims could have been saved with proper medical care.

Although Dr. Sams compounded the Hiroshima lie by saying he felt it was justifiable, it is a shocking thing to contemplate. It has all the earmarks of a 1984 brainwashing. If scientists are to be ordered to tell untruths in order to expedite governmental policy who can we, the people, believe? Must we reconcile ourselves to the possibility that the moral fallout of the nuclear age is more dangerous than the chemical?

SPOTLIGHT FOR THE NATION

National Issues, Stampede to Disaster

By DR. JOHN A. HOWARD

(President, Rockford College)

What is a stampede? It is a rapid mass movement. It is engaged in thoughtlessly. It is caused by fright. It is dangerous, and it is exceedingly difficult to stop. The press toward Federal subsidy of education, in my judgment, meets precisely each of these qualifications.

We are being rushed into ill-advised remedies for education that violate the nature and neutralize the vitality of the educational system which has ably served this country's needs under circumstances the most various.

If our nation permits our educational system to be circumscribed and distorted by Federal involvement as the agricultural system has been, the destructive consequences will be seen in every aspect of our lives.

The qualities of the educational system—strength or weakness, wisdom or folly, diversity of uniformity—will inevitably be reflected in the society some years later. As we may undermine the effectiveness of our schools and colleges, we reduce the potential of our society and alter its character. It is my belief that we as a Nation are unwittingly placing in jeopardy our entire system of education.

As the federal government becomes the largest single source of funds for college after college, and there are a number already in this category, the institutions become beholden to the Government. This is not a chimera born of a doctrinaire distrust of government.

Recently I wrote to the president of a well-known university inviting him to join a group of college presidents in making known the arguments against the ever-growing Federal subsidies of education. He replied that, although he was in full agreement with our position that subsidies are not in the long-range best interests of the colleges or the country, his own university was now so dependent upon funds from Washington he could not take a public stand on this issue he served.

Think of that answer, if you will. The mere flow of money has silenced the opposition. The loss of political freedom on the part of those who depend on government for their income was the reason for refusing suffrage to the residents of the District of Columbia.

Project the Federal aid programs ahead, not too many years the way things are going, to the time when all colleges and universities will receive the largest part of their budgets from the U. S. Treasury. It is likely that all faculty members in that day will feel some obligation to vote for whichever party promises the largest amount of additional educational subsidies, regardless of other partisan differences. Political freedom is sacrificed by those who depend upon government resources. Can we afford to forfeit the political freedom of the whole academic community?

There is no need to depend upon conjecture for ascertaining the effects of Federal funds in education. There is now a manual of almost 800 pages devoted to a brief description of each of the educational programs in which the U. S. Government is already engaged. College executives may subscribe to a periodical solely devoted to the presentation of new Federal programs, and new interpretations of changes in old programs. The scope of current Federal programs offers plenty of opportunity for observation.

Early this year an issue of "Nations Business" contained an article describing the inconsistencies, the distortions and the general confusion which characterize the aggregate of government educational programs. The source of that article is John F. Morse, who not long ago completed a 9-month study for the Higher Education Sub-committee of the House of Representatives. I urge you to read Mr. Morse's statement.

The inescapable conclusion seems to be that we must have a Washington super-authority to make plans for the academic segment of our society and to coordinate as well as pay for education through a central bureaucracy. This will be the disaster referred to in the title.

The predominant characteristic of American higher education has been its diversity. Each collegiate institution has its own particular nature, totally distinguishable from every other. The degree to which spiritual concerns affect the student during his undergraduate years ranges on different campuses from predominance to insignificance. Similarly, the political impact upon the student varies from pure conservatism at one college to extreme liberalism at other institutions. College curricula differ to a much greater extent than is generally recognized. I am convinced that it is a convergence of diversely educated people in in each of the different enterprises of our society that has been the one condition which more than any other has made ours a dynamic, successful and altruistic Nation.

What fosters this diversity? Principally it is the autonomy of the various institutions. As a college conceives or receives a new idea that seems promising, it has to sell it only to its own board of control. However, each new educational undertaking of the Federal Government provides a single board of control and thus diversity of American education is curtailed.

I do not know of one college executive who would not quickly agree that programs now supported on our campuses by Federal funds could be carried on at least as effectively by a comparable amount of funds from other sources and, in many, many cases could be conducted with more imagination, more flexibility, less bother and at a much lower cost. Why then, do not the same executives oppose Federal aid? The answer is money.

Money is a good servant but legitimate justification for Federal aid is that education lacks money and the Federal Government is far more prodigal with its funds than are other sources. If only the proponents of Federal aid would come right out and state this fact, we could face the issue head on and measure what the easy money buys against what we must sacrifice in order to obtain it from Washington.

It is undeniable that our increasingly technical society requires an increasingly skilled and knowledgeable population and, to accomplish this end, a larger part of gross national product must be invested in education.

The issue is whether this urgent objective is to be achieved through congressional action—which forces people to pay more for education and at the same time diminished the diversity and circumscribes the creativity of the separate colleges—or whether the Nation can be persuaded to provide the necessary funds through traditional sources and thus preserve the freedom and the strength of American education.

I cannot believe that my colleagues in college administration would so readily forfeit the full potential of their respective institutions if they fully realized what was at stake. As difficult as their financial future may appear to them it cannot be the reason for abandoning integrity. The course of educational statesmanship is to protect the greatest creative potential and the greatest institutional individuality. That course does not lie via the Federal Treasury.

The college executives and the officers of the Government who may have a part through their silent or vocal support of Federal subsidy will have to answer to history for the consequences of their work.

May this Nation recognize in time the stake it has in keeping education decentralized and unfederalized. If these views make sense to you, I urge you to do everything in your power to defeat additional Federal subsidies of education and also to increase the flow of funds to higher education through other channels. The accomplishment of both objectives is essential to the strength and vitality of this Nation.

Three-Year-Old Finds Train Has Left

ELDORA, Iowa (AP)—Three-year-old David Larson, visiting here from California, climbed aboard a frieght train while it was stopped near grandma's house here and rode it six miles to Steamboat Rock, where he got off.

Everything came out all right but David gave an anxious time to his mother, Mrs. Russell Larson of Lancaster, Calif., and Hardin County Sheriff Lowell McCormick before he was found.

Park Pool, Lake Swimming Area Open Thursday

The Monument Valley Park pool and the swimming area at Prospect Lake will open for the season Thursday, it was announced by Stuart Richter, director of the City Parks and Reration Department.

He said both city-operated facilities will then operate continuously through Labor Day.

The daily schedule at the Prospect Lake beach will be from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The pool at Monument Valley Park will operate from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., every day except Sunday. Each Sunday the hours will be from 1 to 5:30 p.m. The pool is a heated, filtered and a modern facility.

Richter said a small charge will be made at the two swimming areas to assist in maintenance costs.

All participants at the Prospect Lake beach will have to pay 10 cents for any portion of a full day.

At the Monument Valley Park pool, Richter said, the daily fee is 25 cents for children under 12 years of age and 50 cents for anyone 12 yers and older.

Russ Volkman will manage the Prospect Lake facility while Robert Greathouse will again be in charge at the Monument Valley Park Pool.

At both places, Richter said, "there will be qualified lifeguards on duty at all times for the safety and convenience of the public.

Washingtons' Lady Bird Is America's Busy Bee

By BRUCE BIOSSAT

WASHINGTON (NEA) —Mrs. Claudia (Lady Bird) Johnson is living the life of First Lady as if she held an "office" that belongs to all the people.

Only a few short months into her new role, she stands out as perhaps the only real challenger in this century for the "activist" crown long worn by the late Eleanor Roosevelt.

With great energy, with what she herself likes to call "willingness of the heart," Lady Bird faces up to the clamorous demands of White House public life and yet insistently manages to hold aside a part of each day for her heavily burdened husband and her two daughters, Lynda and Luci.

She finds the time to lunch with Lynda, to press Luci on her school work ("Do you have a quiz?"), to listen closely through long evenings as the President discusses with his experts such things as the anti-poverty fight.

But she is determined to be continuously responsive to the call of the countless Americans who want their "first family" out where they can see them, lending support to all manners of endeavors. Follow her as she goes through a week's activites:

We can start on a rainy spring morning in Cleveland, Ohio, where she travels for a swift series of events.

First she visits a "Golden Age Center," a public housing development for the elderly. In bright coral coat and beige hat, she strolls into a cheerful room to greet a group of oldsters celebrating all the birthdays of the past three months.

In one corner an old fellow scrapes out "Yellow Rose of Texas" on a scratchy violin. Holding a yellow rose corsage, Mrs. J. smiles appreciatively.

The "Golden Age Choir," gray haired ladies from 60 to 78, rise and chrip: "When the red, red robin 2 comes bob-bob-bobbin' along, along . . ."

Mrs. Johns applauds with vigor, holding her arms well in front of her. On her feet, she says: "It's such fun to share this birthday with you all". Before she leaves the room, she carefully places on a table a packet of cards bearing her signature and an etching of the White House.

She stops in to chat with two women in one of the small but neat apartments. To the one whose place it is, she hands the red carnations given her earlier at the airport.

As tears come to the woman's eyes, Lady Bird says: "I hope you live a long and happy time."

By midday, the First Lady is on the rostrum at a bustling YWCA convention, her coral coat shed, fresh now in a bright print dress of many colors, smiling as always, an orchid corsage at her shoulder. A lei of orchids brings the flower figure of the day to four.

With the packed assembly, she recites a prayer, sings a hymn, listens attentively to other speakers, then dons her white-rimmed glasses to read a short, prepared speech.

As is her habit, she reads with slow precision, gesturing lightly now and then, sticking tightly to the text, lowering her voice to muted levels for occasional emphasis. The accent: pure Texas.

One hour and one more black limousine ride later, she stands tired but still smiling in a receiving line at an airport motel, as hundreds of "women doers," activists in many fields, file past her.

Among them is a good mixture of those who "do" in politics. Lady Bird unabashedly accepts the fact her role is not just public but also political. Her guest lists for many functions reflect the reality that any president is a political personage.

Lady Bird's Cleveland day is so crowded that one woman reporter forgets to describe how she is dressed. Says another: "Don't worry. You filed it a month ago, from Huntsville, Ala. The outfit was the same as on a previous venture.

Let's take another day, in the Capital. It's a big one, to be capped with a "state dinner" for a visiting head of state, young King Hussein of Jordan.

Following custom, Lady Bird is up at 8, breakfasting with the President off a tray in their bedroom. No time for leisurely reading this morning, though her bedside table ("It never looks neat," says a friend) is cluttered with books and magazines.

With her social secretary, Bess Abell, she runs down the evening guest list, one at a time. Mentally, once in a while aloud, she walks through all she must do from the moment of greeting the kind.

Then she carefully inspects each of the gifts she and President will give the king and his family. This, says Mrs. Abell, is "so she will feel entirely comfortable with what they are giving."

A bit later Mrs. Johnson has a talk with Lynda, telling her about the king and his younger brother. The First Lady wants her daughter to mingle with the distinguished visitors in the evening. Notes Mrs. Abell: "Mrs. Johnson wants to make the girls want to go off and hide some- to have them feel they might where."

As the morning wears on, Mrs. Abell's telephone rings from time to time and she jots notes to Lady Bird, her voice suggesting unruffled authority, discusses future plans.

At noon, garbed in total yellow. Mrs. Johnson makes a brief appearance in the Agricultural Department's sunny interior court to dedicate a "Home and Food Fair."

Again, she makes a brief speech, describing herself as "purchasing agent for my family," and opens the fair by expertly clanging a farmer's triangular dinner gong.

After that she moves about to see the exhibits, tossing out lively questions along the way. With a quick "I enjoyed it," she pops into her limousine and dashes for Capitol Hill for a luncheon with Senate ladies.

The afternoon demands final dinner preparations—and getting herself ready.

She could have her hair stylist come to the White House, but instead she goes to the beauty parlor like any other housewife.

For dinner Lady Bird is once more in her favored yellow, wearing a chiffon dress with a beaded bodice. The after-dinner entertainment features Dave Brubeck's avante-garde jazz. He shatters a little of the East Room's complacency with tunes like "Take Five" and "Shim-wah."

The guests, sitting on gold-backed chairs in dim blue light, eat it up. Mrs. Johnson is first to rush to Brubeck to shake his hand when the concert ends.

A round of dancing follows in the Blue Room. Suddenly the party is over, the king of Jordan is gone, and Lady Bird is at the door warmly bidding the guests goodnight. She drifts quietly upstairs.

On another day, a bit past the tear hour, the East Room bustles with an assortment of guests, many of them North Carolinian

In a moment she is at the lectern accepting for the White House some pretty color prints of paintings made in 1585-86 on North Carolina's Roanoke Island by one John White, early colonial governor.

The guests soon form in a reception line to meet her. Some she greets as old friends, with lingering laughing chats or warm embraces. Coffee and cakes in the resplendent State Dinning Room give her a chance to mingle more casually.

Thus it is for Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, the lively 51-year-old lady from Texas, week after week after week.

She goes to New York to honor Eleanor Roosevelt or open a refurbished museum (as she soon will), to Wilkes Barre, Pa., to observe grinding poverty first hand.

To her door at the White House comes the nation: hundreds of congressmen and their wives in a long round of receptions, "first families" of one state or another, groups speaking for charities, for cancer, heart disease or muscular dystrophy drives, members of the country's 4-H clubs, distinguished guests like Carl Sandburg and photographer Edward Steichen, who take tea with Lady Bird in the historic Lincoln Room of the White House.

Through all this she fights for time for herself and her family. She loves serious theater and catches it when she can. In New York she may sneak away for just an hour or so in a famed art gallery.

In the White House, she may feel from time to time that she spends a huge part of her week in the great public rooms in smiling confrontation with Americans of all walks.

Yet she still can manage to worry whether the President is working too hard. And she never forgets to be a mother.

One night she discovered daughter Luci doing her algebra in, of all places, the historic second floor Treaty Room. As a mother she welcomed the effort. As First Lady she felt that study setting inappropriate. She shooed Luci back to her bedroom.

That's how you play it when you hold unofficial office from the people.

Wasson High School News

By CAROL JENSEN

The last few weeks have been busy ones for Wasson graduating seniors and the other classes, also. Seniors were excused from classes Wednesday, May 27. Since the senior trip to Denver on the 28th lasted until midnight, classes were not required of seniors Friday, May 29, unless the teachers so wished it. Then, the evening of the 29th, convocation for the class of 1964 was held at 7 p.m. in the Wasson Auditorium. During this assemblage, the scholarships and awards were announced and distributed to the recepient seniors. Sixty-two Wasson seniors received scholarships, tuitions, waivers of tuition, honors at entrance, grants, or awards for academic standing and achievement. A reception for seniors and their parents was held immediately after the ceremony in the cafeteria. Future graduates were required to wear their caps and gowns for the ceremony, but no specific seats were assigned, as they were for the commencement Wednesday night.

Previously scheduled for 7 p.m. in the Wasson Stadium, commencement was changed to 8 p.m. Wednesday in the City Auditorium because of the rainy weather. Seniors were required to be present at 7:30 p.m. to form the processional lines. A rehearsal was held Tuesday in the Wasson Auditorium to arrange seating and to discuss the ceremony. When the students received their certificates of graduation, they walked to the stage and proceeded across as their names are called. After receiving their certificates, the graduated seniors moved their cap tassel from over the left eye to the right eye, signifying their graduation.

Nineteen new teachers will be added to give Wasson a total close to 130 faculty members. Three of the present instructors have received college scholarships and four have resigned to accept other positions. Two part-time counselors will lend assistance to the present guidance system.

MOTORING MEMENTO

WHITESBORO, Tex. (AP) — Retired mail carrier Sam Watson has driven a lot of cars and had a lot of license plates in his 51 years of driving, but he still has the original license tag he got for his first car, a 1913 Model-T Ford Roadster.

The plate is made of hard black leather with aluminum numerals 6 inches high. Owner of one of the first cars in Whitesboro, the 82-year-old Watson wore out eight cars during the 47 years he carried mail before retiring in 1954. He rode a motorcycle before buying his first CAR.

CAPITOL STUFF

By TED LEWIS

WASHINGTON — The presidential primary system has become the most fouled - up method ever invented to provide a stage for the rise or fall of White House hopefuls.

It was conceived by a bunch of do - gooders, fed up with "boss rule" early in this century. The idea was that each state's registered party voters should select their choice for national standard bearer and the party's national nominating convention would simply affirm that decision.

The system never worked out in that Utopian manner. Each state set its own queer rules, and the system became so loused up that most states abandoned the idea. Now only 15 states plus the District of Columbia have such primaries.

But perish the thought that such state primaries are any longer on the way out. The dramatic values in this year's primaries, unfortunately, were so superb that the primary system has obtained new life.

There was, to start with, the March 10 "first - in - the -nation" GOP primary in New Hampshire. It fired a Lodge boomlet when the amabassador in Saigon won on a write-in basis over Gov. Rockefeller and Barry Goldwater. But more important, it gave New Hampshire millions of dollars in free advertising, a big tourism advantage to any state.

Then there was the dramatic Rockefeller victory in Oregon May 24 over both Lodge and Goldwater. Imagine Oregon ever voting to dispense with such publicity!

And finally, there was the climactic California clash between Rocky and Barry in which both sides spent millions trying to win.

Perhaps equally significant in retrospect as far as the political importance of this year's primaries was concerned were the Democratic primaries in Wisconsin, Indiana and Maryland.

THE PRIMARIES PRODUCE POLITICAL DRAMA

But for the candidacy of Alabama's segregationist Gov. George Wallace in those three states, the full extent of Northern dissatisfaction with the Administration's civil rights bill would never have been clear.

It is this kind of political drama produced by the state primaries which almost insures their retention for many years to come.

Yet party leaders are constantly urging that they be dispensed with. Some favor a return to the old "boss" system of state party conventions. Others want a nationwide party primary, which would dispense with the national nominating convention and allow registered voters to make their choice of a party standard bearer.

And the candidates themselves have never been happy about these primary contests. It costs millions to engage in just a selected few. In addition, it takes too much time shaking hands and making speeches, and the candidate's regular job has to suffer.

RECALLING MUD-SLINGING OF '60 CAMPAIGN

The latter argument seems to make considerable sense, but it is amazing how low blows in a primary battle are soon forgotten.

In the West Virginia Democratic primary of 1960 between John F. Kennedy and Sen. Hubert Humphrey, the latter was even accused of trying to avoid World War II military service. Humphrey countered with a charge that JFK's boys had a "little black bag" full of bills to buy voters.

All was soon forgiven. Humphrey and Kennedy embraced. It always happens that way.

What is basically wrong with the present primary system, of course, is that seldom do party members in any primary state have an opportunity for a wide-open choice. In California, for example, registered Republicans had to choose only between Rockefeller and Goldwater. No one else was on the ballot.

Illinois, GOP voters similarly had only two primary choices —Goldwater or Margaret Chase Smith. In Indiana it was either Barry or Harold E. Stassen. Only in Oregon was there a requirement that any Republican seriously mentioned for the presidency must be on the ballot.

WHEN DELEGATIONS CAN DISREGARD PRIMARIES

In some states, such as Wisconsin in particular, Democrats can vote in a Republican primary and vice versa, which makes the presidential choice pretty meaningless.

As the situation now stands, the impact of primaries on a national party convention is also far less than the system was designed to make. As only 15 states hold primaries, only about 40 per cent of each party's convention delegates come with "orders" from the voters.

And even the the "orders" differ. In such states as Illinois and New Jersey the preference primary is not binding. This means that the state delegation can disregard the primary result and go for any other candidate it has a mind to. Other state primary laws require a delegation "pledged" to support the choice of the voters to do so only for one or two ballots.

All this confusion adds to convention excitement, of course. It suggests that the present primary system is somewhat of a phony. It certainly means that it makes it impossible for a candidate to claim a solid bloc of a certain number of delegates for more than one ballot. About the only value of the system, therefore, is to make a national convention a big popular spectacle, even if it does not come up with the rank - and - file's choice as reflected in state primaries.

Speaker Says CU Could Become Academic Leader

BOULDER (AP) — The University of Colorado has the means and the setting to attain national distinction in the humanities and the arts, the 127th graduating class was told Friday.

Dr. Gordon N. Ray, president of the Guggenheim Foundation, said the university "has had distinguished humanists on its faculty," has a well-respected writers conference and its Shakespeare Festival "ranks with the best."

He said the university "can hardly compete with wealthier universities in the more expensive divisions of the sciences, though it must, of course, maintain adequate offerings on these subjects."

Nearly 2,000 students received diplomas. Dr. Joseph R. Smiley, university president, presented these to the two outstanding seniors, Carlton R. Stoiber of Boulder and Christie Kirkpatrick of Englewood, and to doctoral winners.

Other diplomas were distributed in separate ceremonies at the 12 schools and colleges of the university.

An honorary doctor of laws degree was conferred on James Terry Duce of San Francisco, a 1916 Colorado graduate.

Ray defined the humanities as "mankind's achievement in literature, art, music, history, philosophy and religion. They are our inheritance from the past in the areas most important to us as human beings."

He said of the $615 million provided by the federal government last year for basic research, 98 per cent went to the sciences and 2 per cent to the social sciences, leaving none for the humanities.

Lad Killed by Driving Bride

Mrs. Emily Black, the driver, told officers she didn't see the child until he was in front of the car.

Mrs. Black was driving her father-in-law's car to his home. Her husband was driving behind her in another car.

CHROME FIRE HYDRANT

City Secretary D. T. Kent thought he had a witty way of getting rid of the salesman a few months ago when he quipped "we'll buy a fire hydrant if you have a chrome plated one."

Residents may now put on the dog to neighboring towns. They have a brilliant chrome fire plug next to the city hall.

American Man's Life Span Month Shorter

By The Colorado Chiropractic Society

Not according to a professor of medicine at the University of Chicago Medical Center. Dr. Walter L. Palmer reported that, even though more babies and young people are being kept alive, the age at which men die is acutally lower than it was in 1860.

Then, the average man, at 50 years of age, could look forward to 15½ more years of living. But, Dr. Palmer reports, 100 years later, the average man of 50 had only 15 years and five months — one month less — before death.

Another authority, Maurice Lowry, doctor of chiropractic in Kirksville, Mo. adds food to the theory that germ killing to achieve helath is not enough. The body must be able to maintain its own health, keep its own organs and glands clean of foreign bodies and to reconstruct worn out or damaged parts through manufacture and replacement of cells.

Citing the major causes of death among people over 55, Dr. Lowry writes that "Many of these conditions respond readily to chiropractic care. For this reason chiropractic patients live longer."

The breakdown of only one vital organ can result in death, and this breakdown can occur just as surely through a cut in nerve supply as when the blood flow is sufficiently impeded.

This is why so many case histories on file all over the nation show what appear, at first glance, to be astounding recoveries by people who were thought doomed to die. But these cases are astounding only to those who are not familiar with the doctor of chiropractic and his scientific methods — nerve supply was restored through correction of spinal misalignment. One or more vertebra was out of line, nerves were pinched, and somewhere in the body something ceased to function properly because the brain had lost effective contact with it. After spinal correction, the body was able not only to fight off the disease — it could again benefit from normal function of all glands and organs which are needed to maintain health.

The mystery of life still baffles science, but basic needs of the body are known. One of them is a healthy, free - flowing nerve system of nerves. So often the patient's nervous system is checked last, when it should have been first, Dr. Lowry says.

Army Hospital Has Pamphlets To Give Away

Pamphlets on heart disease and other cardio-vascular diseases are available at the Ft. Carson Hospital from the El Paso County Heart Unit. The local organization has supplied the hospital with 1000 pamphlets for parents and their families who are concerned with the diseases.

The booklets answer common questions about heart disease such as who is affected, what can be done to keep them under control and what can be done to prevent them.

Titles are available for men, women, parents and children. They are furnished by the El Paso County Heart Unit through the Colorado and American Heart Association.

Canon City Grads Hear Rev. Satter

Although conformity can be the easiest way, it is not always the best way, the Rev. Willliam Satter of Trinity Lutheran Church told the graduating seniors of Canon City High School at their baccalaureate service Sunday night.

Rev. Satter said conformity can be the best way to loose the Christian faith. He added, "Do not be conformed to the world but be transformed by that which is good. Have a basis for your faith."

The speaker noted that faith must be deeper than fellowship, and it must be deeper than Sunday morning. His address was titled: "Your Future, Christian."

The services were sponsored by the Ministerial Alliance of Canon City. President of the group, the Rev. Lynn Butcher of the First United Presbyterian Church, presided and delivered the invocation.

Participating were the Rev. Claude Kinsley, of the First Methodist Church, who gave the Scriptural reading, the Rev. R. T. Jarrell of the First Church of the Nazarene, who offered the prayer, and the Rev. Gilbert B. Moore of the First Baptist Church who spoke the benediction.

Music was provided by the high school ensemble, directed by Conrad Miller, and the high school choir, directed by Don Packard.

2,000 Miles Cable Installed By Carson Unit

Ft. Carson's 267th Signal Company installed 2,000 miles of cable and 115 miles of field wire during Desert Strike as part of Calonia force opposing the 5th Infantry Division (Mech.)

The 267th was attached to the 73rd Signal of the VIII Airborne Corps from Fort Bragg. The XVIII Corps formed part of the armored might of Task Force Mojave opposing the Red Devils of Task Force Phoenix.

During the maneuver the 267th installed 750 miles of Spiral 4 cable 2½ times. This totals approximately 2,000 miles according to 1st Sgt. Vernon Howard. An additional 115 miles of field wire was strung by the 209 men of the 267th commanded by 1st Lt. Gary L. Hatfield.

The unit was in the thick of the maneuver and was surrounded for three days by armor. Men of the signal company were credited with knocking out an APC and infantry men from Nezona.

Stationed in Amboy, Calif., most of the unit will not return to Carson until they police-up all the wire in Calonia. One platoon returned Thursday, but will leave again for Camp McCoy to help train summer reservists and guardsman.
